8,000 GERMAN PLANES READY FOR USE IN WAR

Power of Nazis' Air Arm Described.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 29.—In all around performance, quality, and quantity of her military aircraft Germany today leads the world. And her potential productive capacity probably is greater than any other two European nations combined. Her one difficulty is to find funds to keep her factories running.

This estimate of the German aircraft position is not based on first hand observation. The German air ministry refused to allow me to visit its factories because at this time all the plants are retooling and preparing for production of a series of newer types of warplanes with improved speeds, ranges, and destructive capacities.

My information here was obtained from the trained military observers who represent a number of other nations in the German capital.

Equipped With Finest Instruments.

They told me these facts:

Germany has an air force of at least 8,000 first line airplanes capable of engaging in war tomorrow.

These airplanes are fitted with the finest and most complete flying, navigating, and fighting instruments—including bombsights and machine gun sights of exceptional quality. There is no truth to reports that German military airplanes are turned out without essential instruments.

German military and civil radio is superior to any in the world. Particularly are their military direction finding radio facilities ahead of those of any other nation.

Germany has twenty huge aircraft factories, each as large or larger than the Douglas Aircraft company at Santa Monica, Cal., the largest single factory in America. Each of these twenty factories employs from 8,000 to 12,000 men, most of whom live in model towns within a few hundred yards of the flying fields and production buildings.

Fields Ready for Instant Use.

At this time Germany has more than 600 military airdromes, most of which are camouflaged and prepared for immediate use in war time by large air fleets. In addition there are between 175 and 200 civilian airports in Germany that would be available in wartime.

There is a shortage of trained and seasoned military airmen in Germany. There are not enough seasoned pilots to man all the first line airplanes that can be mustered. But there are 10,000 German youths in training for the air arm at this time and by next year Germany's pilot shortage will have ceased to exist.

The technical rating given quality and workmanship on the German aircraft is the highest possible. The use of substitute materials, instead of being a detriment, has become a virtue in German airplanes because of the calculated uses of lighter metals wherever possible.

No Sacrifice of Strength.

There has been no sacrifice of strength in the German military airplanes, as is frequently reported abroad. Their pursuit craft are built to a factor of 12—this is an engineering value which means that the machines virtually cannot be pulled apart in the air by maneuvers.

None of the German factories has been working at more than one shift of eight hours a day during the months of 1939, but the average production has been above 500 airplanes each month. Approximately one-third of this production has been first-line air craft.

Guilty of Wishful Thinking.

"It's just wishful thinking to underestimate the quality and quantity of the German air forces," said an American expert who recently visited the Messerschmidt, Heinkel, Junkers, and Daimler-Benz factories. "We should not fool ourselves, as the general public in England and France is being fooled, by believing statements that tend to belittle the enormously strong position of German aviation.

"On the strength of what I have seen I sincerely believe that Nazi leaders have understated rather than [illegible] the strength of their air [illegible]. I believe that today the Nazis [illegible] in complete air domination [illegible] Europe."

CHARGES AIRED AGAINST GUFFEY IN MEXICAN OIL

Bridges Asks Senate Investigation.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 29.—Senator H. Styles Bridges [R., N. H.], informed the senate today that he will ask a senate investigation of the seizure of American oil properties in Mexico.

At the same time Bridges provoked a controversy over senate rules when he inferred, by reading newspaper dispatches and an extract from the criminal code, that Senator Joseph F. Guffey [D., Pa.] had violated the Logan act in Mexican oil deals with Germany. Guffey is an ardent New Dealer.

The Logan act provides for a fine up to $5,000 and imprisonment up to three years for engaging in correspondence or discussion with a foreign government in relation to any dispute with the United States. The United States has a controversy with Mexico over the confiscated American oil properties.

McKellar Rushes to Defense.

Senator Kenneth McKellar [D., Tenn.] made a point of order against Senator Bridges' speech, charging Bridges had violated the senate rule against impugning the character of a senator. Senator Robert M. La Follette [Radical, Wis.], a New Dealer who was in the chair, overruled McKellar's point of order. McKellar appealed from the ruling of the chair and Senator William E. Borah [R., Idaho] rose to defend La Follette's ruling.

When it appeared that the senate was about to vote, Guffey rose and said he hoped the ruling of the chair would be sustained. He said he did not object to the reading of the newspaper dispatches and hoped that Senator Bridges would bring out any facts that he had. McKellar thereupon withdrew his appeal from the ruling of the chair and a senate vote was averted.

Sidesteps Possible Rebuke.

Guffey's colleagues regarded his move as an astute one. They said he thereby averted a vote that would have sustained La Follette's ruling and would have been construed as a rebuke for Guffey.

The newspaper dispatches read by Senator Bridges were written by the Washington correspondent of a St. Louis newspaper. The dispatches said that W. R. Davis, a free lance oil operator, arranged two Mexican oil barter deals with Germany involving 18 million dollars.

The Mexican government received machinery in return for the oil from confiscated American properties in Mexico, according to the dispatches, one of which said Davis had "the aid and advice of powerful figures in the Washington scene, including Senator Guffey, a member of the senate foreign relations committee."

C. I. O. Chief Involved.

"John L. Lewis, head of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, also interested himself in the Davis deals to the extent of assuring organized labor in Mexico that Davis had the resources to move Mexican oil in the face of a seemingly worldwide blockade by British and American companies, it has been learned from authoritative sources.

"Guffey said yesterday that his only interest in Davis was through Walter A. Jones, oil operator and politician of Pittsburgh, who was a heavy contributor to the Roosevelt campaign funds in 1932 and 1936. Jones is still associated with Davis in the Mexican oil deals, he said last night.

"Guffey, himself formerly an oil operator, accompanied Jones on a hurried trip to Mexico City in 1937, nearly a year before expropriation of American and British oil properties. The Pennsylvania senator introduced Jones, then engaged in laying the groundwork for deals that Davis later carried out, to various Mexican officials."

Branded Lies by Guffey.

Guffey, replying to Senator Bridges' speech, said the press stories were "100 per cent false" and "a malicious, character destroying lie." He said he was sure that the writer of the dispatches "received other compensation for sending that story out than that which he receives from his regular employer."

House Passes Bill to End Red Peril in Army

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 29.—Over the protests of a small group of radical members, the house today passed and sent to the senate a bill aimed at the activities of communist propagandists in the army and navy.

A motion to recommit the bill, which in effect would have killed it, was offered by Representative Vito Marcantonio, American Labor party member from New York City, who was elected with communist party support. It was overwhelmingly defeated, 273 to 48. The bill then was passed by acclamation.

The measure was sought by military and naval officials who complained that subversive influences are threatening to undermine the loyalty of the rank and file of the nation's fighting forces.

Penalty Up to Ten Years.

The bill makes it unlawful to advise, counsel, urge, or solicit any member of the army, navy, or coast guard to disobey the laws or regulations governing them. The distribution of pamphlets or other writings containing such counsel also is forbidden.

Maximum penalties of ten years in prison and a fine of $10,000 are provided upon conviction under these provisions.

"This is one of the most important bills ever presented in this body," Representative Sam Hobbs [D., Ala.] told members. "The happiness of our citizenry depends upon an adequate national defense and there can be no adequate national defense so long as there exists a threat to the loyalty of our fighting men."

Deportation Law Strengthened.

The bill also strengthens the deportation laws, adding four grounds for sending aliens back to their homelands. These new grounds for deportation are knowingly aiding illegal entry into the United States; espionage; conviction under a state narcotic law, and unlawful possession of machine guns and other weapons.

Another section of the measure provides for the fingerprinting of all aliens seeking admission to the United States. This guards against entry under a false name, provides a check upon the criminal record of the entrant, and insures a means of identification thereafter, it was explained.

JOKING GIRLS KEEPS HIM YOUTHFUL AT 80, SAYS GOV. DICKINSON

Lansing, Mich., July 29 [Special].—Gov. Luren D. Dickinson said today that telling funny stories to girls in the executive office helps him stay young at the age of 80.

The governor, who recently denounced the June governors' conference in New York because of what he termed high life and drinking that imperiled women, said of his jokes:

"I like to spring them any time. Boys do not take them just as girls do. Girls show embarrassment and maybe get mad easier than boys, but they get over it quick and seem to come back for more."

YOU CAN'T CALL MARIE THE RUNT OF QUINTS NOW

CALLANDER, Ont., July 29 (AP).—They've always referred to Marie as the runt of the Dionne quintuplets, but no longer can it be said. She stepped on the scales at an official weighing today and registered 48½ pounds—a half pound heavier than Yvonne, who thus becomes the tiniest of the famous sisters.

Marie owes her elevation from the lightweight class, paradoxically enough, to a reducing campaign. Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, who ordered a dieting and exercise course for his little charges, found it was just as hard for Marie to lose weight as to gain it. The weights, with changes since the last weighing a month ago, follow:

	Pounds.	Loss.
Cecile	51¼	¾
Annette	51	1
Emilie	50½	1¼
Yvonne	48	1¾

Town Clock Out of Order Due to Pigeon Riders

London, O., July 29 (AP).—Madison county officials are considering offering a bounty to rifle marksmen to kill pigeons who "hitch-hike" rides on the hands of the courthouse clock, causing it to run fast or slow. Caretaker William Schetter says dozens of birds ride the big hands on all four faces, up and down, slowing or speeding the mechanism.

Soviet Elects a High Court; 29 of 75 on It Are Women

MOSCOW, July 29 (AP).—A new Supreme court of 75 members—29 of them women—was elected today by the supreme soviet [parliament] of the Russian Socialist Federation of Soviet Republics, which includes almost all of European Russia with a population of 105,000,000.

Explain Delay in Michigan Av. Bridge Repairs

Repair work on the Michigan avenue bridge, which will keep half the structure closed for the next month, was suspended yesterday and will not be resumed until tomorrow morning. City Engineer Loran D. Gayton explained that this was done to avoid paying skilled laborers double their usual scale for working Saturdays and Sundays.

The repairs now are going forward five days a week, twenty-four hours a day. Continuing them for seven days would cut a full week from the time the bridge will be tied up. But, Gayton added, it would increase the cost of the project from $75,000 to $85,000.

Longest Time Out of Service.

This is the longest period that the bridge, one of the busiest in the world, has been partly out of service in the twenty years since its opening. Only northbound motor trafic will use it as long as the work continues. Southbound trafic will be rerouted on Ontario street and Wabash avenue.

Full details of the repairs were made known for the first time yesterday. A new, hardened asphalt pavement, costing $42,000, is being laid in rectangular slabs.

This is the third type of pavement tried on the structure. Originally it had a wood block pavement but the blocks were slippery and popped out almost every time it rained. Then the city spent $76,555 for a rubber surface. This quickly wore out.

There frequently have been suggestions that the bridge be paved with concrete similar to the Outer drive bridge. Yesterday, Otto W. Hansen, chief engineer of bridge maintenance, told why this cannot be done.

Additional Weight Cited.

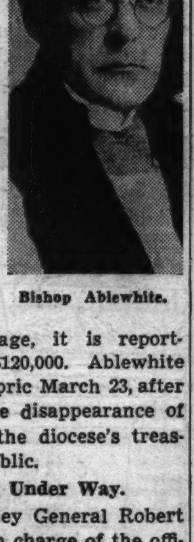
The present roadways and sidewalks and those being installed weigh approximately 204 tons a leaf, he said. Concrete pavement would add sixty-five tons to the deck [top level]. To keep the huge structure balanced 195 tons would have to be added to the counterweight.

This, Hansen explained, would be a total increase of 260 tons of dead weight on the bridge supports. He said there would be a danger that a leaf might topple backward when the bridge was raised.

A new center island of reinforced steel plates, high enough to discourage pedestrians from trying to cross in the middle, also is to be constructed on the bridge.

State Starts Inquiry After Bishop Quits

Marquette, Mich., July 29 [Special.]—Attorney General Thomas Read is conducting an investigation of the tangled financial affairs of the Episcopal diocese of northern Michigan.



Bishop Ablewhite.

Two communicants of the church already have filed a civil suit to recover $90,000 or more from the former bishop, the Rev. Hayward S. Ablewhite, and four trustees of the diocesan funds. The actual shortage, it is reported, may exceed $120,000. Ablewhite resigned his bishopric March 23, after first reports of the disappearance of large sums from the diocese's treasury were made public.

Inquiry Still Under Way.

Assistant Attorney General Robert A. Burns, who is in charge of the official investigation, tonight said he had not yet finished his inquiry. He has examined a great deal of documentary evidence, but has not studied a complete audit which, it is reported, will soon be turned over by the standing [executive] committee of the diocese, which includes all of the upper Michigan peninsula, he added.

"When I have finished," Burns said, "I shall confer with the county prosecutor. It is too early to say what the next step after that will be."

It was learned that Burns has taken cognizance of reports that much of the money was lost in speculation. It has been indicated that one or possibly more persons who had access to the church funds associated with stock promoters in Chicago and Detroit. There is one rumor that some of the diocesan money went to finance speed yachts on Lake Michigan and night clubs on Chicago's north side. The assistant attorney general is investigating the story of one Chicago witness that he repeatedly saw the bishop in conference with Chicago stock and grain traders.

Alleges Market Deals.

Investigators in Chicago have transmitted to Burns the story of John Rossman, formerly a chauffeur to a financial promoter. This promoter, according to Rossman, was a close friend of Bishop Ablewhite and interested him in market transactions.

The identity of the promoter is being withheld. Burns has been informed, however, that he was connected about 1935 with George Bulloch, a successful operator of a market forecasting system.

Bulloch soon found that his promoter friend was operating market pools of his own as a sideline and they parted company. The promoter then began operating independently in a loop office. The promoter maintained an expensive flat on the north side and a large power boat on the lake, Rossman said.

Says Bishop Was Client.

"One of his clients was Bishop Ablewhite," said Rossman. "I used to drive them around together. Eventually my boss went away. I don't know where. I have been told he is dead. But he went away from Chicago with a lot of money. 'You'd be surprised how much is in my pockets,' he told me as I took him to the train the last time I saw him.

"After he was gone I drove the bishop around. He was looking for my old boss. But he never got any trace of him."

The investigators have also told

PERIL NEW DEAL SPENDING PLAN IN BOTH HOUSES

Senate Cuts Debate; Delays Action.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 29.—President Roosevelt's spending bill, slashed from its original total of 3 billion 200 million dollars down to 1 billion 640 million dollars, had made little progress toward final disposition when the senate recessed at 7 p. m. today until 11 a. m. Monday, after an eight hour session.

Meanwhile the whole spending-lending program, which includes, in addition to the main bill, the 800 million dollar Wagner housing subsidy measure, appeared in danger of defeat in the house.

The house banking and currency committee lopped 850 million dollars from the major spending-lending bill and ordered it reported to the house. Predictions were made by Democratic members of the committee, however, that the measure would never be brought up for debate on the floor.

Predict Same on Housing Bill.

The same prediction was made by house members on the 800 million dollar housing bill, which will come up in the house next Tuesday on a motion to adopt a special rule for its consideration. The opposition leaders counted 160 Republicans and 60 Democrats—more than a majority of the house—opposed to the housing bill and said the impatience of members for congress to adjourn was swelling ranks of the bill's opponents daily.

The opposition will make its fight against the rule on Tuesday, and if the housing bill is shelved in that manner, the rules committee is expected to shelve the main spending-lending measure. In this event congress would adjourn immediately.

Week Regarded Disastrous.

The New Deal forces were routed as congress concluded a week which was regarded as one of the most disastrous in the administration's experience. The fact that the New Deal has lost all semblance of control in the house, which has a Democratic majority of ninety-one members, was demonstrated by the Democratic caucus forced by New Dealers last night in an effort to save the spending-lending program.

The New Deal leaders made no effort to bind the party by caucus action, since it was obvious the required two-thirds vote could not be obtained. A conference resolution pledging allegiance to the social and economic program of President Roosevelt was adopted only after its proponents had been forced to eliminate all reference to the two spending-lending proposals.

850 Millions Lopped Off.

Democratic members of the house banking and currency committee demonstrated their lack of allegiance to the President's social and economic program today when they voted with Republicans to slash the spending-lending bill by 850 million dollars.

The bill as originally proposed by the President totaled 3 billion 200 million dollars, but the total was reduced to 2 billion 800 million when its proponents eliminated 400 million dollars for loans to foreign governments in the face of overwhelming congressional opposition. The bill reported by the committee totaled 1 billion 950 million dollars. The committee, composed of fifteen Democrats and ten Republicans, voted 14 to 10 to report the bill.

Sweeping Cuts Made.

The committee reduced the authorization for roads, bridges, tunnels, etc., from $750,000,000 to $500,000,000. It cut the proposed authorization of $500,000,000 for the government purchase of equipment for lease to the railroads in half. It slashed the authorization for the rural electrification program from $500,000,000 to $350,000,000.

It lopped $200,000,000 off the proposed authorization of $600,000,000 for rural rehabilitation loans and assistance to tenants for the purchase of farms. It left unchanged the proposed increase of $100,000,000 in the lending authority of the Export-Import bank and the authorization of $350,000,000 for miscellaneous non-federal public works.

In the senate today Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley [D., Ky.] finally obtained a unanimous consent agreement to limit debate to 15 minutes and one speech for any senator on the bill and the same on any amendment before the senate recessed today. He was unable, however, to obtain an agreement for a final vote at 5 p. m. Monday or any other time.

Barkley said there seemed to be "an undercurrent in the senate which seems to be causing this bill to drift."

The senate voted on only two amendments to the bill today, and the administration forces were defeated both times.

First the senate adopted, by a vote of 45 to 24, an amendment by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney [D., Wyo.] to prevent the use of federal loans to finance enterprises in competition with private industry. It will apply only to the $350,000,000 authorization for nonfederal public works and will affect primarily the New Deal's public power program.

The amendment forbids the financing of a municipal power plant unless a reasonable offer to purchase the existing private facilities has been made and rejected and a finding to that effect has been made by the public works administrator after a public hearing.

Seeks to Relieve Fear.

Senator O'Mahoney said the amendment was required to relieve the fear on the part of private enterprise that the administration is projecting the country on the road to state socialism. Senator George W. Norris [Radical, Neb.] and other New Dealers opposed the amendment on the ground it would impede the progress of the public power program.

The New Dealers were rebuffed later when the senate adopted, by an overwhelming voice vote, an amendment by Senator Millard E. Tydings [D., Md.], which was aimed directly at the political alliance between the Roosevelt administration and John L. Lewis' Congress of Industrial Organizations. Lewis raised some $600,000 for the President reëlection campaign in 1936 from his United Mine Workers.

Strikes at Use of Dues.

The Tydings amendment makes it unlawful for any person to contribute to any candidate for federal office any funds paid as dues or by the members of any lodge, organization, or group unless such funds are collected with specific knowledge on the part of the members that they are to be used for political purposes.

Lewis uses the check-off system, under which dues and assessments are withheld from the pay envelopes of union members, for the raising of funds for both political and nonpolitical purposes.

Senator Tydings, who survived Mr. Roosevelt's purge campaign in 1938, is a friend of Vice President John N. Garner, a contender for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1940. The adoption of the Tydings amendment was a direct outgrowth of the personal attack on Mr. Garner which Mr. Lewis made before the house labor committee Thursday.

Road Sum Eliminated.

The senate thus far has eliminated 850 million dollars from the spending-lending bill, including the entire item of $500,000,000 for roads, bridges, tunnels, etc., and the entire item of $350,000,000 for the purchase and leasing of railroad equipment.

The senate banking and currency committee previously had lopped a total of $310,000,000 from the bill. Majority Leader Barkley eliminated $400,000,000—for foreign loans—from the President's original total of 3 billion, 200 million dollars when he introduced the bill.

The bill is threatened with further amputations and possible defeat in the senate on a final motion to recommit.

The turning of the tide against the spending-lending bill in the senate came Thursday, when Senator Walter F. George [D., Ga.] accused the New Dealers of deliberately and intentionally attempting to spend the country into state socialism, with full knowledge of the inevitable consequences of their acts. He denounced the bill as a legislative and moral fraud, since it proposed to spend without the appearance of further increasing the national debt, already uncomfortably close to the 45 billion dollar statutory limit.

Funds to Be Guaranteed.

The President's program proposes to spend outside the budget, without increasing the treasury deficits. Debentures to be sold by the Reconstruction Finance corporation, to finance the spending-lending programs, would be fully guaranteed by the federal government but not included in the treasury's public debt statement.

The most extraordinary aspect of the week's debate in the senate, from the viewpoint of the Republicans and the anti-Roosevelt Democrats, has been the failure of administration supporters to deny the implications and imputations of such opposition speeches as Senator George's.

Heavy Bridge Paving Precluded

Cross section of the mechanism of one leaf of the Michigan avenue bridge. Dotted outline of the leaf in raised position indicates how it pivots on trunnions. If concrete paving were used to surface the bridge, engineers say, the weight would be so great when leaf was raised that the trunnions might break and the leaf would fall back as indicated by broken line.

CORCORAN WHETS AX FOR CHIEF OF ANTI-TRUST DRIVE

Arnold Is Slated to Take Rap for Failures.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 29.—Thurman Wesley Arnold is on his way out as chief of the anti-trust division of the department of justice, because of the collapse of the administration's anti-trust campaign, it was reliably reported today.

Thurman Arnold.

Since the recent defeats the government has suffered in its anti-monopoly drive, Thomas G. Corcoran, White House adviser, who has become a power in the operations of the department of justice, is reported to have been sharpening his ax for Arnold.

Today it was said that Arnold will ask to be permitted to return to his classroom in the Yale university school of law at the end of the summer and thus be spared the ignominy of an outright discharge.

A Harvard-Yale Feud.

Corcoran has been stalking Arnold not only because of the poor showing in the anti-trust drive, but because he is a hangover appointee from the régime of Homer S. Cummings.

Cummings, a Yale man, offered the post upon the elevation of Robert H. Jackson to the post of solicitor general in March, 1938, to his old friend, Prof. Arnold of Yale, and a Yale man although he attended Harvard law school.

According to reports Corcoran, a Harvard man, has been doing all he can to promote Harvard men in the government and to wipe away the influence of Cummings in the department since he was assigned by the White House to advise Frank Murphy on how to run the department of justice.

Defeats Stack Up.

The anti-trust drive under Arnold culminated in a staggering series of defeats in the last three weeks. The first blow came at Chicago when indictments against 14 corporations and 43 individuals for an alleged milk monopoly were thrown out of court June 13.

The second came here Wednesday when proceedings against four medical associations and 21 individual doctors, charged with violation of the Sherman anti-trust act, also were dismissed. The third came the next day when the Circuit Court of Appeals set aside convictions obtained by Arnold's predecessor against oil companies and individuals for alleged violations of the Sherman act. All three decisions are being appealed.

A fourth case, built after months of investigation, has not been pressed by the department. It is that brought against movie producers for violating the anti-trust act in connection with the booking of films.

Son James a Defendant.

James Roosevelt, son of the President, left his father's employ as a White House secretary for that of Movie Producer Sam Goldwyn, one of those named in the anti-trust proceedings. Son James was also made a defendant.

Nothing has been done on the case for several months. The only development has been that James recently had his contract renewed and boosted to $50,000 a year by Goldwyn.

A fifth investigation into the housing industry is still under way. Investigators are looking into the operations of building contractors.

When Arnold was a Yale professor he was known because of his leftish books, which first attracted the New Deal to him. He is the author of "Symbols of Government" and "The Folklore of Capitalism"—both volumes of unorthodox teaching which made him a hero in the left wing of the New Deal.

FALL VICTIM, 79, DIES OF INJURY.

Joseph Miller, 79 years old, died in County hospital yesterday of injuries suffered in a fall. He lived at 810 Madison street.

4 Men Leave U-Boat with New Italian Escape Cone

SPEZIA, Italy, July 29 (AP).—Four men left an Italian submarine at a depth of more than 200 feet today in a trial test of the navy's new escape cone, naval authorities announced. They said the device is expected to enable dozens of men to escape from a distressed submarine within a few hours. A metal cone is attached to each end of the vessel. After a man in it is shot to the surface by water pressure, those below pull the cone back for the next occupant.

STYLES COMBINE 1890 FRIPPERIES AND 1929 DASH

Bustles, Costume Suits Decreed for Fall.

Whether the American woman wants it or not, this fall brings her a season of costume suits and—bustles.

The bustles are relatively small, but they are there, on suits, on cocktail dresses, on trailing lamés. So are peplums, lavish furs, braid, and old fashioned brooches. All will do their bit this fall to give the American woman the silhouette of 1890 and the exposed knees of 1929.

In fact, it is to be a season of Victorian elegance, according to the Style Creators of Chicago, which opens its annual fall market tomorrow. Some 20,000 buyers from all sections of the country are expected in Chicago for the various markets. The sales volume is expected to be the largest in a decade.

Fashion Shows Planned.

Various fashion shows are planned for the buyers. The Style Creators will give three lavish previews at the Stevens hotel, one Tuesday night, one Thursday night, and the third on Aug. 7.

In the fashions to be shown by the style creators, coats will be fitted, with a front or back fullness to the skirt. Dresses have hour glass waists and gored skirts, afternoon dresses veering especially to the Victorian. Black will be popular for afternoon wear, the creators predict, with blackberry, grape, wine, stone blue, and deep greens following.

For town wear it will be a tweed suit season with high fashion running to plaids and checks. The once well beloved shepherd's plaid also is due for a return.

Evening Gowns Trailing.

For cocktail wear, much black velvet and velveteen will be shown with lamé bodices or extravagant fur trimmings. Evening gowns will be full skirted and trailing, with basque bodices, bustles, ripple back peplums, and occasional panniers for such fabrics as moiré, bengaline, brocade, and slipper satin.

And hats? Profile brims, felt cartwheels, postilion caps, Scotch bonnets, and what the Chicago milliners describe as "upsweeping" berets.

The Merchandise Mart will introduce its fall fashions at breakfast clinics Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. The Chicago Wash Apparel association will have a style show Wednesday night in the Palmer House. The Style Exhibitors will have a preview in the Morrison hotel tomorrow night, Wednesday night, and Aug. 8. A Fashions of the Nation show will be presented in the Hotel Sherman tomorrow night and Wednesday night.

PASTORS' PARLEY AT MIDWAY WILL OPEN TOMORROW

The eighth annual sessions of the University of Chicago pastors' institute and educational conference will open tomorrow on the Midway. More than 400 pastors from all parts of the country are expected to register for lectures, seminars, and round table discussions which will continue for two weeks. The institute, sponsored jointly by the University of Chicago Divinity school, Chicago Theological seminary, and Disciples Divinity house, will feature studies of mental health, problems of the college campus, and questions of the far east. Dr. Charles C. Morrison, editor of the Christian Century, will be the institute dinner speaker tomorrow night.

Coast Guard Saves Three on Disabled Lake Sloop

Dr. Adrien Ver Brugghen, a staff physician at the Presbyterian hospital, and two other men were rescued by the coast guard yesterday after their racing sloop, the Orn, had become disabled in the lake about three miles northeast of Belmont harbor. A high wind caused the sloop's sails and rigging to collapse. Coast guardsmen under Chief Boatswain's Mate Gordon Disbury brought the boat and her occupants into harbor. Dr. Ver Brugghen lives at 2810 Thayer avenue, Evanston.

THREE CONCERTS TO END FOREST VESPERS TODAY

The last of a series of summer vesper concerts in the Cook county forest preserves will be presented this afternoon by three choral groups.

At 4 o'clock the Bethel male chorus, directed by Robert Bowlus, will sing in Caldwell woods on the northwest side. The other concerts will start an hour later. They will be presented by the Greater West Side Choral club, led by Miss Bessie Ryan, in Thatcher woods, in River Forest, and the Embury M. E. choir, conducted by Mrs. Bert Filson, in Dan Ryan woods on the southwest side.

The vespers are sponsored jointly by the Cook county forest preserve district and THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Details of the programs will be found in the metropolitan sections of today's SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

Lyons Entertains 500 G. O. P. Aids at Barbecue

More than 500 Republican leaders and workers of Lake county were guests yesterday of Richard J. Lyons at a golf party and beef barbecue at the Libertyville Country club. Mr. Lyons is a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor. He thanked his guests for their work for his candidacy for the United States senate last year when he was the Republican nominee.

HUNDREDS ENTER BRITISH CONTEST FOR MUSIC FETE

Girls All Want Chance to Sing in Chicago.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 29.—Hundreds of entries are pouring into the London Daily Sketch office from girls in widely scattered sections of the country who want to be Miss Britain at THE TRIBUNE'S Chicagoland Music Festival in Soldiers' field on Aug. 19.

From England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, from the highlands and lowlands, the depressed coal mining areas of the Rhondda valley and the swanky salons of London's Mayfair come the applications from young women seeking a chance to sing their way to fame on two continents.

Calls It Great Opportunity.

K. Ernest Irving, widely known British conductor who has consented to be one of the judges in the final audition to be held at Queens hall, London, on Aug. 3, said today:

"Every girl who has the necessary qualifications should certainly try for the title of Miss Britain. It is a great opportunity to sing before 100,000 people in the United States, including many experts who will be in the audience. It is the finest opportunity to start a career that has been offered as yet to a young girl. I would certainly advise every girl to try."

Other judges so far selected are T. C. Fairbairn, musical producer who, the Sketch says, "knows all about operatic production," and Sidney Carroll, editor of Sketch, who is well known in British music circles.

To Fly to America.

The lucky girl who eventually will be selected will fly to America on the Yankee Clipper. She will have a prominent part in the music festival, where she will sing two typical English folk songs.

Although Miss Britain will not leave here for New York on the Yankee Clipper until about Aug. 14, it is necessary for several reasons to select her on Aug. 3, the Sketch feels. August is Britain's national vacation month and Sketch fears that if the winner is not selected early in the month some of Britain's best talent will be away and unable to compete.

It also would be difficult to get leading music authorities as judges later, as many leave for a vacation on the continent in August. Another reason is that it is planned not to announce the winner for several days after the final auditions.

The Inquiring Reporter

The Question.

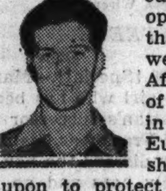
Should the United States go to war with Japan?

Where Answered.

At Randolph and Clark streets.

The Answers.

George McCarthy, 7438 Kingston avenue, electrician—I say that we should not go to war with Japan unless this country were to be attacked by that nation. In that event we would give the Japanese all the fight they wanted. A change in trade relations should not be a cause for war. It would be folly and stupid to send Americans overseas to fight in a trade war.



John Keenan, 3139 Washington boulevard, electrician—Although Japan has closed the open door to China that is no reason why we should go to war. After all, the majority of financial interests in China are those of Europeans, and we should not be called upon to protect them. However, to defend ourselves and to protect the Monroe doctrine, I would vote for war.

Miss Ann J. Kazelak, 1956 Huron street, secretary—My answer is no. We should be independent and show the world that we can get along without the trade relations of another nation. We should set an example of moral leadership that could be followed by other countries. A war to defend our country from attack would be proper and the duty of Americans.

Miss Anne Zull, 1947 Ohio street, industrial supervisor—No. As a general principle the United States should stay out of war unless attacked by another country. We have enough domestic problems to solve without taking on additional problems of war. American youth should not be sent to fight for the interests of other countries in China.

Patsy Bonfiglia, 831 South Claremont avenue, cab starter—We should not go to war because of the present controversy with Japan. I am a former member of the 131st infantry, Illinois National Guard, and I am ready and eager to defend this country in case of an attack, but the upset in trade relations with Japan or changed conditions in China should not be a cause for war.

BACK STAGE VIEW OF FESTIVAL: SIX MONTHS OF LABOR

Thousands Toil for 3 Hour Musical Spectacle.

FESTIVAL TICKETS!

Reserved seat tickets for the tenth Chicagoland Music Festival are now on sale at 50 cents and $1 each. They may be obtained by mail [make check or money order payable to Tribune Charities, Inc.] or by calling at The Chicago Tribune public service bureaus at 1 South Dearborn street and in Tribune Tower lobby.

BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.

Approximately 100,000 persons will gather in Soldiers' field on the night of Saturday, Aug. 19, for the tenth annual Chicagoland Music Festival. In less than three hours there will unfold a great musical entertainment that has required six months to create.

Into the building of it is going the work of 500 instructors, coaches, and sponsors in Chicagoland; more than 1,000 bands, choral groups, and individual instrumentalists and vocalists, and the work of a staff of highly trained musical advisers, stage directors, and field supervisors.

Greatest Music Spectacle.

Since the first one in 1930, the festival has become America's greatest mass music spectacle. It has been seen and heard by nearly 900,000 persons. More than 45,000 musicians have participated in it. It has been responsible for the launching of forty-five other festivals—all modeled after it—in cities throughout the nation.

It has been—and always will be—a lot of work. Perhaps you are one who has seen the swift and smooth presentation of one of these spectacles. Perhaps you would like a glimpse behind the scenes at the people and labors necessary to this one evening's entertainment. Let's step back into the month of February.

We are in the Tribune Tower office of the festival director. The wheels are just beginning to turn.

Once the date of this year's festival had been set there was a maze of activities to be launched. Invitations and application blanks must be sent to all contestants of the year before and to hundreds of music students whose names flow into headquarters throughout the year.

Nonconflicting dates must be arranged for the preliminary festivals that precede the big one. This year there are eight, each of which will send its two best in each musical division to vie for honors here. And some of these smaller festivals attract up to 10,000 spectators. This year's eight—some of which are yet to be held—are in Champaign-Urbana, Whiting, and East Moline, Ill.; Purdue University at La Fayette, Ind.; Cedar Rapids, Ia.; St. Joseph, Mich.; Kansas City, Mo., and Racine, Wis.

And there are yet to be fixed even more dates—those of the Cook county competitions—including preliminaries and finals in seven divisions: vocal, choral, band, violin, cornet, accordian, and baton twirling. Many of these are divided into several subdivisions. Deadlines must be set to stem the flow of applications. The limit for Cook county vocalists this year was July 24. All others must have their applications in by Aug. 7.

Nationally Known Stars.

There always are nationally known stars of the opera, concert stage, screen, or radio. And in addition there is a great spectacle.

This year John Carter of the Metropolitan Opera company will be one of the stars. A young lady, whose identity is not yet known, will supply the thrill. She is now being sought in a contest conducted by The London Daily Sketch in coöperation with THE TRIBUNE. The prettiest young singers of England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales are the candidates.

When one of them has been chosen she will be flown to America by Pan-American Clipper plane, and thence to Chicago, arriving just in time to appear before the massed thousands in Soldiers' field.

And now for the spectacle planned for the 1939 festival. It will be a mass square dance in which more than 1,000 young men and women will move in the graceful rhythms.

All these preparations mean work and more work for the festival director. They mean work, too, for his staff of experts.

Ford, 76 Today, to Spend Quiet Day with His Family

Detroit, Mich., July 29 [U. P.].—Henry Ford will be 76 years old tomorrow. Birthdays mean little to the automobile manufacturer, however. He planned to follow his usual Sunday routine with a visit to the chapel in Greenfield village and a birthday visit with only members of his family present. At 76 Ford apparently is in the best of health. He is amazingly agile for his age, and he shows no inclination to seek the retirement that is the goal of many men less his age. Ford returned to his Dearborn, Mich., estate this week after a cruise on his lake ship.

COL. M'CORMICK TRACES EUROPE'S WARS AND HATES

Intervention Is Futile, He Says at Notre Dame.

Notre Dame, Ind., July 29 [Special].—Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, declared tonight that a study of European politics reveals clearly that the influence of the United States could never bring peace to Europe.

Col. McCormick spoke on the subject "Europe from Afar." His talk concluded a series of lectures on international problems delivered at the summer school of Notre Dame university. He was introduced by the Rev. John F. O'Hara, C. S. C., president of the university.

After analyzing history since the end of the middle ages Col. McCormick reached the conclusion that American intervention in Europe's quarrels would be futile and absurd.

Holds European Union Unlikely.

A European union similar to that of the United States seems beyond accomplishment, he said, considering Europe's variety of races, languages, and religious beliefs. Obviously, Col. McCormick declared, such a union "cannot be helped by the interposition of an outside nation like our own—with interests of our own, with a civilization of our own, and, for the most part, an ignorance and indifference to European affairs.

"The most that could be accomplished is what was accomplished twenty years ago—the use of our power to strengthen one side of a quarrel—at our expense."

Text of the Address.

The text of Col. McCormick's speech follows:

"Of the colonizing nations, England has been, and is, the greatest, for reasons peculiar to her history. After the emergence from feudalism the English kings attempted arbitrary government. King Charles was defeated and beheaded in a revolt of merchants and yeomen, who then ruled England for a period of years under the Long Parliament and under Cromwell.

"When, at the restoration of Charles II. and the election of King William and Queen Mary, the aristocrats resumed the government, it was to rule as the commercial classes wished—a practical application of the statement in our Declaration of Independence:

Merchants Held the Power.

"To these aristocrats went the gaudy raiment, the shining swords, the judicial pomp; but the actual power resided in the men in the counting houses and merchant ships.

"The aristocrats and the jails furnished the blood . . . . the merchants furnished the treasure for England's wars. The merchants obtained more wealth—the aristocrats more governorships, more generalships, more judgeships, more beautiful embassies.

"This political accord created the British empire, whose complexity is only rivaled by its extent. In 1914 it included the settlements of Australia and New Zealand; Canada, Ireland, and South Africa, part settlement, part conquest; conquered peoples in India, Egypt, the Sudan, Borneo, and a score of smaller places; strategical concessions, as Tientsin, Hongkong, controling the trade of large areas of territory; purely military bases, such as Gibraltar in Spain, the Falkland and the American Islands. Portugal and its colonial empire were added as dependencies.

"Its commerce was borne by the biggest merchant fleet in the world; was financed by the largest banking system; insured by Lloyds, the world's greatest insurance exchange; connected by cables belonging to the empire—twice as numerous and twice as long as the cables owned by all other countries—over which passed news of the world [collected by a British news agency and furnished to British newspapers and to the newspapers of all countries in the form best suited to advance the imperial interest].

Industry Is Expanded.

"This gigantic empire fostered British industry and gave its subjects natural advantages in dealing with all the countries of the earth. It gave aristocratic employment to thousands of military, administrative, and diplomatic officers, all interested in its maintenance and expansion.

"The empire had business relations with all the countries of the world and, in consequence, developed diplomatic relations with them, all carried on by men trained in that service and devoted to the success of the empire.

"This empire was protected, policed, and coerced by a navy that ruled the waves and by armies which, except, in the case of the American revolution, have been adequate to meet all demands.

"France emerged from the feudal system about the same time as England. There were religious, political, and commercial civil wars, as in England, but in them the merchant class never triumphed.

"The crown became absolute, leading large aristocratic, military, and administrative hierarchies, all riding heavily upon the commercial and working classes.

"When Frenchmen scoured the ocean and settled foreign lands, it was to increase the glory of their king. French armies marched across Europe for the same purpose.

"Commerce and industry, regimented under government control, withered, the armies and navies could not be maintained, and America and India were lost to the English.

Napoleonic Empire Falls.

"After the monarchy fell it was followed in a few years by the Napoleonic empire. Again the navy sailed and armies marched for the glory of the monarch to Egypt, to Moscow, to Lisbon. Trade and industry were neglected and France collapsed in exhaustion. Armies of Prussians, Austrians, Russians, and Dutch camped in Paris, and occupied the whole country.

"Another generation and another Napoleon arose. French navies sailed to Russia; to Mexico. French armies marched to victory at Solferino and disaster at Sedan.

"Prussians, Bavarians, and Würtembergers marched through Paris and formed the German empire at Versailles, and remained on French soil for three years while collecting a heavy ransom for withdrawal. With the ransom went the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine.

France Is Crushed Again.

"France was crushed. Gone were imperial dreams. A republic of little merchants was set up, somewhat rapaciously administered by a central burocracy, inherited from Richelieu and the Napoleons.

"The republic also inherited Algiers [occupied under the kingdom of Louis Philippe] and Madagascar, which it claimed by right of discovery. Furthermore, it inherited the army with all of its traditions of greatness and adventure.

"From reasons of tradition and patriotism, from fear of further German invasion, the army became the career most desired by Frenchmen. Officers being chosen by competitive examinations, the ablest students in the technical colleges sought and obtained commissions—excepting in the cavalry which remained the only career open to the old nobility.

"France adopted the system of universal military training. Every Frenchman passed through the army, learned to admire and look up to its excellent officers. The army, therefore, obtained an influence entirely outside of its legal status.

Army Pushes Its Conquests.

"Partly from offense received, partly from an instinct to exercise its functions, partly to forget the disgraces of Metz and Sedan, the French army pushed its conquests from arable Algeria into arid Tunis, mountainous Morocco, and tropical Congo. It completed the subjugation of Madagascar. Cause being found, it invaded and conquered Indo-China.

"Few Frenchmen settled in the conquered territories. Their economic development has been mediocre. The conquests were, first and last, military, and military riches were sought in the form of Algerian, Moroccan, and Negro troops.

"Most of my service in the great war was in connection with Moroccan divisions, and I can attest that when organized by French officers they are the peers of any soldiers in the world.

"Encouraged by military successes against the natives, reinforced by African troops, France looked around for allies—with whose support she could again become—if not a dominant—at least an equal partner in the game of international politics.

Germany Lags Behind.

"Old Germany, so often ravished by Swedish, Russian and French invasions when split up into principalities, did not emerge from the feudal system by the reforms of Stein until early in the nineteenth century. German human beings had been rented out like horses to attack our forefathers in the revolutionary war. Germany was, therefore, three hundred years behind the other empires in political and industrial evolution.

"In world politics it was almost another hundred years further behind, because it was not until the victory over France, following victories over Austria-Hungary and Denmark, that Bismarck consolidated four kingdoms, six grand duchies, five duchies, seven principalities, three free cities, and the French provinces of Alsace-Lorraine, into the German empire.

"Its power, created entirely by the sword, was exercised by a military, hereditary nobility which took little account of the industrial civilization springing up within its enlarged frontiers. Keenly aware of the empires France and England had amassed during the years of its fragmentation, Germany pressed forward to obtain a greater position in world affairs . . . sent an army to Pekin in 1900 . . . obtained colonies not already preëmpted . . . desired a world position in keeping with her new found power.

Hapsburg Glory Gone.

"With Germany, at the time we are speaking of, was associated Austria-Hungary—a group of discordant races united under the traditional crown of the Hapsburgs. Their emperor—the successor of Charlemagne—but how sunk the glory of the Hapsburgs—pillaged by Frederick the Great, three times overrun by Napoleon, defeated by Napoleon III., overthrown by Bismarck, saved from revolution by the czar of Russia, Austria-Hungary was hard pushed to maintain herself, and dependent upon her youthful neighbor for support.

"Her rulers feared that unless she incorporated at least a part of the countries recently held by Turkey, the empire would dissolve into its constituent races.

"Italy, once called by Metternich 'a geographical expression,' had been united into a kingdom hardly forty years, operating inefficiently under a form of government modeled after England's, but without England's traditions to help it work.

"With rapidly increasing population, without natural resources within its border, Italy was looking for an opportunity to increase its territorial holdings.

"To the east lay Russia, much the youngest of the nations to enter European politics. So far from marching to the crusades, Russians were at that time slaves under the yoke of the Mongols. So great were their sufferings that the brutalities of Ivan the Terrible and Peter the Great seemed to them no more than necessary military discipline.

Russian Girls Made Slaves.

"At the time that George Mason and Patrick Henry were formulating the doctrine of free government the famous Queen Catherine—called by her son the greatest harlot in Europe—was conniving at the murder of her husband, and Russian girls were on sale at the slave markets of Odessa and Constantinople.

"From the time of Peter Russian monarchs had entered the European quarrels and had copied European diplomacy and European military theory but had done little to improve the lot of the hundred million illiterates of many races, among whom serfdom existed as late as the year 1870.

"The despotism of a burocracy and an officers' corps—largely of Baltic origin—was endured partly through ignorance and partly because the Slavs were still in a war of racial independence.

"The Turks had been driven from the Crimea—and had just been ejected from the Balkan peninsula—leaving new states, Rumania, Bulgaria, Serbia, and Greece, without civilized traditions, seething within and without with tribal rivalries. Russia wished to protect and lead these states as fellow Slavs, and watched her old ally Austria with bitter jealousy.

Fought Through the Years.

"Over many years these different countries had fought one another, singly or in such alliances as the needs or ambitions of the moment made advantageous.

"Since the situation in Europe is of interest to you primarily because of its effect upon us, it is necessary to trace our relations with European governments.

"Our forbears, while still British citizens, carried on wars with France and Spain, the other two great countries occupying America. With the assistance of British armies they took Canada from France. Later, with the assistance of French and Spanish armies, they drove the British from the original thirteen colonies, Florida, and the Northwest Territory.

"Their energy far surpasses that of any other people in any time. They recovered from a devastating war, originated the best government ever devised by man, and pushed in every direction.

Pushed to Front on Seas.

"New England ships became the world's greatest carriers. Harassed by barbaric pirates, the new nation carried on a successful war in Africa.

"The urge for expansion led to the invasion and acquisition of Florida from Spain and of Louisiana from France, practically under threat of war.

"A combination of circumstances led to the second war with England, with indecisive results, both sovereignties remaining within their territories at its conclusion and extending the common boundary line to the Pacific coast.

"This country stimulated the revolutions of Spanish-America and stopped the proposed move of continental European powers to restore the Spanish rule in South America by the enunciation of the Monroe Doctrine. Afterward Texas was annexed and later the territory which became California, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, and New Mexico.

Perry Opens Hermit Kingdom.

"Friction with Japan over the treatment of American sailors led to the expedition of Commodore Perry which opened that hermit kingdom to the world.

"When Spain, England, and especially France, occupied Mexico, they were forced out by the assembly of an American army on the Texas border.

"When the southern states seceded, England and France lent them aid, only limited by the threat of war by America.

"It was in 1898 that the United States deprived Spain of her last American possessions by war.

"Cuba had been in revolt for years. The Spanish army tried to crush the revolt by the means which are always used on occasions of this kind . . . oppressive, brutal methods, unavoidable when one country insists upon dominating another.

"They aroused first our sympathy, then our indignation, finally a veritable crusade to end them.

Manila Bay's Significance.

"An unexpected development in this war changed the international significance of the United States. At the time war broke out an American fleet was in Hongkong, pursuing the leisurely, social life of the navies of that day. This fleet was ordered to attack a Spanish fleet in the Philippine Islands.

"It is fair to say that not one American in each hundred thousand had ever heard of the Philippine Islands. Their first information was the news that Dewey's fleet had sailed from Hongkong on its adventurous mission. It was before the days of wireless communication, and Dewey's fleet was lost in the Pacific.

"The nation underwent an agony of suspense, suddenly to be electrified by the story of Dewey's decisive victory at Manila bay.

"A successful insurrection in the Philippines was besieging the city of Manila at that very moment. Messages and understandings passed between the insurrectos and Commodore Dewey. When an American army was sent to the Philippines to capture the navy base for the use of the American fleet, it landed with the consent of the Filipinos.

Spanish Agree to Surrender.

"The Spanish now, without possibility of defense, and fearing massacre on the part of the insurrectos, agreed to surrender the city to the American army which, in turn, promised to keep the Filipinos out.

"Men of my generation well remember how the tension between the two armies increased, how the Filipinos opened fire with Mauser rifles, and how the Americans, unable to reply effectively with their single shot, short range, black powder Springfields, were constrained to defend themselves by bayonet attack; how victory after victory brought them farther and farther into Philippine territory and, finally, to complete its subjugation, not without recourse to some of the methods so heartily condemned when used by the Spanish in Cuba. That is why we are loath to take a holier-than-thou attitude toward other countries involved in the infinite perplexities of war.

"Now took place the incident which changed the entire aspect of American foreign affairs.

British Fleet Intervenes.

"In 1896 America had been on the verge of another war with England over the latter's demands on Venezuela, when England had been compelled to abandon her belligerent attitude because of the Jameson raid in South Africa, which portended a South African war in which Germany expressed the deepest sympathy with the Boers.

"Germany wished to extend her empire in the Pacific and was greatly surprised and chagrined when the Cuban war led an American fleet and an American army to anticipate her in the Philippine Islands.

"When a German fleet, superior in power to the American fleet, repaired to Manila harbor and began a series of provocations directed against the American navy, reënforcements were sent to Manila. The Germans perhaps would have forced the issue while still superior in strength but that the British fleet, much the strongest present, placed itself between the Germans and the Americans.

Old Bitterness Wiped Out.

"This action, at a moment of great national emotion, wiped out the more than a century old bitterness entertained by Americans for England.

"The hostility toward Germany was increased when German marines were landed in Venezuela in 1902 and withdrawn only when threatened with attack by the American navy.

"American ministers, as representatives of a republic, in monarchies had been looked down upon by ambassadors, and treated in cavalier fashion, no effort being made to conciliate them or their country.

"Now all was to be changed. The power which had risen in the west became socially ambitious, and sent ambassadors to the courts of Europe. They were not, for the most part, received cordially, but the new British foreign policy—to work with America—impelled the British ambassadors all over the world to stand sponsor for the new American ambassadors, and render them every possible service.

British Play Hand Well.

"In that way the British foreign office substantially annexed the American state department.

"In imitation of the European monarchies we now established a professional diplomatic service.

"The diplomats of Europe were enrolled from the aristocracy, and while carrying out the foreign policies of their respective nations, enjoyed the luxuries of court life. The American diplomats were now received into this life of official and social superiors. Americans primarily interested in this social advancement crowded into the diplomatic service.

"The diplomatic victories over England and Germany in the Venezuela affair and the military victory over Spain had satisfied all European nations to respect the Monroe Doctrine. Our only foreign policy therefore was achieved at this time.

Diplomats Become Court Agents.

"Our professional diplomats had nothing to do but to dance attendance at court—losing their republican principles, and becoming, in effect, the agents of the courts to which they were accredited, working in the American state department for the advantage of those courts.

"In the contest for control of American foreign policy the English diplomats outdistanced their rivals, so that when the great war broke out the American state department was enlisted vigorously on their side.

"By similar methods—by international marriages and royal visits—that nebulous, unorganized hierarchy known as society has also been rendered servile and serviceable to British politics.

"The first result of the new order of diplomatic affairs was the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, under which it was proposed to give up sovereignty over the Panama canal and give England treaty rights on this purely American enterprise.

Japan Gets an Overhauling.

"Japan was an oriental country in the early stages of feudalism when awakened by Perry. It immediately instituted a bloodless revolution; adopted a constitution modeled on that of the German empire, reposing all final authority under the mikado in the military.

"The sons of the ruling families were sent far and wide in quest of western education. Soldiers studied in the German army—sailors in the British navy. The armed services were modeled after these.

"Japan made war on China in 1894, winning easily, but was refused permission to occupy Corea and Liotung peninsula by the joint action of Russia, France, and Germany.

"Japan therefore entered into an alliance with England. In 1905 Japan made war on Russia, utterly destroying the Russian navy, defeating her armies, and upon the conclusion and peace forced Russia to cede the half of Saghalien [annexed in 1875], surrender her lease of the Kwantung peninsula and Port Arthur, evacuate Manchuria, and recognize Japan's sphere of influence in Corea.

Italy Deserts Her Allies.

"In 1914 Russia, France, and England were in one alliance—Germany, Austria, and Italy in another.

"Such was the state of Europe and the world when friction between Austria and Serbia led to the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the outbreak of the great war.

"In the great war Italy deserted her allies and joined her enemies upon promise of great territorial reward.

"Japan remained true to her alliance with Great Britain, seized German territory of Kouchou, drove German ships from the Pacific, escorted Australian and New Zealand troops to Europe, and took all German islands in the Pacific ocean north of the equator.

"This war, which resulted in a stalemate, for four years engendered probably the greatest bitterness the world has ever seen, and was not concluded until the military participation of the United States, bringing with it the economic pressure of South America, decided the conflict.

Nation Is Led Into War.

"While Mr. Wilson was campaigning for reëlection on the platform of keeping us out of war, Mr. Lansing had stretched international law to the breaking point to lend aid to England, not only at the expense of the central powers but at the expense of American interests. Eventually he produced a situation which brought us into the war and changed a Franco-British defeat into a victory.

"For his services to Great Britain a tablet was erected in Westminster Abbey to American Ambassador Page—a tribute he shares with Maj. André, the seducer of Benedict Arnold.

"All this was followed by terrible peace treaties.

"France, after four years with enemy armies on her soil—her towns bombed—her country filled with undesired, but indispensable, allied troops, tried to protect and revenge herself by first rendering Germany helpless and then keeping her bled white.

Rigid Terms Imposed.

"Part of Germany was transferred back to France—a little to Belgium—a little to Denmark—some to Czecho-Slovakia—some to Poland, which was given a corridor to the sea—a corridor that separated the two parts of the German republic.

"Cash payments and payments in kind were exacted far beyond the capacity of Germany to pay and upon failure to pay the French army marched into and occupied the Rhineland.

"France, England, English colonies, and Japan divided Germany's overseas possessions. The Austro-Hungarian empire was broken up—parts of it going to Italy, parts to Serbia, parts to Rumania, part to the newly manufactured nation of Czecho-Slovakia, and part to the reconstituted state of Poland. Germany and Austria were forbidden to form a customs union.

Treaty Followed a Tradition.

"These peace terms, atrocious as they seem to us and atrocious as they were, followed the custom of European peaces as far back as the record goes. They were, however, outrageous violations of the principles set forth when American soldiers were conscripted to fight in Europe, and they were violations of the terms of peace which President Wilson had given the defeated nations reason to believe they would be accorded.

"Not long after the peace was agreed upon and while he was campaigning unsuccessfully to make the senate ratify it, came President Wilson's mental breakdown. Participants in the peace conference have said that his mind showed signs of collapse during the deliberations. It is at least charitable to believe that such was the case.

"A number of other wars ensued. The Russian bolshevists invaded Poland and were defeated at Warsaw. In this war Czecho-Slovakia openly sympathized with Russia and incurred the permanent enmity of Poland.

Baltic States Revolt.

"The Baltic provinces of Russia successfully threw off the Russian yoke and formed the little countries of Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, and Finland.

"The Poles invaded Lithuania and took the city of Vilna.

"The Lithuanians in turn took by force the city of Memel, which had been set up in the peace treaty as a free city.

"While these countries had been subjugated by Russian armies, they had, in turn, furnished Russia with the larger part of her technical experts, higher burocracy, and staff officers. Those serving in Russia at the time of the revolution were massacred, leaving Russia with a minimum population of educated people.

"A volunteer expedition of Italians seized Fiume, whose status had not yet been fixed. Italy later made good the seizure.

Greek Army Meets Defeat.

"Greece invaded Turkey. The Greek army was destroyed and the city of Smyrna, largely inhabited by Greeks, was burned.

"Other wars were carried on by France and Spain in Morocco and by England against various Arab tribes and along the frontier of India and in Palestine, where England established a Jewish settlement.

"Ireland revolted and, after several years of guerrilla warfare, secured recognition of the Irish Free State as a self-governing dominion. She now calls herself an independent republic, and is carrying on agitation for the annexation of those parts of Ireland still attached to the British commonwealth.

Russia Falls to the Reds.

"By this time Russia had fallen victim to communism . . . that doctrine which appeals to all that is vicious in mankind—theft, murder, and torture—and explains it with the skill of Belial to delude the victims of their passions that they are following high ideals.

"Communism took over Hungary. Communism at one time possessed half of Italy, and communism battled for Germany and Austria. The peace at Versailles turned out to be more terrible than the war it followed.

"Rumania expelled communism from Hungary with an army and rewarded herself with the province of Transylvania.

"In the helplessness of the Italian government, the Fascists marched on Rome with the consent of the king and instituted a dictatorship.

"Whether the Germans and Austrians could have set up and maintained a republican form of government may be doubtful in view of their recent emergence from the feudal system, from lack of any conception of the rights of man, and from their custom to accept the Roman law imposed upon them from above.

Treaty Kills German Chances.

"Whatever chance they might have had was taken away by the brutality of the peace treaty and the continuing exactions of France and England.

"In desperation they succumbed to the blandishments of and brutalities of a desperado.

"Hitler's excesses have been excused and endured for the same reason that those of Ivan the Terrible and Peter the Great were endured in Russia—the dire need of stern, military discipline—and have borne much political fruit to the German nation.

"The treaty of Versailles and its exactions have been denounced . . . the German Rhineland, the Saar and Memel reoccupied. Large parts of the empire of Bismarck have been united to large parts of the Austrian empire. Germany is once again a powerful empire.

Our Senses Are Outraged.

"Many actions of the government outraged our traditions and our sense of right—the enslavement of the Czechs—the expropriation of the Jews—the oppression of the churches.

"These, perhaps, may be explained, though not excused, by the backwardness of German political developments.

"In the past it has not been unusual for states to dominate religions or for religions to dominate states. The American doctrine of religious tolerance and the separation of church and state has never obtained full acceptance in Europe. But in western Europe the conflict has been between different professions of Christianity. The present movement in Germany appears to indicate a return to the worship of mythology—the Nibelungenlied, a mythology growing from the defense of the Burgundians, attacked by the Huns, is being advocated as the religion of the state.

Their Heroes Are Pagans.

"These heroic tales are dissimilar from those of Arthur and the Round Table in England, or Rollo and Oliver in France, in that the heroes were not Christians, but pagans.

"The political alliances in Europe today are Germany united in offensive and defensive alliance with Italy, Japan, and, apparently, Spain—which either is, or is not, through its revolution, seeking to regain and gain territory and trade from England and France, which are in alliance to hold their empires and spoils of the great war and which are trying to obtain assistance from Russia, and again to obtain the services of the United States, which were so outrageously betrayed twenty years ago.

"During the war our navy had embarked upon a huge building program, which after the war threatened to eclipse the British navy. Through machinations unknown to me, an international conference was held, at which it was agreed that the American navy should only equal that of England. American battleships were destroyed, and by interpretations of the treaty by our state department, the American navy was reduced from first to second place.

Nine Power Treaty Is Made.

"In accordance with British foreign policy at this time, a treaty was made with Japan abandoning the right to fortify certain American islands. The so-called nine-power treaty was made guaranteeing the status quo in China—a matter vital to England, but of slight importance to America.

"When Japan invaded Manchuria, Secretary Stimson wished to act in defense of those English rights. England found it inconvenient to do so.

"Let us look at Europe today. There is the German empire, formed of a union of the empire of Bismarck with that of Hapsburg Austria—less certain parts of Germany taken from her by the treaty of Versailles—in all of which there are elements wishing annexation to the empire—German Austria, less some of the discordant races which had weakened the old empire. The only racial discord in this empire is furnished by the Czechs who are not numerous enough to be of political or military consequence.

Italy Seeks More Territory.

"With Germany is allied Italy, in quest of further territories and resources which were denied her by England and France in violation of the treaty which caused her to betray her allies in the great war and join them.

"Very close to them is the present government of Spain, which they assisted in its revolution—very much as France and Spain helped us in ours.

"Opposed to them are the British empire and the French empire—enlarged by their acquisitions from Germany—but weakened militarily and financially by the long reign of communist doctrines in their governments.

"England has been further weakened diplomatically and militarily by the sovereignization of her colonies—Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa—and by the freeing of Ireland.

Colonies Gain Independence.

"In 1914 the parliament was able to declare war for all of them—but under the statutes of Westminster, Dec. 11, 1931, and by the act of 1920, freeing Ireland, these became independent commonwealths, tied together by personal loyalty to the throne and by a customs union.

"It is certain that Canada, Australia, and New Zealand entertain the heartiest loyalty to the empire, will render any reasonable assistance to the mother country and enter any reasonable war—but to what extent is uncertain.

"None of them maintains military or naval establishment of any consequence.

"The attitude of South Africa is doubtful.

"The Irish Free State will be governed by self-interest.

"The attitude of Portugal in face of Fascist Spain also is uncertain.

Smaller States Unpredictable.

"Of the other states of Europe, the Balkan countries, Jugo-Slavia, Greece, Bulgaria, Rumania, and Hungary—all ruled by dictatorships [Rumania and Bulgaria by dictatorships of the king, Jugo-Slavia and Greece by dictatorships in the name of the king, Hungary by the first dictator to appear on the European scene, Admiral Horthy]—are quite unpredictable, as are the states of Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia, also primitive in political development.

"Poland, cherishing resentment that Czecho-Slovakia sympathized with the bolsheviks in the Russian-Polish war, shared in the dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia and now faces a hostile Germany along two long boundaries.

"Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Finland are self-governing countries, high in culture and political development. None of them is strong enough separately to be of consequence. Ordinary statesmanship would indicate that at least the four Scandinavian nations should unite in a single government, but historical antagonism and the interests of the presiding dynasties stand in the way and leave their peoples economically, diplomatically, and militarily helpless.

Belgium a Hapless Victim.

"Holland and Belgium would have been small enough even had they not separated a hundred years ago. Belgium has often been the battleground of Europe and probably will be again, however the war starts.

"The condition of Holland is still more precarious. Not only has she the German empire on one side and the British empire on the other, but her own colonies are objects of cupidity to larger powers, and especially to Japan, which wants the oil of Borneo for her fleet, airplanes, and tanks.

"The human monster Stalin is being wooed by both alliances. He is entirely unpredictable as he is criminally insane. At that he plays an important part not only in the foreign affairs of all European countries but in their internal politics and in our own.

The Problem of Danzig.

"The present friction in Europe, as we know, is over the German city of Danzig—whether it should remain under Poland for economic reasons or be rejoined to Germany for racial ones.

"The instability of Europe is caused by the fact that the economic boundaries and the racial boundaries do not coincide. Racial states were and are economically unsound. Economic states are racially unstable.

"Europe has not long been able to stay at peace under any of the forms of government that have been devised, nor in any of the stages of intellectual and economic progress.

Why America Cannot Aid.

"The union of the American states [always heralded as the greatest achievement of statesmanship] was comparatively simple through the similarity of race and history. A similar accomplishment in Europe, with its variety of races, languages, and religious beliefs, seems beyond the accomplishment of man.

"Obviously it cannot be helped by the interposition of an outside nation like our own—with interests of our own, with a civilization of our own, and for the most part an ignorance and indifference to European affairs. The most that could be accomplished is what was accomplished twenty years ago—the use of our power to strengthen one side of a quarrel—at our expense."

N. Y. REALTY NEAR SUPERHIGHWAYS KEEPS ITS VALUE

Park Avenue Experience Offers Proof.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 29.—If proximity to an elevated highway detracts from realty values, it isn't evident here, where upper level ramps to the Grand Central station pioneered employment of complex pavements to simplify trafic.

Since 1928 Park avenue has been split at 46th street to pass through the skyscraper New York Central building in two arcades, to span 45th street in two bridges, to circle the Grand Central station on upper level ramps abutting the building, and thence to cross 42d street by viaduct to return to normal level. Smart shops, restaurants, hotels, and offices surround these structures.

Data for Chicago System.

These notes and others were made by Chicago engineers here this week to obtain information to guide them in designing Chicago's superhighway system. They are Duncan M. Campbell and Harry W. Lochner of the Cook county highway department and Le Roy H. Cather, consultant for the city of Chicago.

They saw superhighway construction here in business and industrial neighborhoods, new and old. They saw multimillion dollar projects in exclusive residential districts as well as in slums, where the federal contributions could hardly be considered as benefiting the tenement dwellers without automobiles and without even the 25 or 50 cents to pay the tolls that are usual here.

Other Facts Learned.

Other observations included the following for the engineers' notebooks:

1. One stop-and-go light on the Henry Hudson parkway, a temporary signal at a construction point, blocked two miles of rush hour trafic on this new river front superhighway. "We certainly can't have a stop-and-go light on our system," commented Mr. Cather.

2. Bricks or granite blocks produce an objectionable roar from tire impact under dense trafic. The newer pavements are of concrete stained or colored dark to reduce glare; dark pavement also has a further advantage in melting ice.

3. Superhighways need a few emergency stopping places for stalled cars. Pavements carrying large volumes of travel must be kept free, even after a rain has shorted the ignition of a few engines.

Emergency Phones Help.

4. Emergency telephones are of value. They have them on the supers here. The lack of them on Chicago's outer drive is an inconvenience.

5. Concave curbs, as employed here on long bridges resembling elevated highways, deflect the front tire of any car approaching too close to the railings. Assured of this protection, drivers do not shy from the railings.

6. Esthetics of large structures are enhanced by simplicity.

7. Illumination for the service of trafic [and nothing but trafic is to use the express pavements] is cheaper in installation and in maintenance than illumination for ornamentation or for pavements where pedestrians share the right of way with vehicles.

Main Stream Must Be Free.

8. Entrances and exits to a high speed pavement should have a separate lane for acceleration or deceleration, as the case might be, so that changes of speed are not made within the main trafic stream.

9. Safety requires that automobiles merging with fast travel should be in a single lane. It's like entering fast, heavy travel on a through street with a right turn from a stop sign —it can't be done two abreast.

10. The location of entrances and exits into and from a superhighway route should avoid curves and grades that foreshorten visibility.

The Chicago superhighway plans, under the enabling legislation, must be filed with the department of public works at Springfield before March 1, 1940.

Property Undamaged by Superhighway

THREE CCC BOYS JAILED ON CHARGE OF GIRL, AGED 14

Lancaster, Wis., July 29 [Special].—Revelations made by a girl, 14 years old, today sent three Platteville, Wis., CCC camp enrollees to jail on charges of statutory rape and started a campaign to eradicate juvenile delinquency from Platteville, a town of 4,500 population.

Earl Sackfield, 20 years old, of Matherville, Ill.; Leslie Drew, 19, and Harold Brandt, 17, both of Grant county, Wis., pleaded guilty to the girl's charge before District Judge Sherman E. Smalley in Circuit court. Unable to pay $100 fines, Sackfield and Drew must spend six months in jail. Brandt got thirty days in lieu of a $50 fine.

Girl Names Others.

District Attorney Richard Orton said he will arrest three more CCC enrollees whose names were given to him by the girl. She said others also were guilty of the same offense, but that she does not know their names.

The girl told District Attorney Orton the names of six girl associates who were involved with boys from the CCC camp, located just outside Platteville. Orton said three of the girls are 18 years old and beyond the reach of Juvenile court prosecution, but he is certain two of the girls are less than 18 and probably three are under 18.

Questioned in court before sentence was passed, the CCC enrollés said that upon their arrival in the Platteville camp the commander lectured them on personal hygiene and warned them against the danger of venereal diseases.

Warned to Shun Girls.

Sackfield and Drew said they were instructed in the use of contraceptive devices and told that these devices might be bought at the camp commissary for 15 cents. Both said the commander then read a list of names of Platteville girls and told the enrollees to stay away from them.

Sackfield told District Attorney Orton he had been in one CCC camp in Washington and two in Michigan before coming to Platteville. He has been in the CCC since April, 1938.

Drew told Orton he arrived in Platteville last April.

The first complaint about juvenile delinquency in Platteville was made to Orton by the father of the girl, who named the six CCC boys. After the other boys have been arrested and tried, the girl and those of her companions less than 18 years old will be taken before the Juvenile court.

HEAR ARGENTINA BIDS FOR LAND IN ANTARCTIC AREA

Opposed to Extension of Monroe Doctrine.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 29.—The state department today refused to recognize officially the reports from Argentina that the Latin-American republic will oppose attempts of the United States to extend the Monroe Doctrine into Antarctic regions through a colonizing expedition this fall under Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull said: "There have been no messages nor any communications or notes of any kind between the two governments—and that is all I know thus far." He said he had seen newspaper accounts of the Argentine stand, but that he has not gone into the matter. There would have to be further developments, he said, before he would have anything to say.

Oppose British Claim.

The Argentine reports said the country also will oppose British claims to islands in the vicinity of the Weddell sea and will bid for ownership of approximately one-seventh of the Antarctic region at the International Conference of Polar Explorers at Bergen, Norway, next year. The area claimed by Argentina embraces more than a quarter of the region which Admiral Byrd said should be put under the Monroe Doctrine.

Argentina has disputed Great Britain's ownership of the Falkland Islands, now administered as a crown colony of Great Britain but still claimed by Argentina under the name of the Malvinas Islands.

Argentina periodically has demanded return of the islands since they were occupied by the British in 1833 after they had been settled by Argentine citizens. Argentina resented the failure of the United States to apply the Monroe Doctrine, which assures the western hemisphere from aggression, to the British seizure.

Did Not Interfere.

But Washington, D. C., did not interfere at that time because of strained relations between this country and Argentina over certain incidents concerning fishing rights for Americans while the islands were under Argentine jurisdiction. There are still unsettled claims over these incidents. As a result this country has remained aloof from the Argentine-British dispute over the islands and Argentina has been the one Latin-American country to fight the force of the Monroe Doctrine as an international policy.

Great Britain has claimed such Antarctic islands as the South Orkneys, South Georgia, South Shetland, and Graham Land as geographical dependencies of the Falklands. Argentina claims that all, including the Falklands, are dependencies of the South American continent and therefore belong to Argentina.

The American dispute with Argentina arose after Louis Vernet ordered the masters of foreign fishing and sealing vessels to cease operations in that vicinity soon after he became governor in 1829. He was a Frenchman who had been granted extensive concessions in the islands by the Buenos Aires government prior to his appointment as governor.

Few heeded his orders. Angered, he seized three American schooners in July, 1831. One of them, the Harriet was taken to Buenos Aires for trial of the master. The United States denied the right of the Argentine government to regulate seal fishing and claimed fishing rights for American citizens.

This government followed up the demand by sending a United States sloop of war, the Lexington, to Buenos Aires. Its commander, Silas Duncan, demanded restoration of the schooner Hariet, all property taken and immediate surrender of Vernet for trial as a pirate and robber. The Argentine government refused.

Duncan sailed for the Falklands, entered the harbor of Puerto Soledad under the French and landed with an armed party. He took the fort, seized arms, ammunition and seal skins. He took prisoners, declared the island free of all government and sailed away.

President Andrew Jackson in 1882 sent an agent to demand disavowal of Vernet, restoration of property and payment of an indemnity by the Argentine government, claiming that the United States had used the islands for fishing for more than 50 years and that Spain had exercised no sovereignty over the coasts to which Buenos Aires fell heir. Argentina countered with demands for reparations for Duncan's acts. No settlement was made and subsequent claims of both governments were unsuccessful.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN PLAYS 'MOSES' TO EMIGRANT JEWS

VIENNA, July 29 [U. P.].—Charlie Chaplin was revealed today as a twentieth century Moses to thousands of Jews here awaiting a chance to leave Germany. The title was bestowed on Chaplin by the Jews themselves, for many of whom Chaplin's financial aid provides the only chance to begin a new life overseas.

After devoting all the continental royalties from his films to Jewish relief, Chaplin is sponsoring a fund said to run into several million dollars to enable German Jews to emigrate to other countries while awaiting their turn to enter America.

According to Jewish quarters in Vienna, a part of this fund recently was placed at the disposal of the Jewish community in Milan, Italy, where German Jews may wait until permitted to emigrate to other countries. For each of 1,000 Jews who left Germany under this arrangement last week, the Milan Jews posted a $50 bond with the Italian government so that the Jews would not become public charges in Italy. Milanese Jews also house and feed the emigrants.

You Mustn't Say 'Damn,' Commons Members Told

LONDON, July 29 (AP).—The house of commons is particular about the language it hears. Sir Dennis Herbert, deputy speaker, has ruled that the word "damn" may not be heard in parliamentary debate but that "damnable is all right.

HITS ROOSEVELT AS SPOILSMAN ON HATCH ISSUE

Praises Objects of Clean Politics Measure.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 29.—President Roosevelt was labeled "a voracious spoilsman" today by Representative Charles A. Plumley [R., Vt.] for his attitude on the Hatch bill, which would impose heavy penalties for political activity by federal workers.

In attacking the President's concern over the constitutionality of the measure, Plumley declared the bill to be the most sweeping advance in civil service reform in thirty years.

"Congress has at last applied the law to political spoils in the federal administrative services," Plumley said. "To find the President now reaching out for every specious argument of evasion against the bill is a most disheartening spectacle.

Points to Court Decision.

"First he intimated the measure was unconstitutional, in that it abridged the right of free speech and free assembly to federal pay rollers. That argument was decided the other way by the courts some forty years ago. It was determined—and the ruling never has been challenged by any reputable legal authority—that the government is free to impose whatever reasonable conditions it will upon public office holders.

"The President next took the tack that the bill was 'vague' in some of its provisions. That is pure humbug. There is nothing vague about it. The measure simply prohibits and forbids all electioneering by federal employés, and fixes mandatory criminal penalties for such activities.

"In language and structure, the measure is so simple that its provisions and purposes could not be misunderstood by an average high school student.

Terms Reasons Flimsy.

"Yet the President, in his eager desire to protect the existing spoils machine within the federal burocracy, resorts to these flimsy reasons for his attack upon the bill. His evasions indicate simple that he plans to lean heavily upon the pay rollers for both contributions and political organization in the 1940 presidential campaign."

Congressman Plumley predicted Mr. Roosevelt would seek complete personal control over the Democratic national convention in 1940.

"The New Deal strategy board knows full well that it has converted the federal service into a gigantic Tammany Hall election machine. Spoils patronage is now the President's chief reliance in his attempt to retain control of the party," Plumley said.

"To this end, he has resisted the Hatch bill from its very inception in the senate last April. Now that it has been approved by both houses of congress, he resorts to utterly specious devices against it.

"He thus takes his place as the most voracious spoilsman in the history of American politics."

PRESIDENT FAILS TO HOOK MARLIN IN MIDST OF RUN

Ocean City, Md., July 29 (AP).—President Roosevelt today fished "right in the middle" of the biggest run of marlin spearfish in the history of middle Atlantic sport fishing, but reports tonight indicated the fighting beauties had passed up the presidential hook. Radio advices to shore said the President had not taken a fish during the several hours he angled from the yacht Potomac. Capt. Chester Gray, aboard the Hilda, said the presidential craft was over the Jack Spot, a shoal twenty-two miles off shore, and that the water was "literally alive" with marlin.

HANGS SELF WITH TOWELS.

A man registered as Robert O. Krause hanged himself with towels he had knotted together yesterday in his room at the Stratford hotel, 4131 Sheridan road. Police said they learned he had recently been an oil salesman. He was about 30 years old.

Summer Prom Queen

MISS MARIAN BANKS.

Urbana, Ill., July 29 [Special].—Miss Marian Banks of Kirkland, Ill., was queen of the summer prom held on the University of Illinois campus last night. Approximately 650 couples attended the annual affair and each cast his vote for queen, with sixteen co-eds vying for the honor. The identity of the queen was disclosed shortly before midnight, following the grand march, which was led by John Trimfle, Minneapolis, Minn., and his guest, Miss Lucille Hiller, Makanda, Ill. They were co-chairmen of the prom. Maids of honor were Miss Helen Oehler, 7619 East End avenue, Chicago; Roberta Cummins, Peggy Stewart, both of Urbana, and Winifred Ehler, Champaign.

MEN, IT'S A SNAP FOR YOU TO KEEP A BOYISH FIGURE!

Corsets Form Answer to Hefty Problem.

Loop clothing merchants said yesterday that corset wearing among men has become "almost common." The corset wearers want to look thin and youthful. Every day their number is increasing.

"We don't call them corsets," said one department store buyer. "We call them abdominal supports, or health belts. The men themselves call them corsets."

The belts resemble shorts. They are of tight-fitting elastic. Some of them can be laced to make them tighter still.

"We've sold them for years to be worn after surgical operations," the buyer said. "About five years ago we brought them out for fat men. We'd sell a lot of them at Christmas time and at the beginning of the summer. Between times there were few buyers.

How the Boom Started.

"Men who wanted to look slender in their evening clothes were buying them for the holiday parties, when formal clothes are worn most. The men who bought them in the summer wanted to wear light clothes, or go without coats, and they thought they looked too fat."

When the stores began advertising the corsets frankly as a means of improving the figure, business began to boom. Most of the sales, nevertheless, still are at the beginning of summer and at holiday time.

"Thin men buy them too," another buyer confided. "If they have a good figure, they want to make it look better. Twenty-five per cent of the belts we sell are size 30 and 32. Those are small sizes. We even have to keep them in stock as small as 26—a boy's size."

"Cadets from the military academies wear them to give them a military appearance," said one of the clerks.

Shy? Not At All!

Most of the men who sell the corsets said they make a big man look 2 to 4 inches smaller around the waist.

"Are men shy about buying them?" repeated a clerk who wears one himself. "Not at all. They come in and say they want to buy a corset. It's just like buying a tie or a pair of socks.

"Once in a while a man will send his wife in to buy him one. I don't think it's because he's timid, though. He's probably just too busy to come in himself."

MICHIGAN HUNTS LARGE SHORTAGE IN CHURCH FUNDS

State Acts After Bishop Resigns Post.

Burns the story of another former Bulloch associate who followed the promoter friends of the bishop into his new business.

Dealt with Promoter.

"Bishop Ablewhite was a frequent caller in the Bulloch offices," this man reported. "He never dealt with Bulloch directly. Always with the promoter. When the new office was started he was there a great deal. We regarded him as a prosperous client. He was royally entertained by the boss. We underlings always thought he was a man of great means."

Rossman has turned over to Burns a letter which he received from the bishop after "the boss" disappeared. This document, in substance, it is reported, requested the chauffeur to write the bishop that "he was in the same boat, except that he [Rossman] had lost nobody's money but his own."

No Regular Audits.

Thus far the attorney general's quiz has shown that there was no thorough audit of the diocesan funds between 1933 and 1939. During that period the money and securities had been in charge of A. E. Miller, chancellor and diocesan secretary-treasurer. Miller died in January at the age of 77.

When the shortage was disclosed several clergymen demanded a full investigation and a determination of who was responsible for the loss. One of them was Archdeacon William Poyseur, who has been for forty years a missionary in the upper peninsula.

The standing committee, as it was then constituted, agreed to make the investigation requested. However, a convention of the diocese after heated debate elected another standing committee. The new committee has made no report.

Resigns Post as Bishop.

Bishop Ablewhite's resignation was presented to the presiding bishop of the church, the Rev. Henry St. George Tucker of New York. Under ecclesiastical regulations, it must be acted on when the house of bishops meets in St. Louis in November. Bishop Ablewhite has also asked to be deposed [removed from the roll of clergymen] and this also will come before the house of bishops. He is at present a minister, but not a bishop.

In Gambier, O., where he is staying with relatives, Ablewhite asserted tonight that he had resigned voluntarily. This contradicted reports current in Marquette that he had been asked to quit. These reports indicated that the executive committee demanded the resignation as bishop and that an informal group of clergymen insisted on his deposition.

Ablewhite refused to talk about the finances or anything else connected with the matter.

"My statement has been given to the presiding bishop," he said, "and he will release it when he is ready."

'Good Looking' Robber Ties Up Clerk; Gets $23

A young bandit held up Miss Karmel Siefert, 22 years old, 3056 Lake street, a clerk in the Buddy Boy Nut house, 34 East Randolph street, last night. He forced her into a rear room, where he shackled her feet with a belt. Then he fled with $23 from the cash register. Miss Siefert described the robber as nervous "and very good looking."

FRANCIS E. LOWRY FUNERAL.

Lake Geneva, Wis., July 29 [Special].—Funeral services for Francis E. Lowry, 59 years old, carpenter and contractor who had built many homes in this area, were held today in St. Francis Desales Catholic church. A resident of Lake Geneva for thirty-three years, he died late Thursday.

Robbed in Shop

A robber entered the Campbell hosiery shop at 3221 Broadway yesterday afternoon and after locking the manager, Miss Viola Crane, in a closet, fled with $25 taken from the cash register.

HUNT FOR LEPKE COSTS $200,000, DEWEY REVEALS

New York, July 29 [Special].—The search for Louis Buchalter, alias Lepke, fugitive racketeer, is costing various law enforcement agencies an average of $200,000 a year, in addition to salaries and traveling expenses, District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey declared today. In a letter Dewey asked the board of estimate to substitute a reward of $25,000 for Lepke's capture, dead or alive, instead of the $5,000 reward offered two years ago.

"The early apprehension of Lepke is a matter of most urgent public importance," the letter declared, adding that the federal bureau of investigation probably would double its $5,000 reward, bringing the total price on the racketeer's head to $35,000.

It was regarded as settled that Lepke's hideaway must be in or near New York for him to direct a so-called war of extermination in which, Dewey said, three former associates of Lepke and Jack [Gurrah] Shapiro have been murdered and two more wounded.

Another witness and his wife have vanished and are believed dead, and an innocent business man has been slain by mistake.

BESIEGED IN BARN, SUSPECT SLAYS 1 MAN, WOUNDS 7

Cynthiana, Ky., July 29.—(AP)—Police Chief George M. Dickey, 78 years old, was killed and seven men were wounded tonight attempting to rout a man from a barn while investigating reports a young girl had been enticed into the building.

Dickey, head of the force here for more than twenty-seven years, was killed when a shotgun charge struck him in the back. The seven wounded men were members of the posse surrounding the barn, or bystanders.

It was not learned at once whether the girl was a prisoner in the barn, but police exerted extreme caution in efforts to oust the besieged man. Tear gas bombs were thrown into the structure, but the answer was a shotgun blast which felled a bystander.

SALE OF DRUGGAN ESTATE IS GIVEN COURT APPROVAL

Judge Ralph J. Dady in the Lake county Circuit court at Waukegan yesterday entered an order approving the foreclosure sale of Terry Druggan's 240 acre estate near Lake Zurich. The property brought $31,650 at the sale on July 21. It was bid in by Attorney Bernard Decker, representing Hugo Pick, trustee for the mortgage holder.

Irving B. Enevold, Libertyville real estate man, was appointed receiver for the property. The sale left a deficiency of $1,512 for which rents and profits of the estate are pledged.

Druggan has twelve months in which he may redeem the property, which was held in the name of his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Druggan.

20 WITNESSES WILL BE HEARD AT GORE INQUEST

Stepson of Slain Woman Will Not Appear.

Benton, Ill., July 29 [Special].—At least twenty witnesses will be called Monday evening when Coroner David J. Clayton conducts an inquest into the slaying of Mrs. George W. Gore Sr. last Sunday morning. Mrs. Gore was shot to death after being aroused from her bed on a sleeping porch.

Among the witnesses will be neighbors of the Gores and state bureau of criminal investigation agents, police and deputy sherifs, who have been investigating the case for a week.

George W. Gore Jr., step-son of the slain woman, who is at liberty under $10,000 bond on a charge of murder, will not appear at the inquest. Under the terms of his bail, however, Gore will be required to come here from Cape Girardeau, Mo., Tuesday for arraignment before a justice of the peace. He will not testify, said W. C. Choisser, his counsel and cousin.

Refuses to Come Back.

Gore, 32 years old, and his wife, Katheryn, 26, came here last Monday for questioning about the slaying. Gore was held for three days and his wife for two days. They returned to Cape Girardeau. Yesterday Sherif Edward Powell sent deputies to Cape Girardeau to ask Mrs. Gore to come back to Benton. She refused.

Young Gore's release on bond, posted by his father, Dr. George W. Gore Sr., a prominent surgeon, and his aunt, the mother of his attorney, was recommended by State's Attorney Rea Jones. Persons accused of capital crimes may be released on bail in Illinois at the discretion of the court.

Under the state constitution "all persons charged with crimes have the right to bail except for capital offenses where proof is evident or the presumption is great."

Sherif Assails Release.

Sherif Powell said today he had not recommended the release of Gore on bond and never heard of a person accused of a capital crime being released before.

"It is a very bad thing to release accused persons until investigations have been completed," said the sherif. "If a suspect were in jail and investigation showed him guilty we would hold him, and if investigation indicated he was innocent we could release him. In this case we were not certain."

When young Gore came here last Monday he said he and his wife had been in Sikeston and Charleston, Mo., Saturday and Sunday and that he had not been in Benton recently.

Employés of a Charleston hotel said Gore had registered there Saturday night, but had been out of the hotel from 9 p. m. to 6 a. m. An automobile found abandoned on the outskirts of Charleston has been identified as a car Gore bought in Cairo, Ill., July 17.

PAROLEE SEIZED IN 6 MILE CHASE AFTER JAILBREAK

Charles Persinger, 21 years old, a parolee who escaped from the Aurora city jail last Wednesday night, was captured yesterday by state highway police at Waukegan and Telegraph roads, in Niles, after a six mile chase. Persinger was in a car with Harold Hankes and Melvin Gillihan, both of Aurora, who are accused of having helped him to escape.

The police chase began when they drove past a red light. They admitted having stolen five automobiles since Persinger's escape and, because they drove one stolen car across the state line into Wisconsin and another stolen car back into Illinois, they were turned over to federal authorities for prosecution.

Persinger was arrested with David Schmitt as a suspect in a series of shotgun robberies. Schmitt confessed and waived preliminary examination. Persinger was to have faced a magistrate yesterday. Instead, he sawed his way out of jail. He was paroled from an Ohio prison last fall and sent here to be under the care of the Illinois parole authorities. Hankes is a graduate of the St. Charles School for Boys.

YOUTH'S BODY FOUND IN LAKE.

The body of Harry Howell, 18 years old, who drowned two weeks ago when a sailboat capsized in Lake Michigan at Indiana Harbor, was found near shore yesterday. Howell lived at 423 East 69th street. The body of Edward Peacock, 6743 State street, who also drowned, is still missing.

SUE TO RECOVER $33,834 LOST ON HORSE RACES

Bookkeeper's Bondsmen Act Against Two.

A suit was filed in federal District court yesterday to compel two men, described as having unlawfully received racing bets, to surrender $33,834 which they are accused of winning from a bookkeeper.

The American Surety company of New York filed the suit. The bookkeeper is Andrew G. Rosenthal Jr. of 4108 Keystone avenue, until recently employed by A. C. Allyn & Co., an investment firm at 100 West Monroe street. The suit charges that he took the money from the Allyn company between May of 1938 and last May, and lost it on the horses.

Name Two as Bet Takers.

William J. Hoysgaard and his brother, Carl Hoysgaard, are named as the men who won it from him.

The surety company, which says it bonded Rosenthal, asserts in its suit that it has paid the Allyn company for its losses. Now the surety company wants its money, with 5 per cent interest, from the Hoysgaards.

The company brought suit against the Hoysgaards and the City National Bank and Trust company and the Amalgamated Trust and Savings bank. John P. Hampton, the attorney who filed the suit, said the banks were named because the Hoysgaards have funds in both.

He said also that no charges have been filed against Rosenthal, but declined to discuss the case further.

W. E. Kistner, vice president of the Allyn company, said he did not know the details of the case, but said that Rosenthal, who is in his middle 40s, is no longer employed by the firm.

Bookkeeper Denies Losses.

Rosenthal said he was surprised to learn of the suit. He said he left the Allyn company in May to accept a better position and that the alleged shortage had never been mentioned to him. The bookkeeper denied he had ever taken any money or bet on the horse races. He said the money might have been abstracted through his department and that the surety company might have named him as a witness.

The door of the Roysgaards' office at 510 North Dearborn street was locked when a reporter went there.

Mailbox Thief Captured in Loop Chase; Wife Held

James Babcock, 22 years old, was arrested yesterday at State and Adams streets and confessed, police said, to mail box thievery. He gave his address as 6109 Dorchester avenue. A young woman who said she was his wife, Esther, 21, of 6218 University avenue, was also arrested. Babcock was seized by Trafic Policeman Lawrence Regan shortly after he appeared in a currency exchange at 203 South Wabash avenue and tried to cash two checks. The manager, David Wolfberg, was suspicious and pursued Babcock when he left the place. He had collared Babcock when Policeman Regan arrived.

RETURN PAROLE VIOLATOR AFTER ESCAPE IN WEST

John Pinowsky, alias George Burka, a parole violator from Pontiac reformatory, was brought back to Chicago yesterday from Los Angeles, Cal. He is charged with two filling station robberies here after his parole in May, 1930.

Pinowsky was arrested last February in Seattle, Wash., and in June Policeman Stephan Ploszaj of the Chicago Lawn station was sent there to return him. Pinowsky escaped from Ploszaj near Cokeville, Wyo., by leaping through a washroom window of the train. He was recaptured three weeks ago in San Pedro.

Sergt. James L. Zegar went to California and brought the prisoner back yesterday on the City of Los Angeles train.

Judge Hears Tale of a Shirt and Hems Willie In for Year

Tale of a shirt: Edward Guana owned it. Willie Brooks of 531 East 46th street stole it from Judge Mason S. Sullivan's automobile in front of the Wabash avenue police court. Guana, the judge's bailif, told the judge. Willie, who is colored, admitted it. The judge placed him on a year's probation yesterday.

RETAILERS BRING OPTIMISM INTO FALL MARKETS

Upturn Spurs Trade Shows Opening Tomorrow.

Optimism permeated the Chicago wholesale district yesterday as the advance guard of 18,000 out of town retail merchants started invading Chicago for the fall markets.

More than $12,000,000 worth of orders, 15 per cent more than 1938, are expected to be placed with local wholesalers and distributors during the next few weeks. The Chicago Association of Commerce, which sponsors the market events, made this prediction in full confidence, based on a sudden upturn in retail business.

Retail Sales Gain.

Retail sales in department stores throughout the country showed an 8 per cent increase last week over the same week in 1938. Retail sales in rural areas are 10 per cent ahead of those of last year. Farm income is 7 per cent in advance of the low of last March.

Consequently, the association reports, advance registrations for the Chicago markets are 5 per cent ahead of 1938. The widespread territory that looks to Chicago as its chief source of supply is ready, and in a buying mood, for the eighteen large trade shows opening here tomorrow.

More than 2,000 Chicago concerns and 850 out of town manufacturers are participating in the markets, according to Lawrence H. Whiting, vice president of the Association of Commerce, who is in charge of the semi-annual markets. These either have trade show exhibits or special market expositions in their own plants.

Merchants' Council Meets.

The Interstate Merchants' council will hold its thirty-sixth semi-annual convention coincident with the markets. Headquarters will be in the Hotel Sherman, although most of the other loop hotels also will be used. Its semi-annual banquet will be in the Sherman Tuesday night.

The markets include women's apparel, wash apparel, children's and infants' wear, accessories, millinery, linens, gifts, china, silverware, glassware, pottery, and corsets.

LUTHERANS FETE DR. R. G. KAUFMAN OF WOODSTOCK

The thirtieth anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev. Dr. Roger G. Kaufman at Grace United Lutheran church in Woodstock, McHenry county, will be celebrated in special services today. The day also will mark the thirty-second year since the founding of the church, now one of the largest in northern Illinois, with 1,052 members. When the Rev. Dr. Kaufman became pastor the church had only 58 members.

Dr. R. G. Kaufman.

The Rev. Dr. Armin G. Weng of Elgin, president of the Illinois synod of the United Lutheran church, will deliver the anniversary sermon this morning. The Rev. William M. Eckert of Lutheran Theological seminary, Maywood, will be guest speaker at the anniversary open house this afternoon.

During Dr. Kaufman's pastorate he has performed 965 marriages and has baptized and confirmed 900 persons. He is president of the Woodstock hospital board and holds the same office in the grade school board of education. He is also chairman of the finance committee of the public library which he formerly served as president and secretary of the board.

CHOOSE YOUR SOCIAL IDEAL

By CALEB

WHAT do you want of society? What in the way of a social order? Can you tell? Here, in brief, are two theories. To which, if either, do you subscribe?

1 In a real democracy, opportunity and power and wealth must be shared equally.

2. In a real democracy, there must be commitment to the common good on the part of all.

Under the first theory, some who think they are liberal enlist. But they are not enlightened. For mountains and valleys cannot ever be equal.

The second theory is sound. Every one—it says—must be conscious of the part he plays in society. And it must be a constructive, helpful, considerate part. It assumes that people of superior advantages will do nothing harmful to the common good, but, on the contrary, will advance it.

It does not condemn free American initiative and the competitive system. But it does specify that people of means and in high places will remember their means came from society, and should not be used to the harm of society. It presumes rather that such privileged persons will, in proportion to their ability and wealth, act somehow for the social good.

There is a vast distinction between the idea of sharing everything alike—and a universal adherence to the common good. The first idea is negative. It is stultifying. It proposes the improbable and the impossible.

The second idea embraces an ideal that can be attained. It is positive. It is liberal and progressive. It proposes what is possible and what sooner or later will be seen to be probable. When it arrives, it will have arrived gradually and will remain.

It imposes obligations on all—not alone those who have minds and means. It supposes a society in which the employer does all he can for the employe. It supposes the man of little means will be as honorable toward his country as he now wants the big man to be.

In short, it is the only fundamental solution to the problems of real democracy. It makes a real democracy.

FRENCH CABINET SETS UP OFFICE OF PROPAGANDA

Also Decrees Bonuses for More Babies.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 29.—Following the footsteps of the British government, the French council of ministers today decided to establish by decree law a commissariat of information which, like the similar British office, will be a shadow ministry of propaganda.

To head the publicity office, the French called on Jean Girardoux, famous French playwright, whose future task, according to semi-official interpretation, will be "to support French national defense by organizing efficient diffusion of French information beyond the French frontier."

The council of ministers also decided to extend the term of the chamber of deputies for two years until June 1, 1942. It was the first time since the world war that the French cabinet has taken such action. It came as a godsend for many deputies, for whom the electoral campaign next fall has been a nightmare.

Offer Bonuses for Babies.

PARIS, July 29 (AP)—Cash bonuses for babies were decreed today by the French government together with taxes on bachelors and childless couples to pay for the bonuses.

The decree, designed to spur the French birth rate as a part of the national defense program, was one of eighty adopted by the cabinet. They included provisions for the prevention of abortions and reinforcement of the counter-espionage service.

Bachelors and others will not know how much they must pay until Tuesday upon publication of the degrees in the official journal nor will prospective parents know just how much cash they can count on.

One report said the premiums would be $80 per baby, a tidy sum to many laborers whose monthly wages seldom exceed that amount.

Deaths Exceed Births.

The baby prizes and other measures for encouraging large families were aimed at counteracting rising birth rates in the totalitarian countries while deaths exceed births in France.

In 1938 France had 34,741 more deaths than births and Italy, with a population about the same as France's 42,000,000, had 424,000 more births than deaths.

Finance Minister Paul Reynaud, in a nation-wide radio address explaining the decrees, said another of the new laws restricts arms profits sharply. It provides that manufacturers must keep their books open to the government.

Reynaud said the government had won the "battles of production and unemployment and of gold." Attacking "defeatism" of the opposition press, he warned that such could not be tolerated "in the midst of the white war of nerves in which we are now engaged."

Moves to Nevada

JUDITH ANDERSON.

Oakland, Cal., July 29 [U. P.]—Judith Anderson, stage star, has established residence in Carson City, Nev., with a view toward obtaining a divorce from Benjamin H. Lehman, professor of English at the University of California, Attorney W. I. Follett, representing Lehman, said today.

Moscow Flooded by Storm; Thousands Wade in Streets

MOSCOW, July 29 [U. P.]—Thousands of pedestrians took off their shoes and waded knee deep in flooded streets tonight when a severe storm ended a long heat wave and drouth. The storm, accompanied by tremendous thunder and lightning, flooded the streets, stalled cars, interrupted trolley and bus service, broke electric lines, and knocked down a radio aerial with a bolt of lightning that set an apartment afire.

JOHN DANNENBERG DIES.

Kankakee, Ill., July 29 [Special].—John Dannenberg, 63 years old, resident of Kankakee county for 30 years, was found dead in bed at his home in Grant Park yesterday. His death was attributed to heart disease.

CONSCRIPTS FIND LIFE IN BRITAIN'S ARMY BIT ROUGH

Not as Advertised, They Painfully Discover.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 29.—The fanfare of government inspired publicity with which 34,000 conscripts packed off for camp two weeks ago apparently is backfiring.

Despite the great splash of stories and pictures in the British press on mobilization day, July 15, assuring the conscripts that their training would be just one long vacation at government expense, it was revealed today that the war office had been forced to launch an investigation of complaints in nearly every camp where the first of the 200,000 youths to be called up this year are learning the arts of war.

Tents, Not Hotels.

Capt. A. Cameron, adjutant at Oswestry camp, said many complaints arose because of the rosy picture painted about the new conscript army life. "Before the men were called up," he said, "it appears they were told a lot of fairy tales about their accommodations. Some thought they were going to sleep in good class hotels. Naturally, some are a little disappointed that not even huts were ready for them on their arrival. But the tents are warm and comfortable."

Most of the complaints were about food, inadequate housing, and the muddy sites. Daily rain for several weeks turned camps into mudholes and delayed the construction of huts.

Inquiry at Every Camp.

War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha visited the Arborfield camp in Berks county today but he was told there were no complaints there. Every camp is being investigated by army chiefs. Many already have been visited by Lt. Gen. Sir Robert Venning, army quartermaster general, or Sir Isidore Salmon, honorary catering adviser to the war office.

Tom Smith, Labor member of parliament, will ask the war minister in the house of commons next Tuesday about reports that at the Owestry camp eight men are sleeping in each tent, fifty are hospitalized, one has died of pneumonia, and that the food is poor and scarce.

These reports were denied by Capt. Cameron, who blamed the advance "fairy tales" for the outbreak of complaints.

Mobilize Navy Personnel.

LONDON, July 29 (AP).—Britain swung into a huge mobilization of naval forces today to bring her vast armaments to full strength for August and September. While regulars and reserves were summoned to duty to place the fleet at the peak of fighting power along with land and air services, sources close to the government said Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain was expected to make a statement Monday on the British-French-soviet talks.

It was said plans for immediate military staff conversations among the three powers would be announced then, along with reaffirmations of a desire for a three-power mutual aid pact.

Prepare Ships for Sea.

Officers and men of the regular navy—back from leaves which had been advanced a month so the fleet would be fully manned during the period regarded as most likely to produce international tension—set about readying ships to go to sea. Some 12,000 reservists packed their kits to report Monday. After an inspection by King George VI. on Aug. 9, reserve vessels will join regulars in the biggest peacetime war games in Britain's history.

Reinforcement of naval power marks another step in the show of force which the government hopes will impress Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany with Britain's sincerity of purpose.

Spanish Men Made Subject to Call for Work for State

BURGOS, Spain, July 29 [U. P.]—All Spanish men between the ages of 18 and 50 will henceforth be subject to personal service to the state or to pay a cash equivalent of such service. An official decree published today made such service obligatory, either to be worked out personally or paid for according to the daily earnings of each individual. Personal services will be expended on municipal and provincial public works.

IRISH CONTINUE RUSH FOR HOME FROM ENGLAND

Deportation Act Does What Police Couldn't.

LONDON, July 29 (AP).—A flight of Irishmen to get out of reach of England's new anti-terrorist law accomplished today what hundreds of Scotland Yard detectives have been trying to do for six months—rid Britain of hundreds of Irish Republican army suspects.

The Irish mail train to the coast for the second time ran in two sections and three mail boats were necessary to take passengers to Ireland.

Special officers with sheaves of photographs carefully scrutinized the departing travelers, many of whom were accompanied by their families.

Lead 6 Through Crowd.

Six I. R. A. suspects were led through week-end holiday crowds at Euston station by Scotland Yard officials who placed them in a coach with drawn blinds.

"The man with a slouch," who had been detained for questioning in connection with the King's Cross station explosion last Wednesday, was said to be among them. Dr. Donald Campbell, Edinburgh lecturer, was killed in this blast.

Fifteen I. R. A. suspects were reported deported thus far under the new law.

Believe Ringleader Seized.

Four men were jailed and detectives said they believed one was a ringleader of the I. R. A. He had been employed as a workman at a military camp near Cove, where a strike of 2,000 laborers was settled last Wednesday.

Acting under the new law, which gives the home office broad powers to deal with terrorism and deport suspects, raiding squads made numerout visits only to find most of the suspects gone.

As a precaution against possible I. R. A. terrorism during their nine hour journey to Scotland, the exact hour of departure of King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth for an eleven weeks' vacation at Balmoral castle was kept secret today. A palace spokesman said the royal special would leave "some time Monday evening."

HITLER INSPECTS FLOOD DAMAGED WESTERN FORTS

Move on Danzig Awaits His O. K. of Repairs.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 29.—Adolf Hitler, accompanied by his foreign minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, and army chiefs flew to Saarbrucken on the French border today to inspect German fortifications. He also was to inspect troops on duty in the forts and those training in the region.

Late in the afternoon Hitler left for Bayreuth to attend a few more opera performances at the Wagner festival and Von Ribbentrop returned to Salzburg.

Well informed sources declared the purpose of Hitler's visit to the Saar region was to convince himself of the progress of the work done to rebuild the units damaged by floods last spring and to alter some of the lines endangered by occasional high water. Germans deny, however, that the spring floods damaged the fortifications.

Holds Up Danzig Move.

Some experts assert that until Hitler is convinced that the western border forts are in perfect condition he will make no move to incorporate Danzig into the German state.

Floods in Upper Silesia are reported to be the worst in several years and are endangering newly built fortification lines there as well as the countryside. Near Ratibor, the Oder river reached a height of twenty-three feet—the highest level on record. Three farm workers were killed when a wagon carrying eleven persons tried to cross flooded fields near Gleiwitz. Several villages were evacuated when flood waters reached a depth of ten feet in the streets.

The army has been called out to help in salvaging harvested crops being swept away by the floods. Soldiers are busy fishing sheaves of grain from the turbulent waters and rescuing live stock.

Lack of Help Delays Harvest.

In many parts of Germany harvest work is delayed because of the shortage of help and machinery. In many cases heavy rains have damaged crops and will make harvesting operations more difficult. Many farm workers have been called to the colors, but authorities now are instructing the army to allow some of them to return to the fields for the harvest season.

Many students without jobs of national importance during their vacations have been ordered to work as volunteer farm hands.

The Hitler Youth organization has issued an urgent appeal to all students over 14 years of age to volunteer their services for the remainder of their holidays, which end about the middle of August.

In Berlin and other big cities Hitler Youth leaders called on parents whose children are under 14 to urge that their girls and boys be allowed to go to the country and to help with the farm work.

In many small German universities students have been slow in volunteering for farm service. They were ordered to report and those who continued to resist were warned they would lose credits of a half year term if they failed to volunteer.

King Leopold places a fatherly hand on the shoulder of his youngest son, Prince Albert, as they arrive at church.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, July 29 [Special].—When the Belgian national festival was held here recently King Leopold and his children attended a Te Deum in the Church of SS. Michel and Gudule. As they entered the church the king put a fatherly hand on the shoulder of his youngest son, Prince Albert of Liege.

POPE MAY ISSUE ENCYCLICAL ON PEACE AUG. 15

ROME, July 29 [U. P.]. — Pope Pius XII. was reported today to be working on his first encyclical which may be issued Aug. 15 as an appeal to statesmen and rulers of the world to intensify their efforts toward maintenance of peace.

Diplomatic reports have forecast that a critical period in European tension will be from mid-August until mid-September, when some sources believe a climax will be reached in Germany's campaign for return of Danzig.

The news agency Corrispondenza said that the pope was working on the encyclical in seclusion for many hours daily. It said that the document would include an exhortation to Catholics throughout the world to intensify their prayers.

JAPANESE BOMB AMERICAN GIRLS' SCHOOL IN CHINA

Red Cross Hospital Hit in Raid on Wuchow.

PEKING, China, July 29 [U. P.].—The American embassy today said that sixteen Japanese planes had bombed and burned the girls' school of the Southern Baptist Stout Memorial hospital at Wuchow, Kwangsi province.

Arrow locates scene of Japanese air raid.

Chinese reports said the raid, which occurred on July 26, struck at densely populated areas of Wuchow, killing sixty persons and injuring 330. They said two demolition bombs hit a Red Cross hospital and eight incendiary bombs fell on the Baptist mission. The Chinese reports said four missiles fell within the Stout hospital compound.

More than 100 bombs were dropped, the reports said.

Japs and British Clash.

SHANGHAI, July 29 (AP).—British-Japanese friction flared anew tonight in an incident which brought Japanese and British troops face to face on a disputed international settlement boundary.

The Japanese temporarily detained four British soldiers and threw up a barrier along the British defense zone, which drew a strong British military protest as an encroachment on British guarded territory.

Thousands of terrified Chinese fled into the British area before a Japanese naval force of 200 closed the gaps between the barricades on the boundary between the Japanese and British defense sectors.

The barricades extended along the entire mile and a half length of North Kiangsi road, from Soochow creek to the northern limit of the British area.

Hold Anti-British Parade.

The fresh friction occurred as the anti-British campaign in North China spread to Pehtaiho, seacoast resort northeast of Tientsin, with the parading of paid Chinese demonstrators. The Chinese coolies said they were paid 3 cents apiece and a bottle of soda pop by the Japanese.

The trouble in Shanghai started when four Seaforth highlanders in a military truck entered the Japanese defense sector to repair barbed wire. The British said they were under the impression the territory was British.

Japanese forces quickly blocked off the alleyway in which the British were working by stretching barbed wire across the exit and held the highlanders and their truck for two hours and a half as British officers negotiated with the Japanese for their release.

The Japanese in the meantime, working at top speed, strung three strands of wire along the length of North Kiangsi road.

Guerrillas Dynamite Train.

Chinese guerrillas were reported to have blown the locomotive of a passenger-freight train off the track in a dynamite and machine gun attack on the Shanghai-Nanking railway.

The Japanese spokesman said 400 Chinese participated in the attack, 160 miles west of Shanghai. All trafic was halted.

The train, a local, carried mostly farmers as passengers. The guards were Japanese. The spokesman said a number of persons were killed in the machine gunning which followed blasting of the locomotive and derailment of eight cars.

The spokesman said it was the third successful attack on the railroad since February, 1938, and expressed surprise that the guerrillas did not wait for one of the expresses which run twice daily.

Lift Shameen Blockade.

HONGKONG, July 29 (AP).—The Japanese army today removed nearly all restrictions on entry into and exit from Shameen, the foreign area at Canton. The restrictions drew a protest Thursday from Myrl S. Myers, American consul-general.

The restrictions, mostly lengthy searching and questioning of Chinese, were imposed Thursday when a Japanese naval order halting all navigation for two weeks on the Canton, or Pearl, river went into effect.

Myers protested because Chinese employés of the consulate-general had been held up several hours at the barriers. The consulate-general is on Shameen, which is wholly occupied by the British and French concessions.

Britain Protests Agitation.

LONDON, July 29 (AP).—British officials said today that Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, ambassador to Japan, had been instructed to make representations to the Tokio government over continuation of anti-British demonstrations in the orient.

ENZO FIERMONTE GETS PRISON SENTENCE IN FRENCH CRASH CASE

DIJON, France, July 29 (AP).—Enzo Fiermonte, former husband of Mrs. Madeline Force Astor Dick, socially prominent American, was given a conditional sentence of two months in prison and fined $26.50 today for negligence in an automobile accident on June 9, 1938. Miss Marion Whitworth of New York City, who was injured in the crash, received provisional damages of $530. She had asked for $20,440.

The court approved the sentence against Fiermonte, an Italian who formerly was a prize fighter. The accident occurred near Auxonne, France, Fiermonte's car striking a tree and overturning. Miss Whitworth was treated at an Auxonne hospital for rib fractures. The crash occurred just two days before Mrs. Dick was granted a divorce at West Palm Beach, Fla., on grounds of extreme cruelty. Mrs. Dick is the widow of John Jacob Astor.

JAPAN TIGHTENS AXIS TIES WITH NAZI TRADE PACT

New Treaty Interpreted as Reply to America.

TOKIO, July 30 [Sunday] (AP).—The initialing in Berlin of a new German-Japanese trade treaty was interpreted here today as enabling the Japanese government to save face domestically after the shock of America's abrupt denunciation of the 1911 American-Japanese trade pact.

The agreement with Germany was initialed Friday and yesterday the foreign office gave the development unusual attention by issuing a statement stressing the significance of the pact as strengthening the anti-communist front.

Tightens Axis Ties.

"Japan will be able to get an augmented supply of articles from Germany required in times of peace as well as war," the statement said. "The agreement brings Japan into still closer relationship with its collaborators against the comintern."

Germany, Italy, Japan, Manchukuo, Hungary, and Spain are bound together to combat communism.

"It is a matter for congratulation that through agreements such as the trade agreement with Manchukuo and Italy and the present Germany-Japanese agreement, the anti-comintern axis is being steadily strengthened in economic and other spheres," the statement added.

Some circles interpreted the special mention of Japan's new ability to get articles required in times of peace as well as war as a hint to the United States of America that steps thereby were being taken to soften the blow of any arms embargo.

Nazi Envoy Makes Statement.

Japanese newspapers quoted Maj. Gen. Eugen Ott, German ambassador to Tokio, as saying:

"The new agreement is an expression of the will of both nations to promote relations in the fields of not only economics but also of politics."

Many observers considered the German-Japanese action a maneuver clearly linked with the American abrogation of the American-Japanese treaty last Wednesday.

It was stressed that the important question for Japan was whether the United States would follow its denunciation with any other step, such as an arms embargo.

New Brunswick's Minister of Health Dies After Crash

St. BASIL, N. B., July 29 (AP).—P. H. Laporte, 60 years old, New Brunswick's minister of health and labor, died today from injuries received when his car plunged into a highway washout late last night.

CHEVROLET

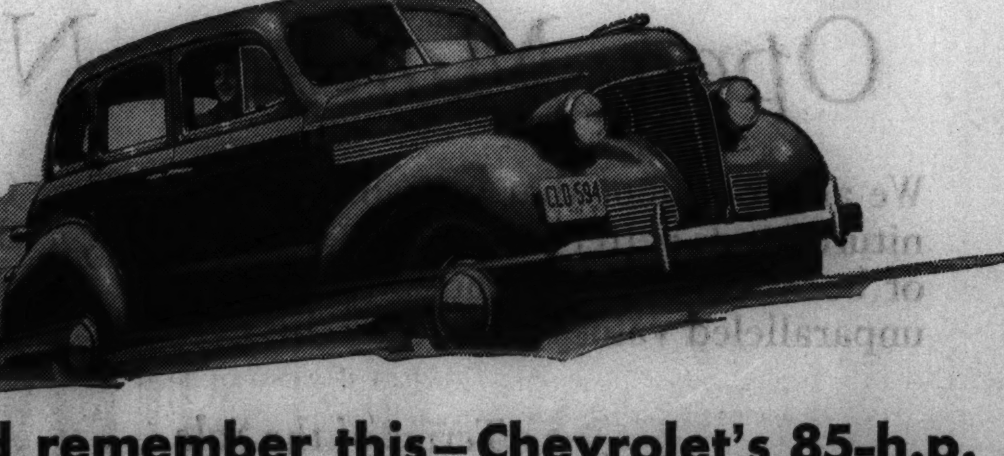
IT'S THE MOST ECONOMICAL CAR IN ITS FIELD!



THOUSANDS of motorists, in recent months, have subjected 1939 Chevrolets to the Mileage Meter test. In cars equipped with accurate gauges for feeding a measured quantity of fuel to the engine, these thousands have actually seen how the 1939 Chevrolet stretches out each gallon of fuel to make it go farther—extra miles farther. Chevrolet dealers dared to stage these tests because they were willing—in fact, eager—to let the public know the truth about Chevrolet's "miles per gallon."

But what about oil—"miles per quart"? We could quote figures—but, unless you drive a Chevrolet, you would find them hard to believe. The fact is that the 1939 Chevrolet is unbelievably economical of oil—because the oil stays in the engine, where it belongs.

Then, consider upkeep and tires. Every motorist knows of Chevrolet's traditional record for low cost of maintenance.

See your Chevrolet dealer today! Take the wheel of the nation's largest selling motor car and learn of Chevrolet's remarkable economy.

Only Chevrolet gives you all these features

MILWAUKEE MILK PRICES RAISED AT HOMES AND DAIRY

Retail Cost Up 1c; Farmer to Get 30c More.

Madison, Wis., July 29 [Special].—The state department of agriculture late today announced that, effective Aug. 1, the regulated retail price of fluid milk in Milwaukee will be increased from 10 to 11 cents per quart and the price to dairymen increased from $2.10 to $2.40 per hundred pounds.

The decision to raise producer and consumer prices, reached after a two day session of the state board of agriculture with Ralph E. Ammon, director of the department of agriculture, was attributed to increased costs of production because of the drouth. The new order, Ammon said, provides for adjustments upward in the price of surplus milk.

Long Drawn Fight.

The Milwaukee fluid milk price situation has been a subject of continual controversy since the state department, last April 1, issued an order lowering the retail price from 12 to 10 cents per quart and the price paid to producers from $2.71 to $2.10 per hundred pounds.

Many producers protested vigorously, particularly those around Waukesha, who deliver in Milwaukee, even sending a delegation to visit Gov. Julius P. Heil in an effort to obtain a rehearing on the department's price reduction order.

Today's order, which becomes effective next Tuesday, represents a compromise between demands for continuation of the present price level and demands for restoration of prices prevailing before April 1.

Law Believed Doomed.

The present law, under which the state department of agriculture fixes consumer and producer milk prices in more than thirty Wisconsin milk markets, expires Dec. 31, 1939. The lower house several days ago killed a bill to extend the law for two years, after amending it to exempt farmers who sell milk on their own farms and guaranteeing producers one-half of the fixed retail price.

Even with these modifications the house refused, 48 to 33, to pass the milk control measure—an action interpreted generally as a death blow to continuation of thep resent law, which first was enacted in 1933 and twice extended for two year periods.

More than a thousand letters of inquiry have been sent to leading Republicans, Mrs. Mabel B. Krutchkoff, women's division chairman said yesterday. Each man or woman accepted for the handbook will be given enough space to described his personal status, profession, offices held, addresses, and past candidacies. A small photograph will accompany each sketch.

Pictures of Mid-Pacific Rescue

When the tanker Associated arrived in San Francisco yesterday these pictures of the dramatic rescue of 209 passengers far out in the Pacific ocean were brought ashore with the survivors. The Japanese were forced to take to the sea when the freighter Bokuyo Maru sank in flames 1,125 miles east of Yokohama. This picture, taken from deck of the Associated, shows lifeboats as they approached the rescue ship with survivors.

Reach San Francisco

San Francisco, Cal., July 29 (AP).—The first hand account of the burning and sinking of the Bokuyo Maru was brought here today by the captain of the ship which rescued 209 persons. Three other persons died.

The Bokuyo Maru burned, exploded and sank 3,900 miles west of San Francisco on the morning of July 18. The rescue ship was the oil tanker Associated, en route from Manila to San Francisco, commanded by Capt. L. E. Hawkins of Oakland, Cal. Hawkins sped to the rescue on a distress call and came on four lifeboats of "exhausted, thirsty, and hungry people of all ages, packed tightly, with children tucked under seats."

One boat had a dead man—Second Officer Chira. There were a dozen injured. They had been afloat in the lifeboats about five hours.

Left behind were a stewardess and a 3 year old child whose fate never was determined. The stewardess was last seen putting her life preserver on a youngster and pushing him overboard.

Capt. Hawkins was informed the chief officer and chief engineer of the Bokuyo Maru "knocked out" Capt. S. Amano, put a life preserver on him, and threw him overboard because the captain had refused to leave the ship. Several children also were thrown overboard and picked up.

Asked what he thought happened to the missing child, Capt. Hawkins said "I saw a big shark right there."

This photograph, also taken from the deck of the rescue ship, shows a woman passenger from the flaming freighter as she climbed to safety aboard the Associated.

JULIANA EXPECTS ANOTHER BABY WITHIN 2 WEEKS

THE HAGUE, July 29 (AP).—Netherlanders hoped tonight that within two weeks they could celebrate the birth of Prince William of Orange-Nassau, first male heir to the throne of their little kingdom in almost a century.

Crown Princess Juliana, 30 years old and the only daughter of Queen Wilhelmina, is expecting her second child by mid-August. If it's a boy there will be no doubt as to his name. All kings of the house of Orange have been named William, and this precedent almost certainly would be maintained.

At the royal palace of Soestdyk preparations were under way for the royal arrival. Dr. J. de Groot, one of the two physicians attending the crown princess, took up residence in the palace today.

The Milligans were married in 1933 and separated last February. Mrs. Milligan's bill, filed by Attorney William R. Behanna of Waukegan, charged Milligan with cruelty. She asked custody of a son, Lawrence D. Jr., 3 years old.

The transposition of two lines of type on the first page of the graphic section of today's Sunday Tribune has garbled a quotation from the farewell address of George Washington, first president of the United States.

In refusing to run for a third term Washington really said: "I am influenced by no diminution of zeal for your future interest, no deficiency of grateful respect for your past kindness, but am supported by a full conviction that the step is compatible with both."

The transposition appears in the second paragraph of the Washington quotation in the graphic section at the top of the page. In the story therewith Washington's address is correctly quoted.

NEW YORK CITY PRICE OF MILK UP HALF CENT

New York, July 29 [Special].—Increases of ½ cent a quart in the price of retail home-delivered milk and 1 cent for half pints of heavy cream, effective on Tuesday, were announced today by the Borden company.

This is the second increase in the price of milk since the reinstitution of the federal-state marketing agreement, making the total increase 1½ cents a quart and bringing the price up to 13½ cents a quart for grade B milk and 16½ cents a quart for grade A milk.

In announcing the increase, William H. Marcussen, president of the company, said that the retail price advanced automatically under the marketing order of last Tuesday which increased the price paid to dairymen from $2 to $2.25 a hundredweight. This increase of 25 cents a hundredweight is more than ½ cent a quart.

While executives of Sheffield Farms company, Inc., were not reached for their comment on the Borden increase, it was reported that they would follow suit with an announcement, probably tomorrow. Borden and Sheffield are the two largest distributors of milk in the New York metropolitan area.

VOICE OF PEOPLE SWAYS CONGRESS ASSERTS BROOKS

Wayland Brooks yesterday told the Young Republican organization of the 12th ward at a picnic near Blue Island that in its recent firm attitude against Roosevelt proposals congress has been swayed by the voice of the people.

"Last week the people took the question of neutrality into their own hands," he said, "and snowed under the members of congress with letters demanding that no more power be given to the chief executive which might lead us into war.

"This week the small businesses of America spoke and told members of congress they were not interested in legislation creating loans for them but were interested in putting an end to further regulatory powers being placed in the hands of arbitrary commissions which would stifle business."

SKY MANEUVERS WILL MARK AIR CORPS BIRTHDAY

Army Aviation 30 Years Old This Week.

Washington, D. C., July 29 [Special].—High ranking officers of the army air corps and members of the general staff will watch with great interest a series of maneuvers on the Pacific coast on the occasion of the thirtieth birthday of the air corps next Wednesday. The games involve solution of a war problem calling for defense of 1,500 miles of sea coast and thousands of square miles of coastal frontier from an enemy attack by air.

Pursuit, attack and bombardment squadrons of the general headquarters air force stationed at March and Hamilton Fields, Cal., will work out the problem with the help of civilians who will operate a warning net consisting of observation stations eight miles apart throughout the problem's threatened area, which extends from the Mexican border to the Canadian border.

Civilians to Watch Sky.

These civilians will keep constant watch of the sky, and as soon as they detect planes will report to a predetermined center.

Staff officers at reporting stations, with huge maps before them, will plot the reports and transmit the information to headquarters for incorporation in a master map, so that fast pursuit squadrons may be sent out to intercept and attack the bombers of the invading force. This vast system extends from San Diego to Seattle.

In connection with the anniversary celebration the war department noted today that five of the army's first twenty-four military aviators, all of whom were qualified during 1912 and 1913, still remain in active service. Six others are retired. The rest are dead.

Those on active service are Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the air corps; Brig. Gen. Herbert A. Dargue, wing commander, Albrook field, Corozal, Canal Zone; Col. Lewis H. Brereton, Barksdale field, Shreveport, La.; Col. Frank P. Lahm, air officer on the staff of the commanding general, 2d Corps area, Governors Island, N. Y., and Col. Hollister Muller, coast artillery corps, organized reserves, Wilmington, Del.

Army Eyes 500 Mile Planes.

Dayton, O., July 29.—When the army air corps was inaugurated thirty years ago next Wednesday, a speed of forty-two miles an hour was tops. As the army prepared to celebrate the corps' thirtieth anniversary, military technicians here at Wright field, named for the brothers who invented the flying machine, are shooting confidently for speeds of around 500 miles an hour for some of the warplanes to be purchased in the current rearmament drive.

It was in Dayton that the Wright military plane, the first purchased by any world power, was built. It was an odd looking crate which weighed 800 pounds and was powered with a little twenty-five horse power motor driving a couple of wooden propellers. The government paid about $25,000 for it.

Today the air corps has one monster bomber weighing in excess of 60,000 pounds and the latest aviation engine will deliver 2,000 horse power to help speed its long range planes on nonstop flights of 3,500 miles.

Many Accidents in Early Days.

Early tests of military aircraft were sprinkled liberally with accidents, but a board of officers, appointed to consider the purchase of the Wright plane, recommended that it be acquired. The date was Aug. 2, 1909, and with the signature of the chief signal officer army aviation was born.

The Wright contract called for a heavier than air machine capable of carrying two persons with a combined weight of 350 pounds, sufficient fuel for a flight of 125 miles and able to remain continuously in the air for an hour with this load.

SEEK DISSOLUTION OF BAN ON WELLS HOUSING PROJECT

Judge John J. Lupe will be asked tomorow to dissolve the temporary injunction which he granted last Monday restraining the Chicago Housing authority from going ahead with the construction of the $8,000,000 Ida B. Wells housing project at Vincennes avenue and Pershing road.

The request will be made by Attorney Edgar A. Jonas, who originally obtained the injunction in behalf of Robert C. Geigel, 1431 Lunt avenue. Geigel, suing as a taxpayer, charged that the housing authority planned to award all contracts to one contractor, and that this would unnecessarily increase the project costs to the taxpayers. Judge Lupe issued the order with the observation that he wanted the project, which he described as worthy, to be completed as speedily as possible, and at the least possible expense.

A conference on the problem was held yesterday by housing authority lawyers, officials, and union heads. They held that the lowest of bids embracing the whole job was 10 per cent below previous bids for comparable projects in Chicago, and that nothing could be gained by forcing the issue raised in the injunction.

ATLANTIC FLIGHT INSURANCE RATES DOUBLE PACIFIC!

But It's Just the Newness, Agents Insist.

Accident insurance for passengers on trans-Atlantic clipper flights costs twice as much as insurance for trans-Pacific trips. This was disclosed in revised air insurance schedules for Atlantic clipper flights made available yesterday by Chicago insurance men.

Transoceanic airplane insurance is sold on a per flight basis only. It covers the passenger in case of death or disablement. Rates for the Atlantic flight are higher in spite of the fact that the Atlantic crossing is only about half the distance of the Pacific hop.

Costs $10 per Thousand.

A Yankee Clipper passenger under present rates is charged $10 for each $1,000 of insurance on a one way flight between New York and any European port. The round trip rate is $17.50. The distance to Lisbon, Portugal, is 3,600 miles, and it is 4,700 miles to Marseilles, France.

On the China Clipper flight the passenger insurance rate is $5 per $1,000 of insurance one way and $7.50 for the round trip. The flight is 8,700 miles, from Alameda, Cal., to Hongkong.

One reason for the higher rates on trans-Atlantic flights, insurance men said, is the newness of the service, whch was begun only a month ago. They explained that insurance statisticians were conservative and fixed high rates because they had no experience records on which to base their estimates.

Cut Pacific Rate in Half.

The one way insurance rate for passengers on the China Clipper flights when they were inaugurated nearly three years ago was $9 per $1,000 of insurance, or nearly twice the present charge of $5. The present rate went into effect last March.

When Atlantic Clipper flights were first scheduled last month airplane insurance agents quoted a rate of $10 per $1,000 for a one way trip and provided for no round trip reduction. This rate, however, applied only to the southern route via the Azores. For the northern flight, via Botwood, Newfoundland, the rate was $20 for one way. Recently the present rates were put into effect on both the northern and the southern routes.

Atlantic Weather Worse.

A second reason for charging higher premiums for Atlantic flights is that there appears to be greater uncertainty about weather conditions over the Atlantic than over the Pacific, insurance men said.

The transoceanic insurance policies are written as riders to ordinary accident insurance policies sold to cover domestic air travel on a yearly basis.

Clipper passengers must have regular domestic policies in order to buy the insurance for an ocean trip. The yearly rate for insurance on domestic air lines is $1.40 per $1,000. If a clipper passenger had no airplane insurance, but wanted $10,000 of protection for his ocean trip, he would have to pay $14 for an annual accident policy besides the clipper insurance premium for the trip.

Sells Globe Girdling Policy.

One insurance man in Chicago said he had recently sold a round the world airplane insurance policy. The cost was $19.20 per $1,000 for the complete circuit. It was made up as follows: $1.40 for domestic air line policy; $2.80 for coverage while flying over land outside the United States; $10 for the Atlantic ocean trip, and $5 for the Pacific ocean flight.

A $1,000 policy pays $1,000 benefit in the case of death or the loss of both hands, both feet, or the sight of both eyes. It pays $500 for the loss of one hand, one foot, or the loss of one eye.

CHICAGO'S HELP BARRED AS LAKE SUPERIOR RISES

Law Forbids Opening of Canal Gates.

Sanitary district officials said yesterday that reported high water in Lake Superior could be reduced if Chicago were permitted to increase its diversion of water from Lake Michigan.

Reports from Sault Ste Marie, Mich., said Lake Superior has continued to rise during the last few weeks despite efforts of United States engineers to regulate its flow through the St. Mary's river. The flow is increased by opening all possible sluice ways and dam gates on the river at Sault Ste Marie.

Far Higher Than Other Lakes.

Yesterday Lake Superior was 603.4 feet above sea level, compared with 579.77 for Lake Michigan and 572.38 for Lake Erie.

The diversion of Lake Michigan water through the sanitary district canal was decreased from 6,000 cubic feet per second in 1930 to 1,500 last January. The reduction was in accordance with a Supreme court ruling made in 1930.

Because of the forced reduction of the canal flow the sanitary district has constructed a series of intercepting sewers and treatment plants costing more than $60,000,000. Before the reduction the sewage was dumped into the canal. Treatment is necessary with only 1,500 cubic feet of water per second to feed the canal.

Powerless to Boost Flow.

William H. Trinkaus, chief engineer for the district, said: "Without doubt an increase in Chicago's water diversion would aid the high water problem in Lake Superior, but we are not at liberty to increase our takings."

United States army engineers reported yesterday that in June Lake Superior was .46 of a foot higher than it was in May and .16 of a foot higher than in June, 1938. Last month Lake Superior was .53 of a foot higher than the June average for the last ten years. Lake Michigan showed the same increase over the ten year average.

Gen. Sir Hubert Gough.

LONDON, July 29 [U. P.].—Gen. Sir Hubert Gough, 68 years old, who commanded the British 5th army at the battles of the Somme and Ypres, and whose men bore the brunt of the great German offensive of March, 1918, was offered a new war job today—escorting mothers and children to a railroad station in event of an air raid.

Gough disclosed that Prime Minister Chamberlain had rejected his offer of help, but that later he had received instruction from the London county council to escort mothers and children from a designated assembly point to a station in any possible air raid.

Commenting on this proposal, Sir Hubert said: "It seems I am most useful as a nurse. Still, there's always one job I'm not too old for. I could be prime minister."

NATIONAL GUARD BEGINS TRAINING AT CAMP GRANT

Camp Grant, Ill., July 29 [Special].—Seven thousand Illinois National Guardsmen arrived here today for their annual two weeks of field training. The troop movement, by trains and motor trucks, was completed without accident or confusion.

Before noon the regimental areas, extending for a mile along Kishwaukee road, were dotted with brown pyramidal tents and the young men who yesterday left jobs in offices and factories were, in appearance and by their coördinated actions, real soldiers.

The first day in camp, after the work of putting up tents and stowing luggage and equipment was completed, was devoted to rest and recreation. Tomorrow church services will be the only formal assemblies. On Monday, however, will begin the schedule of field training, including tactical marches, drills, specialist schools, and range firing practice.

ARMOUR WORKERS VOTE THURSDAY ON UNION CHOICE

CIO Demands Bargaining Right in Soap Plant.

Employés of the Armour & Co. soap plant at 31st street and Racine avenue will vote Thursday on the proposal to permit the Packinghouse Workers' Organizing committee, an affiliate of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, to act as their bargaining agent. The date of the election, ordered in Washington last Wednesday by the National Labor Relations board, was set yesterday by the labor board's regional office here.

The election is the result of a demand by the C. I. O. for a certificate of representation in the plant from the NLRB. The union made the request on the basis of the number of membership cards it had. Edwin S. Smith, NLRB board member, favored granting immediate certificates, but was overruled. Thus, the vote of the employés will decide the issue.

Outlines Election Procedure.

I. S. Dorfman, acting regional NLRB director yesterday outlined the procedure in Thursday's election. He said that those eligible to vote are production and maintenance employés in the plant who were employed as of last Wednesday, when the order for election was issued. The number of eligible voters is not yet known.

The election will be held in a garage at 3109 South Throop street from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. At the garage entrance will sit four union representatives, four company representatives, and three or four NLRB agents.

Each voter's name and plant badge number will be compared by the NLRB men with those on a pay roll list supplied by the company. If the man's right to vote is not challenged by either side, he will immediately be given a ballot by the NLRB official.

In a curtained booth the voter will mark an X in the "Yes" or "No" square in answer to the printed question: "Do you desire to be represented for purposes of collective bargaining by the United Packinghouse Workers' Local Industrial union, No. 347, division 8, of the Packinghouse Workers' Organizing committee, affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations?"

All Count Ballots.

The votes will be counted by all union, company, and NLRB representatives. The union and company agents will sign a statement attesting to the accuracy of the count and the ballots then will be turned over to the NLRB representatives.

If the employé's right to vote is challenged by either side, he will be allowed to mark a ballot, but his ballot will be placed in an envelope marked "Challenged" and then in another envelope bearing his name, his pay roll number, the name of the challenger and the reason for the challenge. This will also be inserted in the ballot box.

If the election is close enough to warant consideration of the challenged votes, a trial examiner will be sent by the NLRB at Washington to conduct a hearing. If the vote is overwhelmingly for or against the union, and the number of challenged votes insufficient to change the final results, the votes will not be counted. Should the trial examiner, in the former case, decides that the specific challenged votes should be allowed, the outer envelopes are removed and the vote added to the respective side. Dorfman said that usually the challenged votes are too few to make much difference either way.

Ten Days to Report.

Within ten days from the date of election, according to Dorfman, his report of the outcome is filed with the NLRB in Washington. Any objections either side may have to portions of the report also are sent to the board. The NLRB then will rule on whether the CIO union has the majority of employés and therefore the right to represent them in collective bargaining.

ATTACK OMAHA MAYOR.

Omaha, Neb., July 29 [Special].—Officers of the Armour Employés' Protective association today made a letter attacking Mayor Dan Butler's recent trip to Chicago in connection with the threatened packing house strike as "in the interest of the CIO packing house union."

If the CIO calls a strike in Armour's South Omaha plant, the letter asserts, "not more than 5 per cent of the hourly paid employés of Armour & Co. will respond. But if this organization which you are fostering and encouraging should call a strike and import outside thugs and hoodlums to intimidate the members of our organization, we intend to resist such acts with the utmost of force."

CRUSHED TO DEATH BY CRANE.

South Beloit, Ill., July 29 [Special].—John Dowd, 40 years old, of Janesville, Wis., was crushed to death late yesterday between the boom and the deck of a crane at the Atwood Davis Sand company gravel pit here.

MR. ROOSEVELT AND RFC.

In his speech at Pittsburgh during his campaign for reëlection in 1936 Mr. Roosevelt made the point that the debt of the country had not increased as much as his critics said it had, for the reason that the government had acquired 6 billions of assets to offset the debt. That had a convincing sound and no doubt persuaded many people that the financial mismanagement had not been as bad as the opposition had represented it.

Within a year after the election the facts about the alleged assets acquired by the government became known. The 6 billions of which the President spoke comprised the properties acquired by the Reconstruction Finance corporation and the other government agencies which had been engaged in a great variety of financial operations. The senate committee on reorganization in 1937 ordered an audit made of the Reconstruction Finance corporation. It was found that more than 2½ billion of the paper assets was worthless. In other words, more than 40 per cent of the assets of which the President had told the people did not actually exist.

The balance sheet of the Reconstruction Finance corporation at the end of 1937 showed that it had assets of 5 billion dollars. Deducting from this amount the worthless items, there remained 2½ billions. Against this there was nearly 4 billion dollars of debt and a half billion dollars in capital stock which had been subscribed by the treasury. Thus the corporation was insolvent. There had been some pretty fair sized insolvencies during the depression, but none as big as the RFC's. It set a record. Its stock was worthless, and its notes were not worth much more than 50 cents on the dollar. Some people had the courage to say so.

On Feb. 8, 1938, congress took action to make RFC solvent. A bill was passed and signed by the President authorizing the treasury department to cancel 2 billion 691 million dollars of the indebtedness of the corporation. As a result of being relieved of two-thirds of its debts, RFC was solvent again.

Last week Jesse Jones resigned as chairman of the RFC to accept a promotion to the newly created office of administrator of federal loans. Accepting his resignation from his old job, the President wrote Mr. Jones a dear Jesse letter, containing the following remarkable paragraphs:

"Your statement that the Reconstruction Finance corporation 'has sound assets sufficient to pay all of its debts and return to the treasury the entire capital stock invested in it, with something in addition,' reminds me that in 1933, 1934, 1935, and 1936 a few people in the executive branch of the government, more people in the congress of the United States, and many individuals and newspapers in civil life were announcing to the nation that the Reconstruction Finance corporation was broke and that the government would not get back more than 50 cents on the dollar.

"These people were in some cases honest in their belief, but in many cases were making these ghoulish statements with the hope that their own type of partisanship would thereby be served. In either case their action did little to encourage the 'confidence' they were so loudly talking about. In either case their gloomy predictions proved false.

"I call this matter of history to your attention because it is illustrative of the difficulties which public servants find in carrying out their duties."

The President made no mention of the fact that the RFC became solvent by the cancelation of 2¾ billion dollars of its debt. And no correction has ever been made by the President of the untrue statement that the government had acquired 6 billion dollars of assets to offset its debts.

On the record the President is guilty of misrepresenting the financial condition of the treasury when he was seeking reëlection in 1936, and of making a statement in 1939 from which material information was withheld. The president of a private business corporation who, in submitting himself for reëlection, flagrantly exaggerated the value of its assets, and who subsequently made a statement from which essential information was omitted would certainly hear from the stockholders when the facts became known.

THE PARIAHS.

In an appraisal by the Albany staff of the New York Times of the effect on various state departments of the $26,500,000 economy program enforced by the Republican legislature of New York appeared the following sentence:

"Commissioner Frieda Miller asserted that the cut in workmen's compensation activities is really serious and unjustified, since it does not represent a saving to the state, but is charged to the employers who are insured."

Here is a piece of New Deal reasoning that goes a long way toward explaining why the present depression is the longest and most severe in our history, and why we still have 10,873,000 unemployed [A. F. of L. estimate for May].

The New Deal state is no longer a state of all the people. It is the state of the rulers, the same state that Louis XIV. placed in his own person. It has its retainers, those who live on its bounty. It has its treasury and may properly exhibit concern that it not be emptied too swiftly, but for those who fill that treasury it manifests no concern.

Thus, for the state to save money may, in exceptional circumstances, be desirable, but that money should be saved for taxpayers is not a matter for consideration by the proprietors of the state. It is, in Commissioner Miller's words, unjustified. The taxpayers are the serfs who dwell outside the walls of its citadel, and the pariahs among these serfs are the employers. Anything that happens to them is still too good for them.

CAN MR. BROWN GO TO TOWN?

Edward Eagle Brown of the First National bank is, it is needless to say, highly esteemed by his fellow bankers and the business community generally. The bank has prospered under his management, getting out of hock to the RFC and earning dividends in an era when it has been made increasingly hard for any one to earn anything.

We feel that a few kind words on Mr. Brown are particularly in order at the moment because Mr. Brown is entering on harrowing days and may need encouragement. Whether he knows anything about it or not, Mr. Brown is in the baseball business.

J. Louis Comiskey was one of the few remaining owners of big league baseball clubs who made baseball their primary business. When he laid out money for players he had to get it back at the box office. He couldn't reimburse himself from lumber, or automobile, or chewing gum, or icebox profits.

Despite these limitations Mr. Comiskey did well by the White Sox fans. He was proud of his club and anxious that it should remain the property of his family. The First National's trusteeship is in the nature of an interregnum until the small son is old enough to take over.

Bankers are popularly supposed not to be so good at running businesses, and baseball is a particularly screwy business. But, strangely enough, bankers seem to be doing a pretty fair job of running the Brooklyn Dodgers, with the assistance of those two strong, silent men, Messrs. McPhail and Durocher. Their success is positively painful in some quarters, as our Cubs can testify.

And so, while Mr. Brown need not abandon all hope, we have no doubt that he embarks on his duties with some trepidation. Maybe he can explain to his stockholders why earnings on the bank's governments have declined, but what is he going to say when the fans start asking about a nine game losing streak?

The Sox could do with a star catcher. Suppose Mr. Dykes calls him up some evening and says that Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Barrow of the Yankees, having been standing too long in the sun, are willing to part with Mr. William Dickey for a mere $100,000. Is Mr. Brown going to dig into the trust estate for the hundred grand, or is he going to ask Mr. Dykes why he wants another catcher when he already has three and can use only one at a time?

Mr. Brown's bank has a lot of statisticians, and the baseball business is replete with statistics. But can Mr. Brown's statisticians make clear to him the difference between an infielder who bats .290 and an infielder who bats .285, but can also step on umpires' toes and cause opposing pitchers to throw wild to the bases? How is Mr. Brown going to feel about stepping on umpires' toes? He certainly wouldn't approve of people stepping on his vice presidents' toes.

Then there is the problem of obsolescence. What is Mr. Brown, who has extremely competent gentlemen of 60 working for him, going to think when Mr. Dykes reports that one of his outfielders, age 33, is fraying at the edges? Is he going to think that Mr. Dykes hasn't been taking good care of his outfielders, leaving them out in the rain, maybe?

Of course it might be possible for the statisticians to set up annual schedules of depletion for ball players, just as they do for coal mines. But what are they going to do about Mr. Ted Lyons? If they write his arm off the books at so much a year, what are they going to do about his head, which gets wiser as his arm gets weaker?

All in all, it seems that Mr. Brown is in something of a spot. He can be thankful for one thing, though. Dizzy Dean isn't an asset of the Comiskey estate.

MORE IRON FOR THE NAZIS.

The Germans themselves, through Field Marshal Goering, commissar of their four year plan, now confess their shortage of raw materials. This includes not only the materials which the reich must import, and which it has difficulty in getting because of its shortage of foreign exchange, but coal and iron ore, the prime essentials of industry.

The great Bell Island mine of Newfoundland, a British colony, is selling virtually its full output this year, a million tons of iron ore, to Germany. The French, as was noted in these columns the other day, recently negotiated a trade treaty by which they will continue to ship iron ore to Germany.

If the Nazis fight, they must pin their faith on a smashing blow and a quick victory. They know they have less chance today in a long, drawn out war than had the kaiser's Germany. That means that the munitions on which they depend must be those manufactured before war begins. The French and British, of course, realize this as fully as does the German general staff.

Nevertheless, they continue to supply the raw materials that Germany needs so sorely for its war machine. That being the case, we are more at a loss than ever to understand why President Roosevelt and his senate followers, who want him to have the power to declare discriminatory embargoes after war begins, can't keep their shirts on.

Italy to Boost Taxes

[Associated Press Correspondence.]

ROME.—With its budget swollen by the preparations to meet possible war, Premier Mussolini's government is preparing to tap Italian pockets deeper for taxes.

Count Paolo Thaon di Revel, Italian finance minister, has served notice on the people to be ready for further sacrifices in an effort to cover their country's heavy budget deficits.

With diplomats wondering whether Italian finances, already deeply in the red, would stand the strain of a European war in the wake of the Ethiopian and Spanish adventures, Thaon di Revel seems to have given the government's answer. He told the senate, in effect, that Italy was fundamentally sound and the people capable of paying the nation's way.

Tax reforms to stop leaks and increase revenues, however, have been deemed necessary by the government, along with the stimulation of still greater agricultural and industrial production to provide a further tax basis.

Business and property are expected to shoulder much of the new burden, with perhaps increased income taxes also in the offing. Mussolini has given orders for:

1. Fair distribution of taxation.
2. Simplification of the tax procedure.
3. Efficiency in the use of the revenues.

Taxpayers now carry most of the burden of Italy's ordinary budget. But the extraordinary expenses, largely for armaments, have required extraordinary financial measures—the floating of loans, issuance of treasury notes, levies on real estate and capital, and the sale of foreign securities and Italian securities issued abroad. Another large budget deficit is forecast for the new fiscal year.

Italy's financial plight is shown by the budget figures of the finance minister. He estimated that the government will need about $1,543,262,000 for its ordinary expenses during the current year. It has been able to foresee only about $1,293,000,000 in revenues. The budget starts out, therefore, with a visible deficit of about $250,263,000.

But the finance minister estimated that expenditures are more likely to be $1,689,600,000, owing to the recent increase in civil servants' pay, the expenses in newly acquired Albania, and rearmament. Thus the deficit becomes $391,526,000, and that does not include the extraordinary expenditures which may be made.

The Italian budget deficits have been chronic since before the war in Ethiopia. Since 1934 Italy has gone about $2,897,611,000 into the red. During the past year the excess of government spending over its revenues added about $671,256,000 to the deficit.

Less will need to be spent on Ethiopia this year, and the expense of fighting the Spanish civil war for Gen. Francisco Franco is ended, Thaon di Revel said.

But three costly items remain on the Fascist program—further colonization of Libya, the military occupation and development of Albania, and the need to keep up with Great Britain and France in the European arms race.

Albania's merger with Italy by the army's seizure of that Balkan neighbor last April cost about $15,520,000 at the outset, mostly for the forces of occupation. Italy is keeping troops variously estimated at 60,000 to 100,000 men in Albania.

Another expensive item was the partial mobilization of a million men in Italy last spring when things looked dark in Europe. The cost of that gesture is estimated at $15,789,000.

Heavy at the top of Italy's financial structure is the arms program, which the government considers essential "in a world which tends to divide into two opposing camps and is preparing for war."

The fighting forces will swallow up at least $441,645,000, or about 29 per cent of the government's money, during the current year.

More than $69,000,000 of the total is allotted for new arms. The navy plans to spend $32,315,790 on new ships. The army has been allotted $26,315,790 for expenses which military experts believe to cover frontier fortifications, modern arms and equipment, and the building up of reserves of munitions and supplies. The air force is spending $10,526,315 on new planes, equipment, and munitions.

Public debt charges for the current fiscal year [beginning July 1, 1939] have been estimated at $363,105,000, or about 24 per cent of the budget.

Preparedness for war and payments on the public debt, therefore, account for more than half of the Italian budget. Treasury bonds in circulation last March 31 amounted to about $642,263,000.

Thaon di Revel contended that such a situation requires a program of taxation which will assure normal receipts sufficient to cover both normal expenses and extraordinary expenditures which have "assumed a permanent character."

At the same time he indicated that a way is being sought to lighten the burden of indirect taxes on the poorer classes, which feel the weight of increased living costs, up 2.4 per cent within a year. These taxes, mostly levied on business in various forms or on the sales of certain goods such as coffee, are passed along to the consumer in the price he pays for his purchases.

One major reform item is the contemplated revision of land and property valuations on the tax rolls, where they have stood at the same figures for years, although the property actually has increased in value.

In trying to balance its budget, the government, therefore, also is striving to avoid cause for unrest among the populace.

Blanket wage increases in business, industry, and the civil service last March were regarded by foreign observers as a partial measure of social appeasement in an effort to close the gap between salaries and prices. The increase in government salaries and pensions, incidentally, is costing the state about $11,895,000 a year.

Food shortages and inflation are two things the government has managed to avoid. Italians may have to tighten their belts occasionally because of economic stress, but their diets remain about the same, without the sacrifice of butter, eggs, and other foodstuffs exacted of their German counterparts.

Currency circulation, which was about $1,199,210,526 early this year, is reported normal. Finance officials indicate that Italy's currency has kept a gold coverage of about 17 per cent. Gold in the vaults of the Bank of Italy was reported at $201,368,421 at the end of 1938.

Editorial of the Day

UNNECESSARY ILLNESS.

[Illinois State Journal.]

Twenty-five new cases of typhoid fever are reported by the Illinois state health department. From the east comes news of the outbreak of smallpox in Connecticut. Cases of smallpox are reported from time to time in Illinois. Medical leaders in the United States report the malady is on the increase since 1934.

Both diseases can be prevented. Vaccination for smallpox has been known and practiced for almost a century and a half. Protective inoculation will safeguard against typhoid fever, but the best preventive practice is safeguarding water supplies by removing sources of contamination and isolating carriers.

For cases of smallpox particularly is there little excuse. Physicians recommend vaccination at least every ten years, preferably every five. As practiced today, this is a painless procedure which takes only a minute or two. It is a small precaution to take against a disease which may disfigure one's face for life if it does not result in death, always a possibility with smallpox if it takes the virulent form.

How to Keep Well By Dr. Irving S. Cutter

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Cutter will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

HAY FEVER IS ON THE WAY.

WITHIN a week or two the hay fever season will be upon us. Many of our friends will exhibit the coryzalike symptoms—bleary bloodshot eyes, sneezing, and general miserableness. Fortunate are the ones who are able to embark on an ocean voyage or travel beyond the limits of the particular substance to which they are sensitive. But those who cannot leave are obliged to make the best of the situation—exposed constantly to the irritant.

Let us hope that medical science, one of these days, will discover the underlying factors. About all we know now is that the tendency is inherited. The attack can be incited—precipitated—by one or more of over a thousand different elements. Some sufferers are increasingly susceptible year after year, while others observe that they are far less so. There are many examples of persons who again and again have fled headlong before the ragweed avalanche only to find in time that they have become practically immune. This is exactly what physicians attempt to accomplish in a shorter period by means of vaccines.

The reason we have so much trouble with ragweed is that the plant is a prolific producer of pollen. Furthermore, it is a blot on the landscape, and every roadside, vacant lot, or back yard may harbor it. The seeds are windsown over wide areas, and constant vigilance must be practiced to keep it down. Incidentally, it is one of our most pernicious soil destroyers, sapping important minerals and nitrogen from what should be fertile acres.

Lest we forget, we should remind ourselves of other common causes of allergy. Because the hands and forearms of bakers are covered with flour continually, they may develop a sensitivity to wheat. A white gold wrist watch containing nickel may be responsible for skin lesions, as perspiration dissolves minute fractions of the metal. A lad may be perfectly free from trouble until some one presents him with a pup or kitten, whereupon, within a few days, sneezing may begin—the result of contact with animal fur or dandruff.

In considering foods we may look upon cooking as an important safeguard, as many raw edibles may be guilty. These same materials, thoroughly boiled or baked, may be innocent. Here the digestive tract plays an important rôle, in that the enzymes in the stomach and along the course of the intestinal canal may neutralize the agent which is responsible.

We know that sometimes cotton bedding may be a necessary substitute for hair, feathers, or wool. Strangely enough, in an effort to escape one form of allergy a person may jump from the frying pan into the fire. R. A. Keen relates that one of his patients, a chronic hay fever victim, decided to take up chicken farming—whereupon he developed a severe feather asthma.

But what can we do for the stay at home sufferer?

The first suggestion is an air filter which can be installed in a window. This may change the outlook abruptly from discomfort to comfort. Instead of sleepless nights, sound slumber may be possible. These devices may be purchased on the market or made by the handyman of the house. Additional aid is afforded by covering the bedclothes and pillows during the day with cellophane, rubberized muslin, or glazed chintz. By this means the bedding will be protected against substantial quantities of dust.

When we resort to vaccines it is essential to employ all of the offenders to which the patient reacts. If plantain is at fault as well as ragweed, the two extracts may be combined. The dose must be adjusted to provide the maximum defense, one requiring a dozen times as much as another. To bring about the optimum effect injections should begin before the season opens. Many will benefit by continued treatment because resistance drops shortly after the medication is stopped. This may be desirable despite the fact that the individual believes himself to be cured.

[Directions for homemade filtering apparatus will be sent on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.]

VITILIGO.

Mrs. O. B. writes: 1. What is the cause of vitiligo?
2. Is it contagious?
3. Can it be cured?
4. Is there a harmless stain which can be applied to cover the white spots?

REPLY.

1. Unknown.
2. No.
3. Rarely does pigment return to these areas. Some cases have responded to ultraviolet, or to the addition of needed hydrochloric acid to the gastric juice. Certain salts of gold have been recommended.
4. Yes. Such a stain is described in a leaflet which will be sent on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

VISIT A CHIROPODIST.

J. O. writes: Is there anything I can do for a soft corn between the toes? It is very painful.

REPLY.

Visit a skilled chiropodist. After it has been removed, wear shoes of sufficient width to prevent crowding of the toes.

ANEMIA AND VISION.

F. H. writes: Could an anemic condition affect the eyes?

REPLY.

In temporary anemia of the brain, as in fainting, one may complain of disturbances of sight before losing consciousness. Any interference with nutrition to the retina [normal blood] can influence vision.

DON'T INTERROGATE YOURSELF.

Mrs. M. B. writes: How can a person find out his I. Q.?

REPLY.

The responses to certain questions measure one's intelligent quotient. A physician or a psychologist can officiate at the ceremony. Should we interrogate ourselves we would all register 100 per cent plus.

HOT DRINKS AND KEEPING COOL.

S. G. writes: Does the drinking of hot beverages make one cooler, as some claim?

REPLY.

The effect of hot drinks is to stimulate perspiration. As this evaporates a sense of cooling ensues.

HORSERADISH.

A. R. writes: What is the value of horseradish as a food? Is it healthful?

REPLY.

It has practically no food value. However, it is a powerful condiment. When used, it should be diluted generously.

CONGESTION IN COURTS.

Chicago, July 26.—Much has been said for years concerning our congested Superior and Circuit courts. According to a recent analysis, we learn that at the close of the last term the calendars in these courts were "jammed" and approximately 4,000 cases were held over to the September term.

Could not the judges in these courts arrange to dispose of a greater number of cases during the regular term?

I cite as an example the plan adopted by one of our younger and conscientious judges in the Municipal court. I find that this judge appears in court at 9:30 a. m. daily, and is known to sit on the bench until all matters scheduled for the day are disposed of, although the hour might be as late as 6:00 p. m. These longer days are, undoubtedly, the exceptions. However, this plan should be considered as a possible cure.

It does not seem unjust to suggest that our judges of the Superior and Circuit courts should adopt this admirable example practiced by one of their brethren. Thus the "overpacked" divorce calendar will be noticeably alleviated in the coming term.

I would not advocate a long working day for our judges, but feel the prevailing other extreme should not be the established practice of the courts either. I, among many others, would cherish such a distinguished position, high office, and comfortable income as the judges enjoy even on a definite full day program.

The wheel of justice must turn faster if its hoped for aims are to be accomplished. BENJAMIN R. PAUL.

STREETS AND THEIR NAMES.

Chicago, July 24.—12th, 22d and 39th streets were changed to Roosevelt road, Cermak road and Pershing road, respectively. A President, a martyr and a hero were thus honored, all of whom can be identified by most Americans. And street car conductors and elevated guards still call both names. And no one was deprived of any distinction since the streets had no real names before the change. Crawford avenue was once known as 40th avenue, and the second change was ill advised, for one thing, because few people can identify Pulaski, and most know him now because of the commotion he has caused.

It was a mistake to put over this change, just as it was to change the name of Robey street. This, by the way, which is now known as Damen avenue, should, I think, be Damien, if anything else, and I have even seen it spelled Damon. No such confusion is possible in the case of the three east and west highways mentioned above. The name of Crawford avenue should be restored.

AMERICAN HISTORY.

Chicago, July 24.—The letter, "Reading American History," which you printed on July 9, is most stimulating, and has stirred up much interest in the course, "United States Colonial Life and History," offered by the readers' bureau, 4th floor, Chicago public library. Over a hundred interested persons have inquired about the course and many of them are taking it.

I have long wanted to read the history of America, but had the feeling that I ought to start at the beginning and read European history first. It is not flattering to our commissioner of education to say that many people in Russia know more about American history than most Americans do, but I've good authority that Russians have greatly embarrassed some of our best lecturers on American history. But if we had a few more people like the writer of the above mentioned letter we might some time catch up with the Russians on our own history.

STUDENT.

A NATURE LOVER PLEASED.

Chicago, July 25.—It is refreshing—and an offset to the daily reports of murders and robberies—to read an article by a nature lover of Philip Kinsley's ability of portrayal. It takes you to the spot and guides you along from cliff to valley; leads you from one beauty to another, while you are glowing with eagerness for the next revelation from the pen of this gifted artist.

The article which appeared in today's TRIBUNE works as compensatory balm for the city man or woman who by unfortunate circumstances is unable to participate in reality, but is chained within the narrow confines of more or less congenial surroundings.

I, for one, enjoyed his description of the Fox river region and hope to hear from him again. HENRY W. GRAFF.

SPENDING-LENDING VICIOUS.

Sterling, Kas., July 27.—Your editorial comment on the steps the New Deal is taking to wreck industry [republished in the Modern Miller] gives facts that should be read by every voter. All should realize the progress that is being made toward communism, or some other form of "ism."

In our opinion this spending and lending program is the most vicious piece of legislation we have had for months. Is there not some way whereby we could wake up the American public to what is going on under their very noses?

Keep up the good work.

A. L. JACOBSON.

MEANING DEMAGOGUES?

Chicago, July 23.—Alexander Hamilton said:

"A dangerous ambition more often lurks behind the mask of special zeal for the rights of the people than under the forbidding appearances of zeal for the firmness and efficiency of government.

"Of those men who have overturned the liberties of republics, the greatest number have begun their careers by paying an obsequious court to the people, commencing demagogues and ending tyrants." F. H. W.

FINDS AN EDITORIAL "SCREWY."

Chicago, July 24.—I have read many editorials—good, bad, and indifferent. But for cockeyed screwishness the editorial "The Peace of the United States" takes the biscuit. It is a fine example of logic in reverse. The limit has been reached. That is the end, Selah!

The volume of Legal Friend mail necessitates printed statements on common questions. No copies or records of the letters or answers are kept. Hence follow-up letters should be complete in themselves. If questions are based on some previously printed problem a clipping of the article should accompany. Most of the replies are mailed. Letters bearing no name and address are disregarded. A self-addressed envelope will expedite handling.

RIGHT TO SELL.

Chicago, July 22.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A tenant who has a truck in my storage garage is twelve months behind in his rent. I have not seen him in three months. How can I get the truck out of my garage? I need the space for a tenant who will pay the rent. C. S.

A creditor does not, merely by virtue of being in possession of goods belonging to his debtor, have any technical right to sell without legal proceedings, although the right of set-off would give him a qualified immunity if he sold without right. Hence, unless the value of the goods is small compared with the debt, so that they are not likely to be reclaimed, a safer course is to proceed under the 1921 statute which gives any person who has expended labor or material on a chattel or furnished storage at the request of its owner a lien analogous to the familiar mechanic's lien on real estate. Such lien ceases at the expiration of sixty days from delivery of the goods to the owner, unless claimant files in the recorder's office a lien notice. Such lien may be foreclosed by ordinary chancery proceedings or by advertisment and sale, the first step of which is to deliver to the sherif a certified copy of the claim for lien, endorsed with request for foreclosure. Adverse parties may within ten days deny the lien, in which case foreclosure in chancery must be begun within an additional ten days. If no denial, the sherif advertises and sells.

TENANT'S LIABILITY.

Chicago, July 22.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I would like to know [1] what can and may be done if I should break my lease. It runs but two months longer, through August and September. My wife and child live at present in another state, where I have a job which is to start Aug. 1. I have explained the matter to the lessor and he is agreeable to my subletting the apartment, but he indignantly refuses to release me from the lease if the apartment is not rented by Aug. 1. 2. What may be done? 3. Can the lessor put a lien on my car? J. M.

1. You would remain liable as far as the facts stated are concerned.
2. See 1.
3. After taking judgment, he could reach your personal property in excess of an exemption of $400.00 worth.

SEWERS FOR LOGAN SQUARE.

Chicago, July 21.—[Friend of the People.]—Can you inform me if larger sewers are to be placed on the northwest side at Logan Square? We are very much in need of larger ones to stop the overflow and flooded basements.

M. E. J.

This bureau has a plan for the ultimate construction of a very large relief sewer on the line of Wrightwood avenue to give adequate drainage to the area extending about one-half mile north of Wrightwood and about one-half mile south of Wrightwood avenue and from the north branch of the Chicago river to the city limits in Harlem avenue.

At the present time the city has a large WPA program for the construction of relief sewers with the projects in many sections of the city. This program is constantly being added to. If WPA work continues, we will, in time, add the Wrightwood avenue project to the construction program, but we are unable to set any definite date.

A SON'S LIABILITY.

Chicago, July 22.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—If a young man, 20 years old, has an automobile accident while he is doing an errand for himself in his father's car, [1] who is liable, his father, or [2] himself? S. S.

1. The father would not be liable on the bare facts stated.
2. Liability of the son would depend on the proof as to negligence.

EXEMPTION IN BANKRUPTCY.

Berwyn, Ill., July 22.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—If a jeweler who does watch repairing fails in business and becomes bankrupt, is he allowed to retain his tools? Are they exempt from seizure? A. G.

If he is head of a family, his exemption is $400.00 worth; otherwise $100.00 worth. Illinois, unlike some other states, makes no special mention of trade tools.

Chicago, July 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Please advise me how to proceed to garnishee the wages of a debtor who owes me $150. C. F.

STREAMLINED BIG TOP PAYS RICH CIRCUS DIVIDENDS

Ringling's Chicago Stand Best in Ten Years.

BY MARCIA WINN.

Streamlining pays—especially in a circus.

This was the verdict of the Ringling Bros. and Barnus & Bailey circus last night as it prepared to enter the ninth and last day of its most successful Chicago stand in ten years.

A circus official estimated that in the first eight days, including yesterday, more than 160,000 Chicagoans have attended the circus which raises its big top southeast of Soldiers' field. The big top seats 11,000 and has had a capacity audience every night.

This, in a year when the circus seemed to be following the dinosaur's trail to extinction, is a direct result, circus officials declared, of what they call its streamlining.

Elephant Act Streamlined.

Take the elephants, for example. Elephants always have danced, but they haven't always tossed a beautiful, gorgeously and scantily attired young girl around as they danced. They do now.

Or take the tight rope walkers. They've always done miracles of dexterity and agility, but they've usually done them in tights. Hubert Castle, who does them for this circus, does his spectacular feats attired in tails. Moreover, he has a glamorous companion, attired in trailing satin, waiting below to catch him—or hand him a hoop.

Everybody in the circus has a new costume. This extends even to the ushers and the grooms for the 240 performing horses [very trim in scarlet and blue]. In this, Charles LeMaire, formerly with the Ziegfeld Follies, had a free hand.

Big Top Air Conditioned.

He tossed in feathers, satin and brilliant, luxurious color like confetti. He even redesigned the interior of the big top in silver, blue, and gold.

As a final change, the circus air-conditioned its mighty canvas big top. You may think this impossible. It isn't. It works with a 70 per cent success.

All of this is why Ringling, with its seventy-nine railroad car circus, is out of the red.

"We're not going to have any more small shows out," an official said. "Just the big show. The big show is what the people want. We think we've got the happy idea now, the right kind of circus for these changing days."

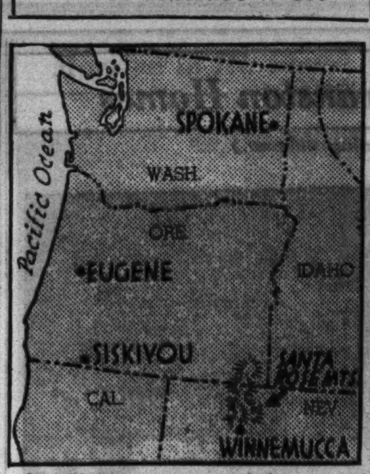
Fires Menace West



Map locates scenes of forest and brush fires that are threatening vast areas in three western states. Four persons were burned to death in fighting a fire in the Santa Rose mountains.

4 CCC BOYS DIE IN FOREST FIRE; 5TH IS MISSING

Lightning Bolts Start Blazes in West.

Ogden, Utah, July 29 (AP).—Trapped by racing flames, four civilian conservation corps enrollees died and a fifth was missing in Nevada tonight as forest and brush fires menaced vast sections of western timber land.

The area, extending over several states, was tinder dry from weeks of drouth and searing heat.

Lightning, flashing from rainless thunderheads, killed one man in Oregon and added to the fire hazard.

Retreat Cut Off.

The four CCC youths burned to death when a brush and timber blaze they were fighting in the rugged Santa Rose mountains of northern Nevada shifted suddenly and cut off their retreat. Frank J. Vitale, 20, Brooklyn, N. Y., was missing and feared dead.

The burned bodies of Ernest R. Tippin, 21, Oswego, Kas.; George J. Kennedy, 22; New York; Frank W. Barker, 20, Brooklyn, and Walter James, 18, Ridgewood, N. Y., were taken to Winnemucca, Nev.

Pacific northwest fires, 85 of which were started by lightning, spread over thousands of acres of timberland, but most of them were under control.

Temperatures up to 117.

Temperatures which soared as high as 117 degrees moderated, but the fire menace continued as clouds failed to bring rain.

Two hundred men fought a grass and scrub timber fire near Spokane, Wash. A 400 acre fire east of Eugene, Ore., was isolated and the Eden valley fire in the Siskiyou forest was controled after 3,000,000 feet of timber was destroyed. Several fires raged in north Idaho forests.

Building in First Six Months Is Half Billion Dollars Above Year Ago

Differential Labor Rates Are Popular.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Building construction of all types throughout the country was $543,000,000 larger during the first half of this year than it was in the corresponding period of 1938. This was disclosed yesterday in the midyear building survey compiled by Robert D. Steele, statistician for the National Association of Building Trades Employers, of which E. M. Craig is secretary.

E. M. Craig.

According to the survey, which covered forty-four states, the estimated dollar value of construction during the first six months of this year was $1,858,298,000. For the first half of last year the total was $1,315,062,000.

Six Cities Ahead of Chicago.

Reports from forty-one key cities showed that during the first six months of 1939 permits were issued for 125,397 buildings valued at $386,055,000. In the first half of 1938 there were 112,168 permits for buildings valued at $344,485,000.

Following are the ten cities where the most building is being done and the number and value of permits issued during the first six months of this year:

	No.	Value.
New York	8,130	$106,239,000
Los Angeles	20,220	39,401,000
Detroit	9,577	29,169,000
Philadelphia	3,320	16,921,000
Cleveland	4,365	15,417,000
Houston	3,049	14,548,000
Chicago	1,503	14,540,000
San Francisco	4,449	14,014,000
Boston	2,492	13,185,000
Washington	1,398	11,953,000

Labor Helps Home Building.

"Building labor rates continue practically on the same footing as one year ago," said Craig. "Several cities report minor increases and decreases among certain trades.

"Differential rates on residential and nonresidential work are gaining in popularity in several cities. These cities feel hopeful that the experiment will be successful.

"In New York several trades have established a $1 an hour rate for one and two family dwellings, but it is not general. Detroit plasterers on residential work receive $11 a day—on nonresidential work $12.40.

St. Louis Unions Cut Rates.

"St. Louis residential work is one half to two-thirds of the established union rates. Des Moines maintains a differential rate on residential and commercial buildings because of the variation of skill that is required.

"Buffalo carpenters have a $1 an hour rate for residential work and other building crafts of that city are considering similar steps."

DRUGGIST BUYS BUILDING.

M. P. Mertes, owner of the drug store at the northeast corner of Lawrence and Paulina, yesterday bought the one story building in which he has been a tenant for many years. The Life Insurance Company of Virginia reported the sale price at $36,000. McMenemy, Inc., was broker.

Start Work on North Side Flats

Work has been started on this ten apartment building at 411 Roscoe street. The Lo Burt Building corporation, of which Irving Paul Getz is president, is the owner. It will have four two room suites, one three, and four fives. There will be a seven room suite on the top floor for Getz. Six of the flats, including the owner's, will be furnished. The reported cost is $80,000. Harry Dalsey is architect. L. B. Sugarman made this perspective.

Clearing District Leases Unit in New Building Plan

The first unit in the Clearing Industrial District's new factory building program was leased yesterday before it was completed to the Estee Bedding company of 1310 South Newberry street. The one story building at the southwest corner of Laramie avenue and West 66th place, containing 48,000 square feet of floor space, will be completed in three weeks, according to H. Perry Phelps, vice president and general manager of the district. John S. Cromelin is architect.

The lessee has an option on 50,000 square feet of additional ground for expansion, and also an option to purchase. Hart & Whetston were brokers. Yesterday's lease was for fifteen years.

During its thirty years of existence, the Clearing Industrial district has erected more than one hundred factories, but always on a build-to-order basis.

"The interest shown in our new plan of building first and securing a tenant afterwards, evidenced by leasing of this plant before it is completed, seems to justify the experiment," said Phelps.

"Because of this success and the fact that every square foot of our manufacturing space is in use, the Clearing Industrial District will, in all probability, begin construction on another factory soon."

Brokers' Notes

J. Fred McGuire, president of McGuire & Orr, Inc., announced yesterday that his firm had opened an office at 522 Green Bay road, Winnetka, because of the indication of a stronger real estate market. Ralph M. Jaeger has been made manager of the new office and also of the Glencoe office of McGuire & Orr.

Howard J. Hickey, former president of the Howard J. Hickey company, investment brokerage house, is now with the Percy Wilson Mortgage and Finance corporation as district representative.

The syndicate plans to remodel the building and erect a new front. Negotiations are said to be under way for leasing the property to one tenant. It has been occupied by three concerns.

REPORT HOME BUILDING IN EVERGREEN PARK

Members of the South Central Housing guild will start work on five houses in various parts of the city, it was announced yesterday. According to Edward Gee of the Gee Building Material company, a house has been completed by contractor members of the guild at 9542 South Campbell avenue, in Evergreen Park. It will be open to the public for two weeks and then open by appointment.

This is the sixth house to be completed this summer in this block by guild members. Two others are under construction and according to Gee between thirty and forty more will be erected this year in this subdivision. The guild group is a unit of the national housing guild, organized by the Johns-Manville corporation.

Andes Candies Lease Shop at Lincoln and Lawrence

Andes Candies, Inc., yesterday leased the store at the northeast corner of Lincoln and Lawrence avenues, from the Penn Mutual Life Insurance company for ten years on a minimum guarantee and percentage basis. Peter G. Maniates was broker. This will be the lessee's fiftieth unit in its Chicago chain of candy stores. It will be remodeled and air conditioned, and will open about Sept. 1.

Ground has been broken for a one story store building, 150 by 100 feet, at the southeast corner of South Western avenue and West 111th street, designed by Cedric Allan Shantz. Fred Stuckart is owner. It will contain eight stores. The building will cost a reported $60,000. Completion is set for about Sept. 1.

REPORT RECORD HOME BUILDING IN FLOSSMOOR

Speculative Activity Is Negligible.

Flossmoor is experiencing the most active home building campaign in its history, according to H. C. Coleman, secretary of the Harvey Real Estate board, who has just completed a survey of that suburb. During the last three months permits were issued for homes costing $133,750, or an average of $8,900 per dwelling.

Eighteen houses are under construction, including those in Flossmoor Park third addition. With the exception of three, all are owner built. This preponderance of owner built houses is a very healthy condition, Coleman asserted, and points to a continuance of activity.

Subdivide Estate.

One architect, John S. Townsend Jr., has five houses in various stages of construction and has plans for two more.

Warwick H. Lambie recently bought the four acre estate of W. T. Beatty, former president of the Austin company, at the southwest corner of Western avenue and Flossmoor road. According to E. Frank Mann & Co. the nine room house, designed by George C. Nimmons thirty-five years ago, is to be modernized.

Lambie also will subdivide the remaining acreage into five additional home sites of 15,000 square feet each, and will improve with six and seven room homes to sell at $11,500 to $13,500. Plans for two houses have been approved by the village architectural committee and work will start this week. Two more will follow within a week, it was said.

Plan Four Homes.

Another project soon to get under way in Flossmoor calls for the building of four homes, each of which will be sold for around $7,500, it was said.

This building activity, unlike in some areas, is not being concentrated in any one section, but is scattered throughout the village. Most of the homes are of moderate cost, permits showing that only a few are expected to exceed $10,000. One of these will cost $19,000 and another $17,000.

BUYS FLAT BUILDING.

Otto J. Jansky yesterday bought the property at 4317-19 Irving Park road, improved with a building containing two stores, four six room flats, and a five car brick garage. The State Mutual Life Insurance company of Worcester was seller. The price was $14,000, according to McMenemy, Inc., broker.

First of Eight Evanston Homes

Carl J. Kastrup designed the above five room Cape Cod house to be built at the southeast corner of Asbury avenue and Main street, Evanston, by the Illinois Homes corporation. This is one of the eight which will be built at this corner and at the northeast intersection of the same streets by Victor C. Carlson.

At the Realty Boards

The annual fall outing of the Chicago Real Estate board will be held at the Medinah Country club on Tuesday, Sept. 12, according to Leo B. Varty, outing committee chairman.

The West Side Real Estate board will continue to hold monthly golf outings for members only. The next two will be on Aug. 3 and 24 at the White Pines Golf club. According to Ray E. Diffenderffer, secretary, members' wives also may participate in these outings, playing golf, bridge, and other games.

PLAN BUILDING 300 HOMES IN MORTON GROVE

A residential building program calling for approximately 300 homes during the next two years was announced yesterday by Oliver Salinger & Co. and A. H. Bouchard for their property near the northwest corner of Dempster street and Austin avenue, in Morton Grove. The property adjoins Linne Woods forest preserve on the north. It is being marketed by the Linne Woods Development company.

According to Bouchard there will be no speculative building. All houses will be built to order. One house has been built for Fred E. Boening at the northwest corner of Lake street and Meade avenue. Three others contracted for are to be built on Meade avenue. B. J. Bruns is architect.

The five room Boening house cost $5,400. Other four, five, and six room homes will be built at a reported cost of $4,950 to $5,950. They will be financed with twenty-five year FHA loans.

Television Firm Leases West Side Factory Space

Telex Radio and Television, Inc., makers of equipment, yesterday leased the first floor at 1020 West Adams, containing 15,000 square feet. Albert H. Wetten & Co. and Louis B. Beardslee & Co. were brokers. The building formerly was occupied by the Kellogg Switchboard and Supply company. Part of it was opened for subrenting six months ago and since then 132,500 square feet of space have been leased to four tenants. All but one floor of the east unit has been rented and the program has been so successful, according to Wetten & Co., agents of the property, that additional space is now being reconditioned to be placed on the market.

REORGANIZED SECURITY ISSUES PAY $933,435 CASH

Dividends and interest paid in cash during the first six months of 1939 on reorganized bond issues of the Greenebaum Investment company totaled $933,435, according to Edgar N. Greenebaum, president. In addition approximately $857,000 was distributed which represented retirement of principal through sinking funds and bond maturities and the sale of properties.

Since reorganization was started several years ago $7,517,932 has been distributed in dividends and interest, Greenebaum said. In addition about $6,469,000 has been distributed in reduction of the principal of the original issues.

The total amount of cash received by the holders of Greenebaum reorganized issues to date exceeds $13,986,000, Greenebaum said.

Wreck Milwaukee Avenue Building; Plan Taxpayer

A five story building at 1256-58 Milwaukee avenue, owned by the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance company, is being wrecked. On its foundations a one story "taxpayer," designed by Koenigsberg & Weisfeld, will be erected. It will cost a reported $25,000. It will front forty-eight feet on Milwaukee avenue and 100 feet on Mautene court. One of its two stores has been leased to Harry's Shoe Store for ten years at a minimum rental said to be $30,000, plus a percentage of gross sales.

Plan Groups of New Homes in Evanston

The first two groups of homes to be erected by the recently formed Illinois Homes corporation, of which A. W. Mitchell, Evanston banker, is president, will be at the northeast and southeast corners of Asbury avenue and Main street, Evanston, it was reported yesterday.

Eight residences are to be built from plans by Carl J. Kastrup, architect. All construction work and sales promotion will be under the direction of Victor C. Carlson, builder and developer of several big Evanston business and residential projects.

With the exception of the first unit, to be erected at once, all of the homes will be built to order. They will have five and six rooms, with exterior walls of Wisconsin Lannon stone.

The Illinois Homes corporation, it was said, is negotiating for several larger tracts in the north shore suburbs on which to build in the near future.

Gaper Catering Company Rents Downtown Space

The Gaper Catering company, now in the 700 North Michigan Avenue building, has leased the store at 75 East Madison street, in the Willoughby Tower. Willoughby & Co. were brokers.

HORNER SLASHES 4 MILLIONS FROM ILLINOIS BUDGET

Vetoes Put State Within 'Pay as You Go' Bracket.

Springfield, Ill., July 29 [Special].—Gov. Henry Horner's veto pen has saved the taxpayers of Illinois $4,149,873—the amount he cut from appropriation bills passed before the legislature adjourned on July 1.

Entire or partial vetoes of twenty-three measures accounted for the savings, and left the official departments $463,000,795 with which to operate the state government until July 1, 1941. Although this figure is $6,654,024 above the budget submitted to the assembly last January, S. L. Nudelman, director of finance, said the vetoes placed him within striking distance of a balanced budget.

Nudelman said that by proper economy within appropriations, and barring unforseen developments, the state should be able to continue on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Some Partial Vetoes.

Some of the appropriation vetoes did not strike the entire sum stipulated in the bill, but reduced it. The governor was able to do this through his power of vetoing specific items, such as individual jobs, contingent funds, etc.

Below is a list of the money vetoes, including the number of the house or senate bill, its purpose, the amount vetoed, and the governor's reason for his action. The list follows:

H. B. 500—$1,910,208 for sales tax refunds to contractors and optometrists whom the governor ruled were not entitled to reimbursement.

H. B. 256—$17,665,936 to the University of Illinois for the biennium. Reduced by $365,000 because of general need for limiting expenditures.

H. B. 139—$100,000 for repairs and additions to 8th infantry armory, Chicago. Held unnecessary.

H. B. 557—$300,000 for smokeless coal test program. $180,000 held adequate.

H. B. 667—$200,000 for crippled children. Vetoed because welfare department already carrying on work.

H. B. 671—$53,000 to purchase Indian mounds for state park. Other funds held adequate.

H. B. 803—$200,000 for Bangs' disease control. Other funds held adequate.

H. B. 746—$250,000 to set up state employés pension system. Unconstitutional.

H. B. 933—$100,000 for new building at Jacksonville hospital. Other funds held adequate.

H. B. 951—$400,000 to extend state aid to libraries. Unconstitutional.

S. B. 238—$35,000 for addition to Galesburg armory. Rental of necessary space held cheaper.

S. B. 269—$5,000 for regulation of insurance adjusters. New activity not waranted.

S. B. 352—$25,000 to administer crippled children's bill. Funds not available.

S. B. 483—$30,000 to reimburse school districts for tax losses due to creation of new park. Bad policy.

S. B. 479—$23,756 from court of claims appropriation. Claims rejected.

S. B. 74—$45,000 for veterans' aid. Unconstitutional.

H. B. 986—$100,000 to promote sale of Illinois apples. Unconstitutional.

H. B. 243—$120,400 from miscellaneous Need for limiting appropriations.

Appropriations marked unconstitutional were pronounced so by Attorney General John E. Cassidy.

MAIL CARRIER TO QUIT AFTER 35 YEARS ON JOB

Dennis Foley, who has carried mail for Uncle Sam on Chicago's gold coast for more than 35 years, is retiring tomorrow. He doesn't know how far he has walked, a mail sack on his back, in all that time. Now, at 65, he plans to keep traveling, but he'll let trains and automobiles carry him.

Foley went to work at the old temporary postoffice on the lake front on Sept. 7, 1901. He was a clerk for two years, then was transferred to the Lincoln park station and began to get acquainted with the north siders, the merchants, publishers, and doctors—he knows them all.

Foley lives at 902 Sunnyside avenue with his wife, Winifred, and his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. Kramer Jr. A son, John, lives in Hammond, Ind., and a daughter, Mrs. George Pierce, in Florida. Assigned to the Chestnut street station in recent years, Foley's "beat" has been the 1500 block north, from Dearborn street east to the lake.

Marceline, Mo., July 29 [Special.].—Three passengers were slightly injured this afternoon when five rear coaches of the Chicagoan, fast Santa Fe train en route from California to Chicago, were derailed at Rothville, about six miles west of here. Rothville is 354 miles from Chicago. The train was traveling at a high speed at the time. The injured, whose names were not learned, required only first aid. The passengers in the damaged coaches were transferred to the forward coaches, and the train continued on to Chicago, more than two hours later.

Mrs. Hamilton Barksdale Brown, the former Deborah Childs.

The marriage last night in Hinsdale of Miss Deborah Childs and Hamilton Barksdale Brown brought a number of automobile executives to Chicago for the day.

The candle light ceremony took place at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Childs, with the Rev. Leonard C. Wolcott officiating. Miss Childs was a stunning bride in an ivory satin dress and long ivory tulle veil.

After a wedding trip in Honolulu Mr. and Brown and his bride will live in Indianapolis. Mr. Brown is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Donaldson Brown of Port Deposit, Md. Mr. Brown Sr. is a vice president of the General Motors company.

Among the prominent guests here from Detroit were the William S. Knudsens, the Charles Erwin Wilsons, Lawrence P. Fisher, the Willcox Adsits, the Louis E. Deans, the C. Lewis Dicksons, the Vincent Corbetts, the J. Brook Jacksons, Henry Weaver, the E. P. Johnsons, the George A. Staples, and the Ormond E. Hunts.

HALT DISCHARGES ON WPA; LAYOFF POLICY CANCELED

Discharges of Work Progress administration employés in Illinois were halted abruptly yesterday following issuance of an order in Washington, D. C., canceling the layoff program for workers who have been on the rolls eighteen months or more.

The order was issued by Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA commissioner, and received in Chicago by Charles E. Miner, state WPA administrator. Miner immediately called a meeting of state WPA officials for today at Starved Rock, La Salle county, to discuss the order.

WPA officials said they believed Harrington's order was prompted by the senate's approval Friday of an amendment to the President's spending-lending bill. This amendment was interpreted as repealing a provision under which 650,000 relief workers would have been laid off by Sept. 1.

Four thousand dismissal notices had been mailed out in Illinois up to yesterday. Miner said workers who received the notices should call at their local WPA offices for further instructions.

FALL KILLS UNDERTAKER.

Henry A. Gerharz, 62 years old, for forty-five years an undertaker in Lemont, was fatally injured yesterday when he fell down a flight of stairs in his place of business at 226 Main street, in Lemont.

HORNER ALLOWS MARRIAGE BILLS TO BECOME LAW

Alter Regulations on Venereal Disease.

Springfield, Ill., July 29 [Special].—Important changes in the Saltiel act requiring couples planning marriage to be free from venereal diseases became law today without Gov. Henry Horner's signature.

Sponsored by the author of the original act, Representative Edward P. Saltiel [R., Chicago], the changes provide that irrespective of the results of laboratory tests, county clerks must issue licenses to pregnant women and mothers of illegitimate children. Another Saltiel bill which became law earlier this week makes it mandatory that physicians test all pregnant women for syphilis.

State May Order License.

A second important change brought about by amendments made effective yesterday gives the state director of health the right to order issuance of a marriage license to a couple regardless of the results of laboratory tests if, after investigation, he decides such marriages "may be consummated without serious danger to the health of either party to the proposed marriage or to any issue of such marriage."

Any standard test necessary for the discovery of venereal diseases may be used in determining their presence, the amendments provide.

Pension Act Becomes Law.

A new pension law for downstate municipal employés, permitting their retirement after twenty years' service, also becomes effective without the governor's signature. This law, which was sponsored by Representative William J. Lawler [R., Springfield] will not become effective until approved by a referendum vote.

After he had permitted about a dozen other bills to become law, and announced this action today, the governor had left on his desk only seven of the 478 bills passed during this year's session. It is believed he will permit them to become laws next week without his signature.

Assign 529 More Relief Laborers to City Jobs

Leo M. Lyons, Chicago relief administrator, announced yesterday that 529 more reliefers, all men, will be assigned to work for the city on Aug. 8. There are now 1,450 reliefers working in city parks on maintenance projects. They are paid at the rate of 50 cents an hour until they have worked out $15 of their monthly relief check. Lyons said 345 of the new men will pull rag weeds; 123 will work at the Navy pier and the remainder will wash street signs.

NEW LAW CURBS WILLFUL FIRINGS IN CIVIL SERVICE

State Measure Allows Full Hearings.

New protections against political discharge which were given state civil service employés in a bill that Gov. Horner permitted to become law, were explained yesterday by Eugene P. Meegan, secretary of the Civil Service Protection association.

The principal change curtails the broad powers of discharge hitherto possessed by department heads, Meegan said. Previously they could fire an employé at will and it would then be up to the discharged person to protest within five days to the civil service commission for reinstatement, on grounds that he had been discharged for political, racial, or religious reasons. Those were the only causes the commission was obligated to hear.

Curtail Power to Suspension.

The new bill, which was introduced by Representative Lottie Holman O'Neill [R., Downers Grove] provides that the department head can only suspend, and within 30 days must file with the commission specific charges against the suspended employé.

The ex-employé must be furnished with a copy of the charges. He also has the right to be represented by counsel at the subsequent hearing and to subpena witnesses. At the conclusion of the hearing the commission will decide whether the employé shall be discharged or reinstated.

"The Civil Service Protective association," said its president, Clayton F. Devine, yesterday, "feels deeply gratified that Illinois can now boast of a decent civil service law that will give to the public efficiency and economy in public service and protection from arbitrary removal, with the opportunity for promotion to members of the classified service of Illinois."

Contests Pension Veto.

Michael F. Ryan, attorney for the association, is contesting the governor's veto of the state employés' pension bill, on the grounds that the veto came after the period for such action had expired. Ryan has asked Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes to include the vetoed bill in the laws passed by the session.

Ryan's contention is that the governor has only ten days after the close of the session to take action on bills passed. Attorney General John E. Cassidy and many of his predecessors held that the ten day period begins only when the bills reach the governor's desk, which often is a week or two after adjournment.

The pension bill reached the governor on July 8. Ryan contends he should have acted upon it by July 13—ten days after adjournment, Sundays and holidays excluded. The bill was vetoed on July 20, just ten days, excluding Sundays, after its receipt. Cassidy held it was unconstitutional, which advice the governor followed.

Fire Destroys Springfield Feed Mill; Loss $175,000

Springfield, Ill., July 29 [U. P.].—Fire swept through the Joseph Schafer & Sons feed mill and warehouses here today, leveling the structures with an estimated loss of $175,000.

DISCLOSE 2 MORE TWIN PAY ROLLS IN CITY SCHOOLS

Laws Guard Jobs While Applicants Wait.

More instances of husbands and wives listed on the public pay rolls were disclosed yesterday in an investigation of pay roll records. Two more cases of double pay rollers were found in the school system. In one, a husband is a school engineer and his wife a teacher; in another the husband is a high school principal and his wife a teacher.

In both cases the families are protected in their jobs by the law. The engineer is a civil service employé, and the principal and teachers work under the state law that gives them tenure until they reach the compulsory retirement age of 65.

Schools Have Waiting Lists.

There are waiting lists of teachers ready for the service. Many of these have contended that in husband-wife cases one of the double pay rollers should quit and thus allow younger college graduates to enter the service.

Arthur Canty, 8050 South Honore street, is an engineer at the Hendricks school, 313 West 43d street. His salary is $415 a month, but he receives 7½ per cent less than that because of a pay reduction made during the depression and never restored.

His wife, listed on the pay roll as Alice H. Canty, has been in the school system since 1917 and teaches at the Gunsaulus elementary school, 4420 South Sacramento avenue. She receives $231.26 a month during the school year.

"After All, It's My Job."

"I don't blame unemployed people for criticizing us, but, after all, it's my job," Mrs. Canty said last night.

Arthur M. Nichelson, 154 North Mason avenue, is principal of the Hirsch High school, 7740 Ingleside avenue, at a monthly salary of $527.26. He has been in the system twenty-three years. His wife, Florence, teaches at the Lloyd elementary school, 2103 North Lamon avenue, and receives $231.26 a month. She entered the system in 1919.

Mr. Nichelson said last night: "We were married before we entered the system. We were both teachers before then. It seems to me if that is our profession we are justified in remaining in it."

Edward Silverman and his wife, Ruth, of 5475 Everett avenue, are listed as assistant probation officers on the pay roll records of the Juvenile court. Each receives $200 a month, according to the May pay roll.

DIES OF INJURIES IN FALL.

ELMER LAYDEN LEADS ALL-STAR COACHES' POLL

Elward Second at Halfway Mark.

BY ARCH WARD.

It's Elmer Layden of Notre Dame as the All-Star coaches' poll reaches the half way mark.

Elmer Layden.

The leader of the Fighting Irish, supported enthusiastically by Notre Dame alumni, has rolled up 474,710 points, nearly twice as many as his closest rival, Mal Elward of Purdue.

Out of the coast to coast balloting, in which 334 newspapers and radio stations are coöperating with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will come the staff of five coaches who will lead the College All-Americans against the New York Giants at Soldiers' field the night of Aug. 30.

Poll Will End Saturday.

The poll will continue until midnight next Saturday. Fans are invited to name the three coaches they would like to see have charge of the All-Stars in the order of their preference. First place counts three points, second two, and third one. The coach with the greatest number of total points when all ballots have been counted will have charge of the squad.

The board will be made up of two from the middle west—one from the Big Ten and one from outside the conference; one from the south; one from the east, and one from the far west. If the present leaders could hold their positions in the final week of voting, the staff would include Layden and Elward from the central states, Carl Snavely of Cornell from the east, Maj. Bob Neyland of Tennessee from the south, and Slip Madigan of St. Mary's from the far west.

The number of first place votes in today's standings totals 526,279. Several organizations supporting various candidates are just beginning to get results and it is likely that several million ballots will be poured into THE TRIBUNE before the voting ends.

Layden Has Field in Michigan.

In addition to the backing he is receiving from Notre Dame clubs throughout the land, Layden has the field to himself in Michigan and is sharing with Elward heavy support of Indiana fans, whose campaign slogan is, "Boost Hoosier Football."

Gus Dorais, head coach of the 1937 All-Stars, and Hunk Anderson, Layden's predecessor at Notre Dame, are leading the drive for votes in Detroit. Radio station WJR is one of the heaviest polling centers in the country. Fritz Crisler of Michigan, who is expected this year to have one of the strongest teams Michigan has turned out in several seasons, and Charles Bachman of Michigan State, a member of the 1935 All-Star staff, are sharing most of the second and third place votes.

Howard F. Beechinor, president of the Notre Dame club of Detroit, yesterday wired this department as follows: "Notre Dame club working tirelessly to place Elmer Layden on top." Mayor Richard W. Reading of Detroit sent this message: "Strongly indorse Notre Dame club of Detroit's drive to win All-Star coaching job for Elmer Layden. He is a credit to his profession and richly deserves the honor."

Purdue Club Backs Elward.

The Purdue club of Detroit is plugging for Elward, with Layden as second choice. Harry Wismer of Station WJR, whose efforts accounted largely

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Aggravated by the pitching of Harry Gumbert, the Cubs' chronic impotency at bat took an alarming turn for the worse yesterday. By splurging in the ninth, a maneuver which deluded 12,000 spectators into thinking something was about to happen, they piled up a total of three singles for the afternoon. But New York's sixth place Giants meanwhile had accumulated a dozen assorted safeties, so the Cubs had to take it on the chin, 5 to 2.

Charley Root, the 40 year old wonder, was the victim both of his mates' hitless talents as well as the power of his enemies. The old fellow was knocked into a losing position at the very outset, jolted severely in the fifth, when Dick Bartell did him wrong with his almost daily error, and suffered again in the eighth. Much of this appeared to be a conspiracy on the part of Cubs and White Sox alumni members, Bill Jurges exploding two for extra bases, Frank Demaree one single which hurt and Zeke Bonura a trio of singles.

Gumbert Is Too Good.

Gumbert was so efficient that for eight innings only one Cub reached first base. Manager Hartnett accomplished this feat by singling. To make it worse, only one other ball was well hit against Gumbert during these hapless sessions. It was a swift, low bounding drive close to first base by Bill Herman in the seventh, and Mr. Bonura, who is supposed to be a haphazard fielder, just put out his gloved hand and grabbed the thing with amazing ease. Still Gumbert didn't carry through to the finish.

The ninth opened with an out, whereupon Phil Cavarretta was delegated to bat for Root. He looped a single into left and Bryant did the running. Hack flied to Moore and Herman beat out a hit to Whitehead. Gumbert lost control, walking Galan and Leiber to force Bryant home. The wildness continued on two pitches to Gleeson, so Cliff Melton, a lefty, came in. Not to be outdone in the display of strategy, Manager Hartnett replaced Gleeson with Reynolds, a right-handed swinger. Reynolds walked and Herman scored. Then James Lynn came in to pitch to Hartnett and a fly to Demaree finished the show.

Jurges Is the Villain.

The Giants were so inconsiderate of Root's 40 years in the first inning that they refused to quiet down until seven of them had batted. Jurges was the bad boy of the act. He tripled to right center with one out and that sent the three little fishes fimmin' back over the dam. It was a sudden reminder that they hadn't purchased their tickets for the All-Star game between the College All-Americans and the New York Giants, world's professional champions, Aug. 30, in Soldiers' field.

And maybe you don't want to be bossed, either, but mama knows best and she's been down to the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn and in the lobby of Tribune Tower, to get tickets. Of course, she could have sent a money order made payable to the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., to the All-Star Ticket Manager, Tribune Tower, but you know mama!

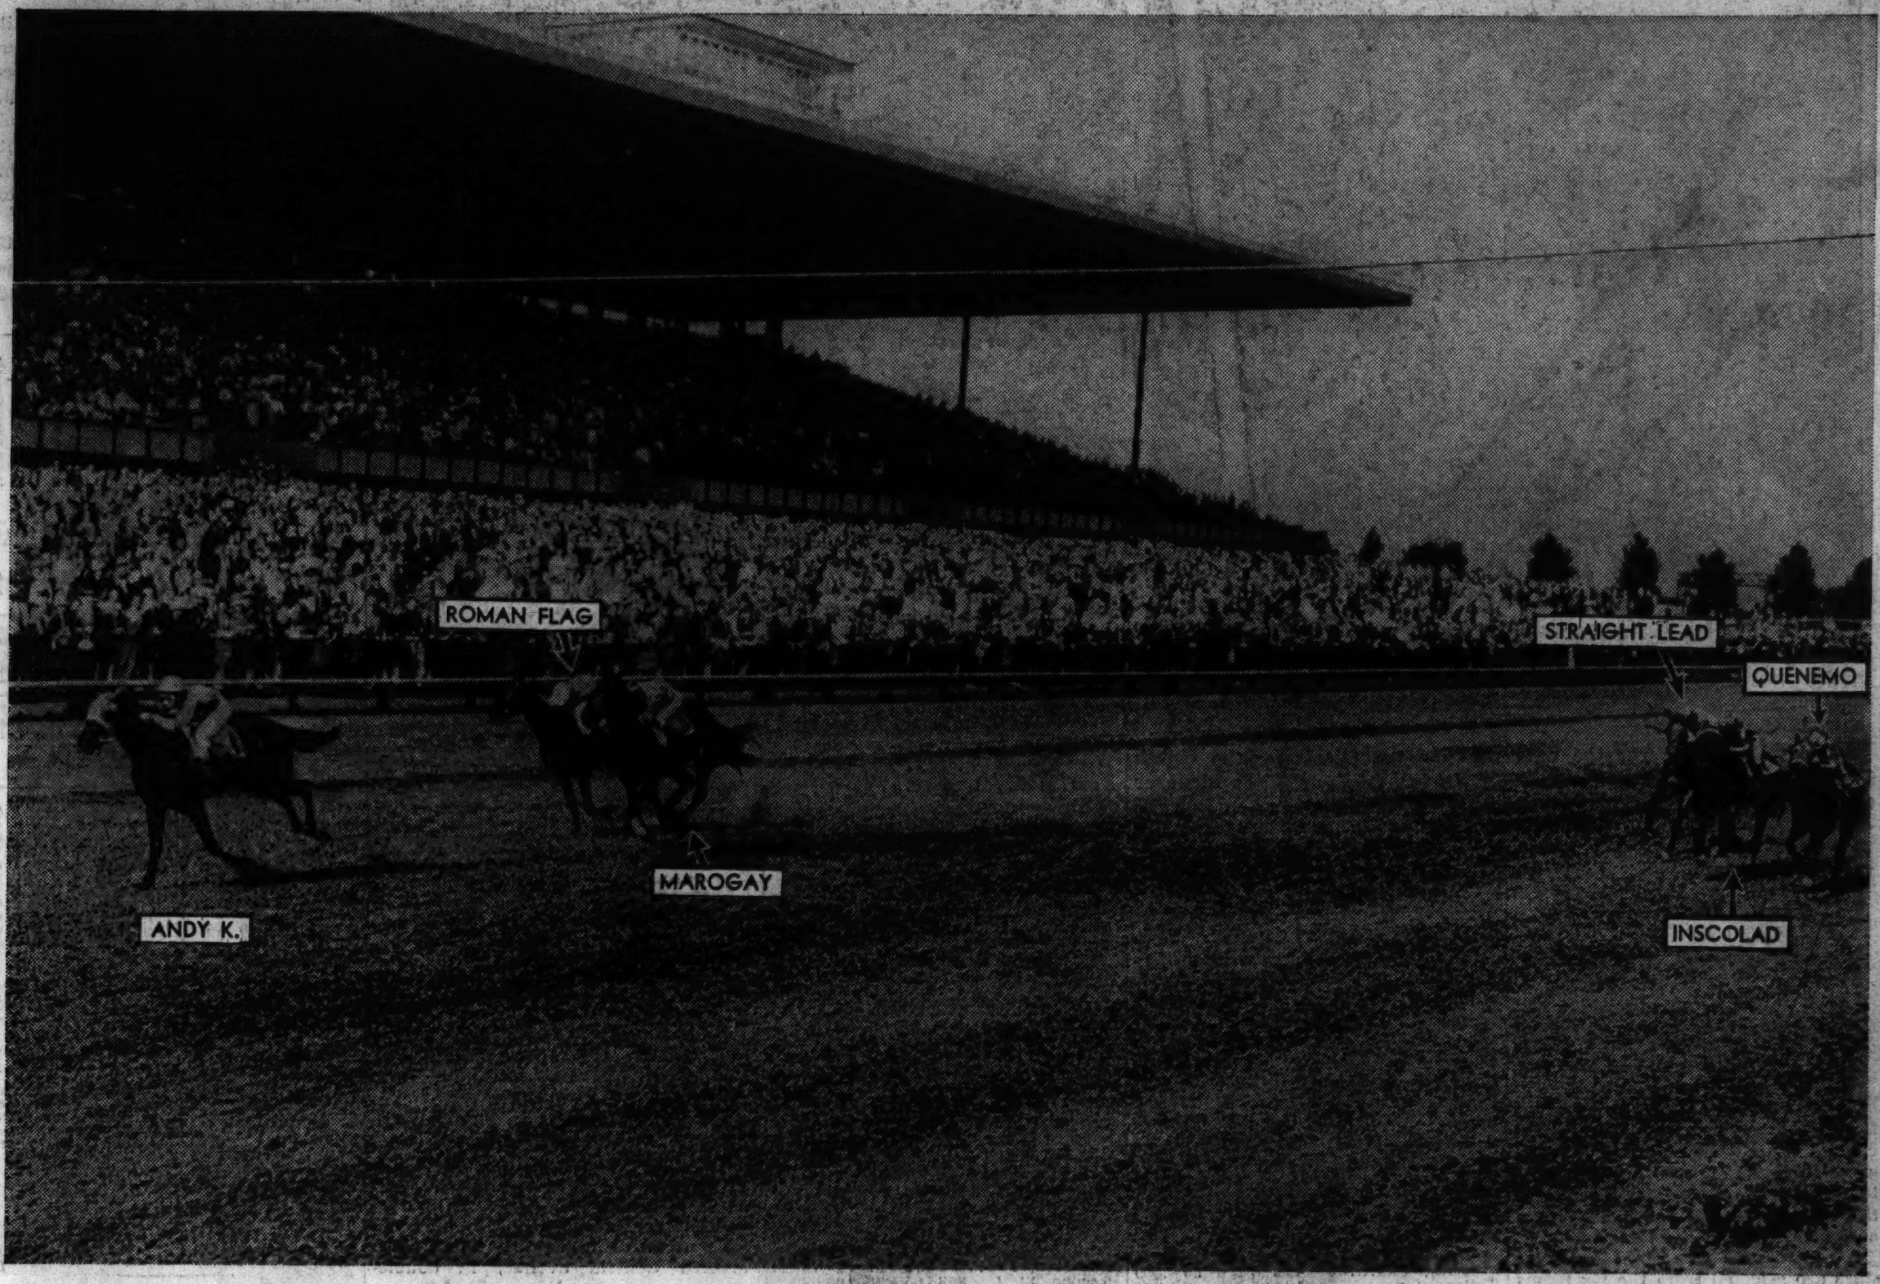
ANDY K. TAKES IT WIDE FOR HANDSOME PRICE IN FUTURITY



Andy K. from the Millsdale stable, ridden by Jockey J. E. Oros, gives long shot players the thrill of Arlington Park's meeting as he wins $47,830 Futurity by two lengths from Marogay, the property of R. A. Firestone. Roman Flag was third, and Quenemo fourth. This picture of the finish, taken at an angle because Jockey Oros chose to go to the outside where track conditions were best, does not show the last four of the ten thoroughbreds which went to the post. The finish line is indicated by the white and dark line near top of photo. Andy K. led throughout the race and rewarded backers with the heavy payoff of $57.80 to win, $19 to place, and $6 to show. CHICAGOLAND SWIMMING STARS SEEK 10 TITLES AT NAVY PIER TODAY

BY WILFRID SMITH.

This is the day ten boys and girls will win Chicagoland swimming championships. They will be awarded gold medals this afternoon at Navy pier in the finals of the tenth annual meet sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. Each, in his age class, will have proved superiority over all qualifiers from the four sectional meets held last week-end.

One hundred and seventeen have qualified for today's final tests. They represent the best swimming talent in five states. The list of forty-six clubs and organizations remaining in the meet come from four states: Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin. They are the survivors from a group of more than 1,200 who entered the preliminary trials at Cermak and Whealan pools in the forest preserve district, and Sherman park and California park, located in the Chicago park district.

Durkin Class A Contender.

Each of these contestants received a souvenir button, emblematic of their ability to swim 100 yards. Few had the ability to swim the distance as fast as did Joe Durkin, a 12 year old youngster from Peoria, Ill., who this afternoon is the leading contender for the class A boys' championship. Many in the higher age classes cannot swim as fast as Durkin. He finished second in last year's title race to Dick Upsall of the Madison Athletic club. These 100 yard swimming tests have served their purpose in offering competition without charge to all boys and girls regardless of affiliation or previous experience. All of the 117 swimmers in the preliminaries already have received gold qualifying medals in recognition of victory.

Today the awards for superior skill will be presented. All second place finishers in the races will be awarded silver medals. Those finishing third will receive bronze medals.

282 Awards Made.

Since the Chicagoland races were conceived by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., 282 championship awards have been made. In 1930, first year of the meet, only four age classes for boys and girls were held. The next year the meet was expanded to include five age classes for boys and five for girls. And the rule which prohibits a champion from competing again in the same age division always has left class A, 11 and 12 years of age, open, and handicapped former champions because they were forced to advance to a high age group.

Practically every Chicago swimmer who has risen to national fame has competed in the Chicagoland races. Today this select list also includes a team of six from the Bloomington, Ill., country, three swimmers from Madison, Wis.; one from Sturgis, Mich., and the best of the Chicago swimming organizations.

Clerks will be ready to receive their letters of admission, assign them to lockers, and to organize the first semi-final race, which will start at 2 o'clock. Through the coöperation of the city engineering department barges will be moored along the north side of the pier. Here the lanes will be laid out.

Thousands May See Races.

Thousands may see the races from vantage points on the pier. All contestants will be announced over a loud speaker system and the results of each race also will be given.

The battle today really is between Chicago swimmers and those from out of town. Twenty-one cities and clubs from Illinois, outside of Chicago's limits, are represented in the ten finals. Eighteen clubs are in Chicago. Indiana has swimmers from Valparaiso, Hammond, and Gary; Wisconsin has sent contestants from Janesville, Madison, and Delafield, and one comes from Michigan.

Today's events will be conducted by members of The Chicago Tribune Athletic association. They also are in charge of the annual Silver Skates derbies and the Golden Gloves boxing tournaments.

SZWEDKO WINS IN PUBLIC LINKS FINALS BY 1 UP

Baltimore, Md., July 29 [Special].—Andy Szwedko of Pittsburgh, Pa., today won the national public links golf championship by defeating Phil Gordon of Oakland, Cal., 1 up, winning on the final green. Gordon, 3 down at the end of 27 holes, won the 32d and 33d holes, but halved the remaining three and lost the match.

Rain Halts Sox and Yankees; Play 2 Today

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 29.—The weather man showed no respect for a 2 to 0 lead the Yankees had at the end of two innings today in the second game of the Chicago-New York series. The affair was rained out after having been resumed following a long delay immediately after the start.

The teams will play a double-header tomorrow with Ted Lyons opposing Bump Hadley in the first game. The second game is scheduled as a clash between those two personable lefties, Thornton Lee and Vernon Gomez.

Needless to say, the Sox were willing to call today's enterprise no contest. The Yanks had made two runs in the first inning on a pair of passes which John Rigney handed to Frank Crosetti and Joe DiMaggio, and a double by Bill Dickey. All the Sox had to lose was a wasted single by Luke Appling.

Mike Will Be Back.

Then, too, the Chicagoans tomorrow will have the services of Mike Kreevich and his .326 batting talents.

Gee Walker, who pulled a leg muscle while succumbing to the final Chicago out in yesterday's game, will try hard to cut down the estimate of a week to ten days given as his possible period of incapacity. Gee was overtaking Ted Williams in the runs batted in department with seventy-nine and was second in the majors when he was injured. R. B. I. is the most important of all baseball statistics among baseball folks. Gee is batting .339. While such slugging will be missed, the statistics is not a cumulative one like runs batted in.

First Inning Is Damp.

Though it took the Yankees fifty minutes to retire the White Sox in the first inning of today's washout, the Chicagoans did not get a man on base in the session. Hayes flied to Selkirk and then, after forty-five minutes of rain, Kuhel grounded out to Dahlgren and Rosenthal bounced to Gordon.

Crosetti walked on four pitches at the start of the Yankee offensive and then Rolfe and Henrich were retired. DiMaggio walked and Dickey doubled to right, scoring Crosetti and Di Maggio. Selkirk grounded to Kuhel. With two out in the second inning, Appling singled to center but McNair grounded to Dahlgren.

Gordon was stopped at the plate in the second inning. He opened with a single, stole second, took third on Dahlgren's fly to Rosenthal and was out, McNair to Tresh, on Pearson's tap. Crosetti struck out.

ILLINOIS RACING CHIEFS REJECT DON MEADE'S PLEA FOR LICENSE

Jockey Don Meade's dramatic last minute attempt to win reinstatement on Illinois tracks was refused yesterday by the Illinois Racing commission. The veteran jockey was ready to ride Mrs. Charles Shelden's Boy Angler in the $47,830 Futurity at Arlington Park had he been granted a license.

Meade, who had been ruled off the turf on charges of betting on one horse and riding another in the same race in 1936, had been reinstated in four states.

Reinstated Last Year.

Meade was ruled off the track indefinitly at Hialeah Park on March 4, 1936. He was under contract to E. R. Bradley at the time. The rider's suspension was lifted by the Florida racing commission on Aug. 12, 1938. On Dec. 19 of the same year he was given a license to ride at Tropical Park in Florida and he promptly launched a spectacular comeback.

New York issued Meade a license on April 11 of this year and Maryland did likewise on May 6. Meade also was given a clean bill in Rhode Island and rode on tracks in that state.

In all this time he never had approached the Illinois commission, which has the reputation of being one of the most uncompromising units in the country.

Meade Makes Personal Plea.

Several days ago reports were issued to the effect that Meade had been engaged to ride Boy Angler in yesterday's big race. Friday night another report stated that Meade had abandoned his plans and would remain in the east.

In a surprise move he left the Empire City track after the fifth race Friday and caught a train for Chicago, arriving yesterday morning. Going before the commission at noon, he filed his application.

Walter Peacock and William Schlake heard his case, Chairman Leo Spitz being out of the city. At 1 p. m. the commissioners issued the ruling rejecting Meade's application.

Text of Statement.

The commission's statement follows:

"At a meeting of the Illinois Racing commission held on Saturday, July 29, 1939, at 1 p. m. at its offices, 208 West Washington boulevard, Chicago, the application of Don Meade to ride as a jockey, filed at the office of the commission at 12:35 p. m., was considered.

"Attending the meeting were Commissioners Walter C. Peacock and William Schlake, Commissioner Leo Spitz being out of the city.

"The commission entered an order denying the application of Don Meade for a license as a jockey to ride in the state of Illinois."

Arlington Park Has $8,935,482 Betting Total

Arlington park ended its meeting yesterday with a total betting handle of $8,935,482. This was an increase of $216,564 over last season. The average daily handle was increased by $7,219. Last year's total was $8,718,918.

SORTEADO WINS 1½ MILE RACE AT INGLEWOOD

Inglewood, Cal., July 29 (AP).—Sorteado, Argentine champion, flashed over the one and one-half mile course in 2 minutes 29 seconds for an upset victory in the Aloha handicap at Hollywood Park today.

FIRST VICTORY FOR 2 YEAR OLD NETS $33,735

Marogay 2d; Roman Flag 3d.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

A crowd of 25,000 gathered yesterday at Arlington Park to watch the final program of the meeting with the attitude that anything might happen. And that's just about the way things turned out. For Andy K., a 27 to 1 shot, with nothing more than a disqualification and a good workout to recommend him, upset the most fashionable 2 year olds in the country in the $47,830 Futurity.

Carrying the red and white colors of the Millsdale stable, which is owned by Mel Emerich of Chicago, and Tony Pelleteri of New Orleans, Andy K. led from start to finish of a helter-skelter race. Under the expert handling of Johnny Oros he came home two lengths ahead of Russell Firestone's Marogay, champion of the Florida season. Arnold Hanger's Roman Flag, hero of the Suffolk Downs meeting, ran third, a neck farther back.

And Then Came the Others.

Far behind the flying heels of the unheralded Andy K. came such good juveniles as the Woolford farm's Quenemo, John Keene's War Beauty, and Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Tough Hombre, which finished fourth, seventh, and ninth, respectively, in the field of ten.

Andy K. had never before run in anything but a maiden race. He made the first start of his career at Arlington Park on July 6, finishing second. In another attempt on July 11 he ran fourth. On July 21 he won but was disqualified for bearing out and interfering with Liberty Franc. Those were his only previous appearances. He is a son of Jack High, famous sprinter of other years.

Over a rapidly drying out track that was officially described as slow but was just ready to turn good, Andy K. went the six furlongs in 1:12 3-5.

Andy K. Always in Command.

About an hour before the Futurity, Trainer Alex Gordon, representing the E. R. Bradley racing establishment, scratched Bimelech and Boy Angler, saying that he had received instructions before leaving the east to withdraw the horses if the track was slow. His action was taken after the Illinois racing commission had rejected Don Meade's application for a license to ride Boy Angler.

This horse, which Mrs. Charles Shelden holds on a leasing arrangement with Bradley, was to have run as an entry with Bimelech. Both horses, which had been shipped out Thursday for the purpose of running in the Futurity, will now be sent back to New York without making any appearance under colors in Illinois.

At every stage of the Futurity Andy K. dominated his rivals. Breaking from the No. 5 post position he cut out a fast early pace with Tough Hombre attempting to run with him. Approaching the turn out of the back stretch Marogay moved up into a contending position under Ira Hanford's urging and Roman Flag, racing wide, came up to join the first flight.

Oros Rides Smart Race.

All the way around the turn Andy K. coped with every move of his rivals, Oros rating him with flawless judgment. They headed home and this rank outsider was still in front by a length and a half. Now the real running began with Marogay launching a determined challenge and Roman Flag coming on the outside.

Just for a few strides the issue was in doubt. Then Andy K. began to draw away. He was four lengths ahead at the eighth pole. Though his rivals gained on him in the last furlong he held a safe margin to the finish.

Andy K. paid off his backers at $57.80, $19 and $6. Marogay was $9.80 to place and $5 to show, Roman Flag's show price being $2.80.

The winner's share of the rich

Boston, Mass., July 29 (AP).—Scoring four runs in the fifth inning, the last place St. Louis Browns handed Boston its third straight defeat today, 4 to 3. West Colored All-Star Nine Is Announced

Personnel of the squad to represent the West in the seventh annual colored East-West All-star baseball game in Comiskey park a week from today was announced by officials of the game following the closing of a nationwide poll at noon yesterday.

A record vote was cast. The west stars are selected from the six teams comprising the Negro American league—Chicago American Giants, Kansas City Monarchs, Memphis Red Sox, Toledo Crawfords, St. Louis Stars, and Cleveland Bears. The makeup of the east squad, being chosen from among the teams of the Negro National league, is expected to be announced.

Four Chicago American Giants' stars won places on the west squad, three of them for the first time as representatives of the local club. Alec Radcliffe, star third baseman, topped the players at his position to keep intact his record of being the only player to make the team all seven years.

Bassett Best Vote Getter.

Pepper Bassett, who came to the American Giants at the start of the season, after starring for the east last year, proved the best vote-getter in the west, totaling 240,467 in leading the catchers. A newcomer to the American Giants, Second Baseman Ted Horne topped the west's keystone sackers while Jess Houston placed high enough among the hurlers to earn a berth. Willie Cornelius and Ted Trent of the Giants failed to make the squad for the first time in five years.

Others who led their positions in the poll were Hilton Smith, Kansas City, pitcher; Ted Strong, Kansas City, first base; Bill Morney, Toledo, shortstop; and Jim Williams, Toledo, outfielder. Neil Robinson of Memphis, whose home run last year won for the west, 5 to 4, to even the series at 3 to 3, made the team by placing third among fielders.

Makeup of West Squad.

CATCHERS—Pepper Bassett, Chicago, 240,467; Larry Brown, Memphis, 168,920.

REDS KEEP RIGHT ON WINNING; BEAT PHILLIES TWICE

Thompson, Moore Star in 3-0, 9-2 Victories.

Cincinnati, O., July 29 (AP).—The Reds stretched their National league lead to eleven and one-half games today, combining brilliant hurling by Rookie Gene Thompson and heavy hitting, including successive homers by Billy Myers, to sweep a double-header from Philadelphia, 3 to 0 and 9 to 2.

Thompson helped win his four-hit victory and first shutout of the year in the opener by doubling in the second inning to score Ernie Lombardi, who also had doubled. The second game marked the twelfth straight time and the thirteenth in fourteen starts that the Phils had bowed to the Reds.

A crowd of 17,865, including 7,642 knot-hole members, witnessed the double-header, first of two scheduled in two days. Score:

Big Zeke's 3 Hits Lead Attack on Root.

Danning shoved him home with a single to left. Ott popped out but Bonura singled through short and, because Galan fumbled, Danning took third and Bonura second. An intentional pass was given to Demaree, loading the bases, and the strategy worked. Hafey tapped to Hack to conclude the unhappy session.

Gumbert was thrown out in the fifth before the second anti-Root crusade was launched. Moore singled to center and the parade began to form. Jurges delivered another salute to his old pals, this time a double to right. Danning bounced to Bartell who thought, rightfully, it was a cinch to get a play at one base or another, but Dickie fumbled, so the bases were filled. Moore went home on Ott's fly to Galan. Bonura spanked a single to right center and Jurges scored. Demaree's single to left scored Danning but Bonura was nailed trying to reach third.

Bonura Starts Trouble.

The Giants nicked Root for two hits in the sixth but didn't score. They came up with another pair in the eighth and these two counted. Bonura led off with a single to center, his third hit, and was bunted to second by Demaree. Hack did a little juggling on Hafey's sharp smack, but recovered on time to get a favorable decision at first base. Then Whitehead singled to right and Bonura galloped home with the final New York run.

The hit which made Hartnett the only Cub able to reach first base during eight innings occurred in the second with two out. Then twenty successive batters walked up to the plate and back again before the tattered champions staged the futile ninth inning flurry.

Vance Page will handle the Cubs' pitching today in the final of the Giant series. Carl Hubbell is expected to start for the sixth place visitors.

The chilly north breeze was uncomfortable for the spectators yesterday, but it was nice for the pitchers. It diminished the possibilities of drives into the seats. There was the Bonura clout, for instance, in the third inning. The head wind made it possible for Leiber to pick it off the 400 foot sign in center.

It was the Giants' second triumph in the last fourteen games and the sixth in their last twenty-three.

CAMPAIGNS FOR COACH OF ALL-STARS GO INTO HIGH GEAR

DORAIS TERMS ALL-STAR COACH JOB A CHALLENGE

Says He Must Know How to Use Material.

BY W. W. EDGAR.

[Sports writer, Detroit Free Press.]

Detroit, Mich., July 29.—"Being named to coach the college All-Stars for their annual game with the champions of the National Professional league is the most interesting challenge that can be hurled at any coach."

Gus Dorais.

These were the words of Charles E. [Gus] Dorais, athletic director at the University of Detroit, who coached the All-Stars in 1937 and led them to a notable victory over the Green Bay Packers, notable because it was the first triumph for the collegians since the annual battle was inaugurated.

Aside from an interesting challenge, Dorais remarked, it also is an interesting experience for any one who derives his living from the teaching of football.

"Every coach hopes for the day when he can boast a perfect unit for every position on his machine, but that day seldom comes," Dorais observed. "He may have a good line and a good set of backs, but he'll lack reserves. Or he'll have a strong line and a mediocre back field. Or he may be weak in passing or kicking. Never does he have the perfect set-up unless he's named coach of the All-Stars. Then he finds himself four and five deep in stars for every position. That's why I think it is an interesting challenge and a most interesting experience."

There's Material Aplenty.

The little fellow who teamed with Knute Rockne to start Notre Dame on its rise to football glory back in 1913 smiled as he continued, "and it certainly robs those coaches who continually wail about lack of material of any chance to alibi."

"What are the chief problems that confront a coach when he takes over the task of welding the All-Stars into a well knit unit in the two weeks allotted for practice?" Dorais repeated our question.

"I found the first big problem was one of getting acquainted with the personnel and I've spoken to other coaches and they tell me the same thing. Here you are, all of a sudden tossed into a group gathered from all sections of the land. So, your first big problem is to find out who they are, what they play and how they play. Once that is done, a coach can get down to work.

"His next problem concerns itself with pass defense. In the group of college All-Stars, a coach will find that he's got some exponents of the zone defense, others who have been taught man to man, and still others who have been taught a combination of both. And it's difficult to change any player's style in two weeks, especially after he's had three of four years in college."

"Isn't it just as difficult to get settled on an attack?," Gus was asked.

Lauds Collegians' Spirit.

"No," he replied, "for all offense is basically the same. Every coach teaches the off tackle play, the spinner, the end around, the buck, slant and spins. Blocking assignments may be just a bit different, but the boys adapt themselves very rapidly. They fall into line easily, too, on defense against a running attack. It's the defense against passes that stumps them as a unit."

Dorais stared into space for a second as he recalled his experience in 1937, then remarked, "and the coach has to be careful in keeping his backs straightened out when making substitutions. He'd be in an awful jam if he found he had two backs using a zone defense and the other two playing man to man.

"One thing that pleased me as coach of the All-Stars was the spirit of the collegians. They were very responsive to our teachings. They were eager and willing to help with anything, despite the fact those two weeks of practice provide a grueling ordeal. I found them a swell bunch with which to work.

Drake Saves Game.

"They had spirit. Plenty of it. And I think that's one of the reasons why they are so well able to hold their own against the professionals."

Though almost two years have elapsed since the night in Soldiers' field that Dorais led the collegians to their 6 to 0 triumph over Green Bay the game still is fresh in his mind.

"What was the one outstanding thing he remembered about the game?"

"That's easy," Dorais answered. "It was the sterling defensive play of John Drake of Purdue. He actually saved the game for us. That's why I'll never forget it.

"I recall one very important move he made. It was late in the game and we were holding our 6 to 0 margin. I was going to say we were enjoying our 6 to 0 lead. But we weren't enjoying it for the Packers had the ball and were headed goalward.

"They had a yard to go on fourth down for a touchdown that would have knotted the count. Lining up quickly, the Packers shot a pass to Don Hutson. Things looked bad. But out of somewhere came Drake to pull Hutson down on the 1 yard line. That was the lifesaver.

"After last year's second victory for the All-Stars over the champions of the pro league I look forward to another great game in Soldiers' field Aug. 30. The best college men against the New York Giants is a sure magnet for us of the coaching profession just as it is for the thousands of football fans."

The voting booth is one used in the "Boost Hoosier Football" campaign sponsored by the Lafayette, Ind., Junior Chamber of Commerce as part of a state-wide movement. for Harry Kipke's election to second place on the staff last year, telegraphed as follows: "A Hoosier coach—Bo McMillin—beat us last year, so we have decided to support a Hoosier this year. If you can't beat them, join them. That's my slogan."

The South Bend Tribune yesterday reported 13,416 first place votes for Layden. Elward was the second choice. The Lafayette Journal Courier filed 6,294 ballots marked for Elward and Layden in that order.

Lynn Waldorf of Northwestern got 9,673 yesterday from the Evanston News Index and picked up a scattered vote throughout the middle west. Northwestern alumni and civic groups along the north shore are working earnestly for him. Snavely of Cornell and Neyland of Tennessee are running second and third on the Waldorf ballots.

Stuhldreher Drive Gathers Speed.

The Wisconsin State Journal added 9,509 votes to Harry Stuhldreher's total. The drive for Stuhldreher, which is state-wide, is just beginning to function. This department has been tipped off to prepare for an avalanche from Madison, Milwaukee, Green Bay, LaCrosse, Janesville, Chippewa Falls and other Wisconsin centers by the middle of this week.

All sixty-nine players chosen by the fans have accepted THE TRIBUNE's invitation to report for practice at Northwestern university Aug. 12 except Brud Holland, Cornell end. Holland had promised to play in a charity game in Philadelphia, Aug. 21. He wants to join the Chicago squad immediately afterward, but late comers are denied admittance. The practice period is short at best and it is important that every player be on hand opening day.

McGoldrick Will Be on Time.

Jim McGoldrick, Notre Dame guard, is in Europe, but his brother wired from Philadelphia that he would be back in time for the first workout. Roland Young of Oklahoma, an end, is adjusting a business complication which would have delayed his appearance until Aug. 14.

Advance sales indicate another capacity crowd. All $4.40 seats were sold more than two weeks ago and it is likely that the $3.30 section will have been disposed of within another two weeks.

Profits of the game will be divided equally, as always, among the United Charities, Catholic Charities and Jewish Charities of Chicago.

COBB SAILS FOR ANOTHER TRY AT AUTO SPEED MARK

LONDON, July 29 [U. P.]—John Cobb, wealthy London fur broker who races for fun, sailed for the United States today for a try at the world automobile speed record. He will make his attempt on the Bonneville, Utah., salt flats.

Cobb set a record on Sept. 15 last year when he rocketed his big turtle-shaped Railton special over the flats at 350.2 miles an hour. The following day his countryman, Capt. George E. T. Eyston, drove his Thunderbolt 357.5 m.p.h to set the present record.

Cobb took fifty tires along when he sailed today.

"If I fail on my first attempt," he said, "I will keep going until the tires run out. My machine has been lightened fifty pounds and I've reduced by own weight about one stone."

Cobb's car weighed 7,000 pounds last year. He scaled around 200 and now is down to around 186.

Good News for Hunters! More Ducks in Fall

BY BOB BECKER.

Waterfowl hunters in the central states will see more ducks during the fall migration than they've looked at for several years. This is the cheering news which comes to us from field parties of Ducks Unlimited in Canada, now working on practical projects to give the ducks safe breeding grounds in the Canadian marshes.

Thanks to more rainfall in the north, the conservation policy of saving ducks by shortening the hunting season in recent years and the fine work of Ducks Unlimited, the ducks will show an increase this year. Despite this expected increase the men who know the duck situation state that conservation agencies and sportsmen must extend every effort to grow more ducks in coming seasons to boost the waterfowl population back to a safe figure of "more than 80,000,000."

News Thrills Hunters.

The tremendous duck growing projects which Ducks Unlimited has under way in Canada must give hunters a thrill, for these projects, if finished in the next three or four years, make it certain that all of us will have duck hunting in the future. Some of the more notable "grow more ducks" projects follow:

1. Gordon lake, Alberta—With the province of Alberta and Ducks Unlimited working together a new 800,000 acre duck refuge is now being established near Gordon and McKay lakes. This vast area [larger than the state of Rhode Island] has been drying up. Now reservoir dams built by Ducks Unlimited are restoring this great duck breeding marsh.

2. Many Island lake, Alberta—Millions of ducks perished here in former years. This year, thanks to a Ducks Unlimited dam to impound water in the marsh, it's loaded with ducklings that will be coming south this fall.

Peat Fires Flooded Out.

3. Stalwart marsh, Saskatchewan—A 4,400 foot dam constructed by Ducks Unlimited has flooded out peat fires which have been destroying a famous duck marsh. Thousands of ducks have returned to nest in this marsh.

4. Northwestern Alberta—A 300,000 acre refuge planned on the Athabasca. Indians [wards of the government] have petitioned the government for the establishment of this refuge.

Duck hunters who want further information on the work of Ducks Unlimited in Canadian marshes, or wish to coöperate with it, are advised to write the national headquarters office, 231 S. La Salle street, Chicago. work the second game.

Andy K.'s Chicago Owner Gets $578 Surprise on Bet

Mel Emerich, Chicago broker, co-owner of Andy K., sat dumfounded yesterday as his 2 year old raced to victory in the $47,830 Arlington Futurity. He wagered $20 which returned $578. Tony Pelleteri of New Orleans also has an interest in Andy K.

Black Wins Canadian Golf Title in 8 and 6 Final

ST. BRUNO, Que., July 29 (AP)—Ken Black of Vancouver won the Canadian amateur golf title today by crushing Henry Martell of Edmonton, 8 and 6.

Guldahl, Sarazen, Picard Three Strokes Back.

St. Paul, Minn., July 29 (AP).—Dick Metz of Chicago, who has been breaking on top of several tournament fields lately only to tire before the stretch run of some of golf's famed "routers," raced into the thirty-six hole leadership of the $7,500 St. Paul open in record style today.

A brilliant second round of 66, six under par for the Keller course, gave him a two day total of 134 strokes—a qualifying record for the ten year old tournament and a three shot lead over his three closest opponents. They were Ralph Guldahl of Madison, N. J.; Gene Sarazen of Brookfield Center, Conn., and Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., all with 137 totals for the first two rounds.

Guldahl Has 67.

Guldahl frequently has demonstrated his ability to come from behind and win. He caught Metz on the final round to win the national open in 1938, and his three straight western open victories were featured by great closing drives. Working on a 70, he went around in 67 strokes today, carding a spectacular eagle on the eighteenth green.

Metz, who was a front runner through the first three rounds of the western open and then wound up fourth, produced a game today which indicated he is ready to go through tomorrow's thirty-six hole final at top speed. His iron play was deadly and his card showed four birdies and an eagle on the eighteenth. His rounds of 68, made Friday, and 66, topped by one stroke the qualifying tournament record set by Harry Cooper in 1935.

Sarazen added a second round 67 to an opening 70. Picard, the P. G. A. champion, had a second round 68 for his 137 aggregate—a round which included a first nine of 31, five under par, which sent the gallery swarming in his wake. He lost his touch coming back, however, for a one over par 37.

In the 138 bracket were Ernie [Dutch] Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., with a 71 today; Len Mattson of the Keller course with a 70, and Ky Laffoon of Chicago with a 68. The pace for the amateurs was set by Wilford Wehrle of Racine, Wis., who had a 68 today for a 139 aggregate, the same totals as were held by the Mangum brothers, Lloyd of Los Angeles and Ray of Oakmont, Pa.

Nelson Seven Off Pace.

Abe Espinosa of Chicago and Byron Nelson, the national and western open champion from Reading, Pa., were tied at 141.

Players with thirty-six hole totals of 150 or under qualified for tomorrow's windup.

WASHINGTON PARK READY FOR ITS 30 DAY MEETING TOMORROW

30 Day Meeting Starts Tomorrow at Homewood.

Although the next official Chicago race meeting opens at Washington Park tomorrow fans will get a pre-meeting glimpse today of what to expect at Homewood during the thirty days in an open house preview in which an exhibition race will be one of the features.

The preview, which is free to the public, will include schooling at the barrier, workout gallops and other training routine. Today's program is designed to acquaint the public with action not generally seen on racing days. The public is invited to inspect the grounds, including the stable sector. Of interest are the three four-horse teams of Beigians, pure blooded draft horses which haul the starting gate, harrows, and sprinklers on the track.

Nine Stakes are Scheduled.

Nine stakes, two on each of the first two Saturdays, top the Washington Park book. The opening day feature will be the South Chicago handicap, a sprint.

President Walter L. Gregory and his associates are optimistic over prospects for the meeting. More horses are available than at any time within the history of the track and more prominent stables than Homewood ever before has attracted are on the grounds.

A few of these are Woolford Farm, Valdina, Dixiana, Warren Wright, Joseph Widener and Mrs. P. A. B. Widener, Mrs. Emil Denemark, Hal Price Headley, Morris Vehon, John Marsch, A. G. Tarn, and Clarence E. Davison.

Jacobs Will Be on Grounds.

A feature of the meeting will be the first appearance in the Central States of Hirsch Jacobs, America's leading trainer. He is after his seventh straight year of leadership. Among those competing with him for honors during the meeting will be Ben Creech, Roscoe Goose, Bryant Ott, C. E. Davison, John Oros, Paul Kelly, Jack Hanover, Dick Watts, Jack Lowenstein, Dan E. Stewart and Ross Higdon. The latter takes over the Woolford Farm horses tomorrow.

Tomorrow will be Ladies day and will mark the return of the $30,000 patrons handicapping contest to Chicago and to the track where it was first offered last year.

The track is located at 175th and Halsted streets, twenty-three miles south of the Loop.

Sickle T Wins Empire City's $10,000 Stake

New York, July 29 [Special].—Charging into the lead in the last sixteenth, Mrs. B. F. Whitaker's Sickle T. today took the $10,000 Yonkers handicap as the Empire City racing association closed the most successful season in its history. Fifteen thousand watched a field of seven go a mile and a sixteenth through rain and mud.

Ronnie Nash, young rider who had hard luck earlier in the meeting, piloted the gelded son of Sickle and Tea, which won by a head in 1:45 3-5. Arnold Hanger's He Did, which had led all the way, was second.

The Chief gained third, a half length back of He Did. Then came Isolater, 8 to 5 favorite; Lady Maryland, Invader, and Wise Barrister.

Coming around the leaders at the head of the stretch, Nash headed Sickle T. straight down the middle. Some ground was lost by this maneuver, but Nash was sure of clear sailing and Sickle T. had the power to make use of the open road.

At the sixteenth pole he was abreast of The Chief, which was hanging at the flank of He Did. For a few seconds it looked as if any one of the three might win, but Sickle T. continued his rush to the wire. He Did held on courageously to beat The Chief for the money of $1,500. The value to the winner was $7,375.

The closing afternoon at Arlington Park yesterday was everything that even the most particular racing fan could wish it to be. It was cool, bright, clear, and gay. And in addition, every one seemed to be winning.

"You're wonderful," a group of young people cried, rushing up to congratulate a tall, young man with prematurely iron gray hair. He was James G. Shennan, and his companions weren't congratulating him on his engagement to Miss Bette Rich, for they already had done that. It was Mr. Shennan's selection of Migal Fay in the first race that won him felicitations yesterday.

"I have a winning ticket on the daily double," Joseph Beuttas told a friend as he gleefully tucked Mrs. Beuttas' arm under his and went off to collect $48.40 worth of good luck.

This Man Just Couldn't Lose.

"I've cashed a ticket on every race," was the confidential remark of an unidentified young man to Mr. Beuttas later in the afternoon. Another young man sought betting advice from Miss Eleonore Thompson, presumably because any one looking as pretty as she did in ice cream pink, with long curls falling to her shoulders, naturally should be smiled upon by that fickle goddess, fortune. Miss Thompson was a guest of the Warren Wrights, whose guest badge also was worn by handsome Randolph Scott, the movie actor.

Among the few in the gloom department were Richard Burke and his fiancée, Miss Mary Cadley, who apparently were more lucky in love than at the mutuel windows. Young Betty Fleming, who was with her grandmother, Mrs. Benjamin H. Marshall, tore up tickets with the assurance and lack of expression of a veteran.

An antidote to gloom was the appearance of Harold E. Wiley, whose racing costumes would bring cheer to the heart of the most doleful Dora. Yesterday Mr. Stanley wore reddish brown trousers, a wool coat of black, red and gray plaid, further enlivened by a tiny boutonniere of bachelor buttons surrounding a sweetheart rose, a yellow shirt, a dark red tie with pearl stickpin, and a curling brimmed, dark brown felt hat.

A Hot Tip Fails.

Because it had been chilly along the lake in the morning, every one who arrived from the north shore suburbs was equipped with a jacket or coat. Miss Rich wore a wool jacket to match her lavendar print frock and its matching print jockey cap. Mrs. Wiley, who leaves for California on Tuesday, added a well tailored coat of blue wool to her silk costume.

Passing along a bad tip on Chi in the second race was Mrs. Thomas Sheffield, who looked so fetching in a pill box of pale flowers that any one could forgive her for recommending the wrong horse. Mrs. Sheffield, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Hutchins and Mrs. Alanson Donald watched from the top deck of the Post and Paddock club. Near them were Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Fentress Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Fentress, and the junior Paul B. Magnusons. Mrs. Magnuson wore an appropriate racegoing frock of blue linen striped in white with prancing horses. It was topped by a luscious hand knitted sweater of pink.

Print Frocks Predominate.

Print frocks and turbans are a favorite costume with the regulars at the Post and Paddock. Dressed more for night racing at Longchamps in Paris was another young woman who caught the eye. Her dress was of black taffeta, made with plenty of swing in the skirt. Her upswept blond curls balanced a minimum of black hat.

Mrs. Clifford Rodman, who is noted for her chic appearance, was stunning in a draped frock of black, red and white print. Her hat was a tiny bunch of flowers, mounted over one eye, and tied with a flowing cherry colored veil.

Many Luncheon Parties.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. McLennan were among the many entertaining at luncheon on the Post and Paddock club terrace. Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. Bernard F. Rogers, Mrs. William P. Martin, Mrs. Albert A. Sprague, Robert F. Carr, Charles S. Schweppe, Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed, the Charles K. Fosters and Mrs. Haskell Noyes of Milwaukee.

Mrs. Robert Buckley wore a tailored frock of navy trimmed in white. Mrs. Charles F. Glore added a brown sweater and corsage of two gardenias to a yellow linen dress. Mrs. Richard W. Simmons wore two purple orchids with her black plaited dress.

An Attractive Hat.

Slender white feathers curled around the brim of Mrs. Philip D. Block Jr., shallow sailor. Mrs. James E. Baggot Jr., carried the sable stole she thought she would have to wear.

Andy K, 27-1, Wins Futurity by 2 Lengths

Futurity purse was $33,735, the second earning $6,000, the third $3,000, and the fourth $1,500.

The stewards did not approve of Hanford's handling of Marogay during the run down the back stretch. They recommended to the Illinois racing commission that the boy be given a ten day suspension for taking his horse too sharply across the field.

Mrs. John Hertz's Count d'Or clinched the championship of the older horses at the meeting by winning the $5,920 Arlington handicap after overcoming the stubborn resistance of Mrs. Emil Denemark's Some Count. These two sons of Reigh Count dominated the race all the way and ended up in a side by side speed match throughout the last half mile. By the margin of a neck, Count d'Or beat his rival to the finish line, with W. B. Simpson's Stands Alone third. The Valdina farm's Eagle Pass ran fourth, while W. E. Maoney's Her Reigh finished last in the field of five after attempting to run with the leaders and then tiring.

Count d'Or 4 to 5.

By virtue of his excellent performance in winning both the Stars and Stripes handicap and an allowance event in his two previous appearances at Arlington, Count d'Or was established as the odds-on favorite at 4 to 5. Stands Alone was the next choice at 2 to 1, the others being at 8 to 1 or more.

In running the mile and a quarter in 2:05 over a slow track Count d'Or indicated that he will be a powerful factor in the important handicap events in the east during the late summer. As in the Stars and Stripes he showed the ability to run under pressure in the last quarter mile of a distance race.

Her Reigh and Some Count went out to make the early pace with Count d'Or close behind as they headed into the clubhouse turn. Swinging into the back stretch, Some Count took command with Count d'Or moving past Her Reigh. During the run down the back stretch, Stands Alone took third place and Her Reigh was through.

Winner Comes with Rush.

As they went into the far turn, Johnny Longden made his move on Count d'Or. Closing the gap of a length and a half, Count d'Or came along side Some Count. Sweeping into the stretch, the Hertz colorbearer pushed his nose in front and withstood a determined drive all the rest of the way home.

Count d'Or's victory was worth $4,050 to his owner. In the mutuels he returned $3.80, $3.20 and $2.40.

The track was slow as the first race was run off, Migal Fay being the winner at odds of a little better than 4 to 1. She beat Nedrow by a length and a half, with Fluke third.

Then Radio Gold, another 4 to 1 shot, came home on top in the second race to complete a double worth $48.40.

MARQUART WILL MEET RINALDI IN TEN ROUNDS

Bout Heads the Marigold Card Tomorrow.

Billy Marquart, former Canadian Olympic featherweight champion, who has not fought in four months because of a hand injury, will return to action tomorrow in a ten round bout against Johnny Rinaldi of New York in Marigold Gardens. In his last appearance Marquart scored a four round technical knockout over Jesse Ackerman in Omaha. It was Marquart's 28th triumph in 33 appearances. He has scored 17 knockouts.

Rinaldi is one of the hardest hitters in the junior welterweight class. Johnny, who is making his Chicago debut, won his last two fights, both over Bernie [Schoolboy] Friedkin in New York this season. The second meeting was Rinaldi's 20th triumph in 35 encounters. He scored 13 knockouts, his victims including Irish Eddie Dunne, Gerard Della, Al Dunbar, and Steve Padon. Of his 14 defeats, Rinaldi suffered two knockouts in 1937. He also battled to a six round draw with Nunzio Bisognio last year.

Billy Seward, Ingomar, Mont., featherweight, probably will appear in a four round preliminary against Kenny Lottman. Other matches will bring together Rex Thomas, south side light heavyweight, and Al Globe; Johnny Balmer, Peoria welterweight, and George Kontopolis, and Al Tibbits, Danville 150 pound boxer, and Russell Nyberg.

Leonard Bennett, Detroit welterweight, whose real name is Leonard Bloom, and Maxie Fisher, Newark lightweight, will appear in two contests heading the card in White City Wednesday. Bennett will oppose Johnny Barbara and Fisher will encounter Willie Joyce.

Bennett and Fisher are showing in this town for the first time. The former won five of his six matches last year, conquering Roy Chapman, Bobby Pacho, Mickey O'Brien, Carl Turner, and Peggy Snyder. Bennett defeated Pacho in ten rounds in Pittsburgh. Fisher whipped Young Chappie in Newark, March 13, and Eddie Brink in Elizabeth, Feb. 9.

An amateur boxing show also will be held Wednesday in Marigold Gardens under the auspices of the 47th ward. Sam Abruscato is the matchmaker. . . . Eddie Lander, west side featherweight contender, may meet Nick Camarata in a rematch in New Orleans following his recent conquest of Camarata on the north side.—F. M.

PARKER, M'NEILL GAIN SEABRIGHT TENNIS FINALS

Miss Bernhard to Meet Miss Workman for Title.

Seabright, N. J., July 29 [Special].—Frank Parker of Pasadena, Cal., and Donald McNeill of Oklahoma City came through to the final round of the invitation tennis tournament of the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket club today. Resuming play at the point where rain intervened in their sefi-final yesterday, with the score 5-3 against him in the opening set, Parker defeated Gilbert Hunt of Washington, D. C., 3-6, 6-4, 6-0, 1-6, 8-1.

Hunt, after appearing to lose interest in the third set, played Parker off his feet in the fourth, but the national clay court champion came back with a closing burst of speed to throttle the challenge.

McNeill Crushes Grant.

McNeill, winner of the French championship, gained his final round bracket with one of the most crushing defeats administered in years to Bryan M. Grant Jr., the tiny Atlantan, 7-5, 6-2, 6-1. Unable to start quickly on the slippery turf, Grant was buried under an avalanche of drives, volleys and smashes in the two sets played today. The first set was finished yesterday.

The final, which will not only determine the successor of Robert L. Riggs of Chicago as the holder of the Seabright bowl but will be followed closely by members of the Davis cup selection committee, will be held tomorrow afternoon. After it will come the finals of the women's singles and the men's and mixed doubles.

McNeill-Parker Gain Final.

With showers twice interrupting the play, McNeill and Parker gained one of the final brackets in the men's doubles, defeating Gardnar Mulloy of Coral Gables, Fla., and John Doeg of Rumson, N. J., 4-6, 6-0, 9-7, 6-3. In the other semi-final, Robert Riggs and Elwood Cooke, Wimbledon champions, were vanquished by Gene Mako and Wayne Sabin who paired here at the request of the Davis cup committee, 4-6, 10-8, 6-4, 1-6, 6-4.

Helen Bernhard of New York, national girl's champion, and Dorothy Workman of Los Angeles will meet for the women's bowl. The 17 year old winner of the Longwood bowl added another notable conquest to her string when she overpowered Dorothy Bundy of Santa Monica, Cal., 6-2, 6-2.

Miss Marble-Quist Win.

In the mixed doubles semi-finals Alice Marble, national women's champion from San Francisco, and Adrian Quist of Australia defeated Pauline Betz of Los Angeles and Riggs, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, and Mrs. Fabyan and Cooke defeated Mme. Henrotin and McNeill, 4-6, 6-0, 9-7.

One final was held today. Helen Jacobs of Berkeley, Cal., and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan of Boston carried off the trophies by defeating Mrs. Dorothy Andrus of Stamford, and Mme. Sylvia Henrotin of France, 6-3, 6-3.

WOMEN TENNIS STARS JOIN CRY FOR NEW BALL

Seabright, N. J., July 29.—The move to substitute a lighter and faster ball for the heavily-napped ball now in tournament use gained impetus today when Alice Marble and Helen Jacobs aligned themselves with the discontented players who already have petitioned Walter Pate, Davis cup team captain, for a new ball.

Pate, chairman of the U. S. L. T. A. ball committee, and Holcombe Ward, president of the association, both stated that chances of introducing a new ball this season were slim.

"It's a difficult situation," said Pate. "I am frank to admit I don't know what to do, and I certainly won't do anything until I get the opinions of the Australians and our leading players. Despite this petition, I want to talk to them. If they're unanimous in demanding a new ball, I'll have to contact the members of the committee, which is a tough job.

"I suppose one of the three companies manufacturing balls could put out the desired article in three weeks, but that would't leave much time for practice before the Davis cup challenge round and the nationals."

Schroeder and Patty Capture Tennis Titles

Delafield, Wis., July 29 (AP).—Fourth seeded Fred Schroeder of Los Angeles won the junior championship in the western junior and boys' tennis tournament today by defeating Arthur Marx of Beverly Hills, Cal., 2-6, 6-2, 0-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Budge Patty Jr., of Los Angeles, No. 1 in the boys' division draw, won the boys' title with a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Harry Likas of San Francisco, who was seeded second.

Forehead Fails Marx.

Marx, son of Comedian Groucho Marx, had his flat forehand shots working well at the start and appeared headed for victory, but after winning two of the first three sets had several lapses. Marx was seeded sixth.

Patty led Likas all the way, his volleys at the net, coupled with his strong backhand pass shots, being too much for the San Franciscan to handle.

Schroeder and Marx teamed up to win the junior doubles finals with a 6-1, 6-2, 1-6, 6-3 upset victory over the top seeded combination of Earl Bartlett Jr., of New Orleans and William Vogt of Philadelphia.

Bartlett and Vogt were completely outclassed except in the third set when Bartlett's service functioned at top speed.

Patty-Likas Win Easily.

Top seeded Patty and Likas scored a rout in the boys' doubles finals with a 6-0, 6-2 triumph over Bob and Tom Falkenburg of Hollywood, Cal., seeded No. 4. The Falkenburg brothers tallied only two earned points in the first set and six in the second.

GAGE PARK BOYS TAKE HONORS IN MODEL REGATTA

Model yachtsmen representing Gage park won seven of the nine places in three events in the Chicago park district model yacht regatta held yesterday afternoon in the model basin at East 51st street and the Outer drive.

Robert Plattner and Elmer Toman of Gage park led the contestants, each winning first and second places in two of the events. Plattner won the Class A race for boats 18 to 24 inches long, and took second place in the Class C race for boats 37 to 50 inches long. Toman won the Class C race and placed second in the Class B race, restricted to boats 25 to 36 inches long.

American Giants Blanked by Rookie on One Hit, 5-0

Willie Hutchinson, Kansas City rookie right hander, yielded only one hit in blanking the Chicago American Giants, 5 to 0, in the opener of a three game Negro American league series. A scratch single kept Hutchinson from a no hit game. The series will be concluded today with a double-header in the Giants' park at 39th and Wentworth. Score:

GERMANS WIN CUP MATCH AND ROUND OF BOOS

ZAGREB, Jugo-Slavia, July 29 (AP).—In a match interrupted by frequent disputes over line decisions and heated exchanges between Roderich Menzel and spectators who cried "Back to Sudetenland," Germany's Davis cup doubles team defeated Jugo-Slavia today.

Menzel paired with Henner Henkel to beat Ferenc Puncec and Frank Kukuljevic, 9-7, 4-6, 6-4, 3-6, 6-1 to give Germany a 2 to 1 lead in the European zone cup finals.

Four detectives guarded Menzel because, police said, of the warning that Czech sympathizers planned to do something against him.

Sid Luckman, Columbia Star, Weds in Brooklyn

New York, July 29 [Special.]—Sid Luckman, Columbia football star of last season, and Miss Estelle Morgolin were married in Brooklyn tonight. Dr. Isaac Landman, rabbi of the Eight Avenue synagogue, Brooklyn, performed the ceremony. Luckman and his bride will go to Chicago next month where he will join the college All-Stars for the game with the New York Giants Aug. 30 and then report to the Chicago Bears of the national professional league.

OLYMPIC VETERAN WINS A. A. U. TITLE IN BACKSTROKE

Edith Motridge Beats Gloria Callen by Yard.

Des Moines, Ia., July 29 (AP).—Edith Motridge of Los Angeles, a veteran of the 1936 Olympic games, tonight captured the 100 meter National A. A. U. women's backstroke title in the near record time of 1:18.9.

The 24 year old star, her arms churning the water in paddlewheel fashion, touched out Gloria Marie Callen of New York by a little more than a yard. Betty Bemis, Nashwauk, Minn., high school swimmer, was third.

Hawaiian Girl Scores.

Fujiko Katsutani, 14 year old Hawaiian, staved off a determined challenge by Iris Cummings of Redondo Beach, Cal., to triumph in the 200 meter breast stroke finals.

The 106 pound Wailuku girl swam the four lengths in 3:16.1. Her margin over Miss Cummings, who won the A. A. U. 220 yard breaststroke last year, was four-tenths of a second. The American record is 3:12.6, set by Margaret Hoffman in 1932.

A 13 year old miss, Nancy Merki of the Multnomah Athletic club, Portland, Ore., sped through the Birdland pool waters to capture the 400 meter free style title. Her winning time, 5 minutes 29.6 seconds, was only 1.1 seconds above Helene Madison's 5:28.5 American mark, established in 1932.

Second by three yards was Nancy's 15 year old teammate, Brenda Helser. Ann Hardin, 14, of the Lakeside Civic club, Louisville, Ky., was third, a yard behind the Helser girl.

Iowa Soph Takes Mile.

With three events left on tomorrow's program, the Los Angeles Athletic club held first place in the team standings with 21 points. Second was the Multnomah A. C. with 17. The Lakeside Civic club of Louisville, Ky., was third with 13 points and the Women's Swimming Association of New York City fourth with 11 points.

Carl Ahlgren of Des Moines, a University of Iowa sophomore, ran away with the annual Y. M. C. A. mile swim for men in the record breaking time of 23:57.3. Art Vanhavern of Moline, Ill., was second.

The winning time was seven-tenths of a second slower than Eleanor Holm's 1:18.2 record, established in 1932.

Twin Star Is First in Star Sloop Races

Star and Arrow class yachtsmen sailed the only races on the lake yesterday while skippers and crews of larger yachts cruised back from Mackinac Island. Lockwood Pirie, with Art Bradbury as crew, sailed his Twin Star to victory in the Sheridan Shore Yacht club's races for star sloops off Wilmette harbor. The event, eight miles windward and leeward, was the first in series B. Twin Star's winning time was 1:10.23. Ted Mead in Little Audrey was second in 1:12.06. Broken spreaders and parted halyards forced four of the fleet to withdraw from the race.

John F. Manierre's sloop Zephyr was first in the arrow class event sponsored by the club. Covering a course half the distance the stars sailed, Zephyr's time was 44 minutes and 20 seconds.

Delight, Tempel Smith and Russell Moon's star class sloop, won the Chicago Yacht club's series race off Belmont harbor. Winning time was 1:52.52 for the eight mile course.

Gar Wood Jr. Races to World Mark in Dead Heat

Boston, Mass., July 29 (AP).—Clint Ferguson of Newton, Mass., and Gar Wood Jr., Algonac, Mich., raced to a dead heat over a five mile course today, establishing a new class C amateur world record speed average of 53.925 miles an hour, in Boston's fifth annual outboard motor boat regatta on the Charles river. Observers said that never before had two competitors finished in a dead heat at world record figures. Wood formerly held the record, 53.79 miles an hour, established here last year.

WHEAT MOUNTS AS 'FREE' GRAIN GROWS SCARCER

Market Supply Reduced by Government Loans.

September wheat yesterday reflected the growing scarcity of supplies of "free" grain at leading American terminal markets. The price gained a fraction of a cent a bushel on the December contract. The latter was stronger than the May delivery.

Wheat futures on the Chicago Board of Trade held within a range of about 1 cent and closed ⅝ to 1¼ cents higher. The September contract showed the most strength. Corn was ⅝ to ⅞ cent higher

The officially reported sales of carlots of cash wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade last week indicated that only 10 per cent of the total receipts was sold in the open market.

Wheat Stored Under Loans.

The balance of the arrivals, it was reported, went direct to mills and elevators or was placed in storage for government loans.

The CCC has approved warehouses and elevators in Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin and Indiana for the storage of 9,000,000 bushels of grain, making the room available to farmers who desire to pledge wheat as collateral for government loans. About 4,600,000 bushels of the storage room is in Chicago and 2,700,000 bushels in Milwaukee.

Reports from the north Pacific coast indicate that cash wheat there is selling at a premium over the Chicago September delivery, an unusual situation. It is estimated by Pacific coast grain dealers that 70 to 80 per cent of the 1939 wheat harvest in that area will be pledged for loans.

Crop Comments Unfavorable.

Unfavorable crop comments on the American and Canadian spring wheat crop are increasing. Temperatures as high as 106 degrees were reported in southern Alberta and northwestern Saskatchewan. It is feared that the wheat crop in the affected area will be prematurely ripened.

The Cargill, Inc., crop bulletin said heat and drouth during the last two weeks have curtailed production of all grains in the northwestern states and the three Canadian provinces.

A car of new Montana spring wheat was received at Minneapolis yesterday. The grain tested only 44½ pounds per bushel, reflecting the damage from hot and dry weather recently. Good wheat, it is said, should weigh 55 to 60 pounds per bushel. Wheat in the Williston, N. D., area showed a test weight of 45 to 50 pounds per bushel.

Corn fluctuated in an erratic manner yesterday within a range of about 1 cent. Receipts were very small and country offerings were limited.

STOCK MARKET; GOOD BUSINESS NEWS IGNORED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 29.—Stock prices slid off fractions to one point today as the market reverted to its old Saturday gait in contrast with the enthusiastic short session a week ago. Turnover was only 245,360 shares against the 806,110 last Saturday.

The performance gave observers the impression that neither enthusiasts or pessimists cared how values drifted as long as they didn't get out of hand. An even 500 issues were traded with 250 stocks down and 118 higher.

Chemical, oil, and public utility shares held up better than other groups. Motors, steels, rails, electrical equipments were lower. Fractional advances were made by Allied Chemical, American Telephone and Telegraph, du Pont, and Union Carbide. Chrysler dropped more than a point. Johns-Manville and Westinghouse Electric lost a point each.

Steel shares were down fractions despite the fact that the outlook for next week in the steel industry is for further increases in operations to a new 1939 peak. United States Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown and Republic lined up with the losers.

TREATY BREAK BOOSTS COPPER, WEAKENS SILK

Japanese Enter the Metal Market Actively.

Abrogation of the American-Japanese trade treaty last week strengthened the copper market and caused silk prices to decline.

Almost immediately after the treaty announcement was made Japanese interests entered an already active copper market and bought about 800 tons of the metal before the end of the week.

The price on the purchases was equivalent to about 10.41 cents a pound delivered at European ports, or slightly above the prevailing market. As a result of this and other buying, export copper climbed from 10.30 cents a pound a week ago to 10.40 cents yesterday.

Domestic Price Stronger.

Domestic refined copper was boosted ⅛ cent a pound to 10⅜ cents Monday by some producers, but at the end of the week others were still quoting 10¼ cents. However, little metal was reported available at the lower price.

An additional encouraging factor in the copper market was the report that June domestic consumption of 57,878 tons was the largest in eight months.

The decline in silk, which amounted to as much as 8 cents a pound in the futures market, was inspired by fear that Japan would flood American markets with silk in order to obtain needed foreign exchange credit.

Cottonseed oil prices strengthened near their six year lows when reports came from Washington that the government may attempt to stabilize prices of that commodity.

Price lists follow:

FEDERAL CORN LOAN BINS WILL DOT LANDSCAPE

Means More Millions to Aid Farmers.

Thousands of steel bins will dot the landscape in middle western corn growing states under a new plan of the federal government to store the large supplies of surplus corn accumulated as collateral for loans to farmers. This program, announced by department of agriculture officials, is another phase of financial assistance to farmers which in the last seven years has cost the federal treasury about 15 billion dollars.

Government owned corn bins scattered over the countryside will be a new experience for farmers, and will also mark a departure in government policy. At present about 257 million bushels of ear corn which the farmers have pledged to the government as collateral for federal loans based on a rate of 57 cents a bushel are stored on farms throughout the country. The government sealed the cribs when the loans were granted.

Most Bins in Illinois and Iowa.

Most of the new steel bins, which will be of 1 and 2 thousand bushel capacity, will be erected in Iowa and Illinois. Department of agriculture officials in announcing the plan provided only sketchy details, but said they expected the bins to cost about 12 cents for each bushel of storage space. This indicated the government bill for agricultural aid will be boosted another 6 to 12 million dollars, depending on the number built.

The plan for government owned storage facilities has aroused much interest in the middle west, where most of the crop is produced, and farmers are asking many questions which were not answered in the brief announcement from Washington. The announcement said the cribs would be located in rural areas in the midwestern corn belt. Farmers assumed this meant they would be located on the farms.

Farmers Oppose More Storage.

The new program was adopted because much of the available storage space on the farms is now being used by the corn held under government seal. Few farmers are financially able to build new storage facilities. Many of those who are able are reluctant to finance the construction of new cribs because, already having far more than a normal amount in storage, they question the wisdom of storing still more.

Grain men regard the government's program as a strenuous effort to keep corn on the farm and off the market. With the price of corn futures recently at the lowest level in several years, wholesale dumping of the sealed corn would further depress prices, it was said. Corn for delivery in September sold on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday at 42⅜ cents a bushel, compared with 56⅝ cents at this time last year.

Offers to Extend Loans.

To encourage farmers to keep the 257 million bushels under seal and off the market for another year, the government has offered to extend the loans of 57 cents a bushel made on the 1938 crop for another year beyond the scheduled expiration on Aug. 1. As an added inducement, Secretary, of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace has offered to pay 6 cents a bushel for storage at the end of the extended loan period on condition the corn market price is less than the loan rate, plus carrying and storage charges.

He said farmers needing additional storage facilities would be advanced the 6 cents a bushel at the time the loans were extended. But this payment, farmers observed, would represent only about half the cost of constructing new facilities.

The 257 million bushels under seal represents nearly a normal year's commercial supply. This amount of grain coming on a market already depressed would prove particularly damaging to prices because of the approach of the 1939 harvest and the necessity of marketing another large supply of the grain.

Big Carryover Predicated.

Aggravating the situation is the supply already accumulated in an amount which has led grain authorities to predict a carryover of about 550 million bushels or more by next Oct. 1. In addition to the amount under seal, grain men estimated another 268,000,000 bushels were stored on Illinois and Iowa farms alone on July 1.

Grain authorities have frequently expressed the fear there will not be enough storage space in the entire country to accommodate large quantities of corn, wheat, rye, and other grains accumulated under the New Deal agricultural program. Storage space on farms is an unknown quantity, which can only be approximated.

Elevator storage space in the cities is regarded inadequate by some authorities. Fires have reduced the available space in grain elevators in Chicago and other cities. The latest statistics show Chicago grain elevators have a combined capacity of 54,226,000 bushels.

Must Store Other Grains.

Elevators throughout the country provide space for an estimated one billion bushels of grain. But not all of that space will be available for corn. In addition to large amounts of grain now stored in elevators, more space will be taken by the new crops of wheat, oats, rye, and barley.

According to board of trade regulations, storage rates on all grain in bulk must not exceed 1¼ cents a bushel for the first ten days or less, and one-thirtieth of a cent for each

Make Federal Loans on 14 Commodities

Crop loans made by the government to producers of American farm products, on the basis of latest figures and estimates available, total $769,000,000. Pledged as collateral for these loans are some fourteen different commodities, ranging from hops to turpentine, corn to peanuts, tobacco to prunes.

The variety of the commodities on which the government has made loans [these are for all practical purposes owned by the government] is shown in the following table:

Commodity.	Loans.	Collateral.
Cotton	$557,973,209	11,263,186 bales
Wheat	18,910,000	31,000,000 bu.
Corn	146,662,732	257,127,595 bu.
Butter	9,721,502	38,501,000 lbs.
Wool, mohair	9,031,449	50,092,053 lbs.
Turpentine, '34-'35	1,275,401	691,492.50 brls.
1938	2,012,043	9,011,185 gals.
Resin	9,965,004	808,886 rd.brls.
		122,070 drums
Tobacco	4,465,149	28,481,471 lbs.
Figs	117,518	4,489.83 tons
Peanuts	4,021,981	56,059 tons
Prunes	326,703	23,590 tons
Raisins	2,374,970	114,637 tons
Pecans	350,417	2,726,387 lbs.
Hops	1,395,588	7,076,841 bu.
Grand total	$769,000,000

Out of General Fund.

These are loans which have been made by the Commodities Credit corporation, financed primarily out of the general fund of the treasury.

If the market price of a commodity rises above the government loan price, the producer may repossess his collateral and sell it at the higher market price. If the market price does not advance above the loan level, the producer may leave his commodity in government hands. The collateral cancels the debt.

There is nothing new about this governmental effort to control commodity production and prices. Man's struggle with his self-created price system is as old as commercial trade itself. He has been at war with his own device to expedite trade ever since he conceived it.

Babylonians Pegged Prices.

The first written code of laws known to man, that of the Babylonian king Hammurabi, carefully restricted commodity trading and prices. That was about 2,000 years before Christ.

The Romans, their existence dependent upon grain shipped from conquered territories, staged riots over grain prices. Their difficulty was the opposite of that troubling this country. Roman emperors placed a maximum limit to grain prices rather than a minimum.

This interference with the grain trades carries down from the ancients through the middle ages. Not only the state, but also the church and the various craft guilds were in on the regulating.

Board Loses Vast Sum.

The first step in the current American venture was taken by the federal farm board, created by the Hoover administration. This board made outright purchases of farm products. The present administration, by substituting nonrecourse loans, has made the venture more subtle.

The federal farm board was granted an appropriation of $500,000,000 to promote orderly marketing. The board retired May 27, 1933. And to the end of 1937 more than $340,000,000 of that appropriation had been defitnitly charged off as lost.

In the last seven years the federal government has spent or loaned more than fifteen billion dollars to aid farmers. This included three billion dollars in subsidies paid to them for curtailing their crops. Loans totaled seven billion dollars.

Other Outlays Listed.

The rest of the outlay was accounted for by department of agriculture expenses, Works Progress administration expenditures in rural areas, soil conservation projects and other activities in behalf of rural areas.

Probably more important, however, is the fact that these expenditures have not produced any substantial upturn in agricultural prices. The commodities concerned are selling below their average prices prior to the depression years. In most cases only in the one or two worst depression years have they sold at lower levels than now.

In fact, the surplus commodities serve as a depressing influence on prices. The possibility that they may be dumped, thus demoralizing the markets, tends to restrain any upward price movement, market experts assert.

COURT WILL GET UTILITIES POWER PLAN IN 10 DAYS

Harry N. Gottlieb, special master appointed to study reorganization plans for the Utilities Power and Light corporation, said yesterday he expects to file a report with Federal Judge William H. Holly within ten days. The plan of the Atlas corporation, an investing company with extensive interests in Utilities Power, is the principal one under consideration, Gottlieb said.

The Atlas plan was approved Friday by the Securities and Exchange commission and was the first major holding company reorganization to be passed upon by the SEC. Gottlieb said plans previously submitted by other interests have not been pressed.

Hearings on the plan are expected to begin before Judge Holly within a few weeks. If he finds that the plan is equitable to all interests, it will be submitted to a vote among creditors and stockholders, and if they approve it, the plan will be placed in effect.

France's 'War Plan' Brings Ruin to Alsace

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 29.—The economic condition of Alsace has become so desperate as a result of the prolonged "war scare" that the French government is considering special measures to relieve the stagnation of trade and industry in the border province.

Alsatian industrialists believe that an outlet can be found for many of their products in the United States. They are going after the position which Czecho-Slovakia occupied in the American market before its absorption by the Nazi reich.

Due to its peculiar history as a "recovered province," which formerly belonged to the reich, and to the fact that it would almost certainly be turned into a battlefield of the next war, Alsace has more deeply rooted economic difficulties than other parts of France.

Lose World Markets.

After the last war Alsatian farmers and industrialists who had formerly sold their products within the German empire were unable to find a place in the French domestic market. They did, however, succeed in finding new outlets abroad and the region enjoyed prosperity until the world depression closed down their markets one after the other. The Alsatian peasantry was reduced almost to ruin and the once flourishing textile industry had the same experience.

Unemployment was widespread and distress was aggravated by the fact most of the municipalities, burdened with antiquated tax systems inherited from the German empire, were unable to care for the unemployed adequately. In some of the smaller towns of Alsace eight to nine out of every ten taxpayers were actually on relief.

Turned Into "War Zone."

The start of Edouard Daladier's great national defense program promised a new measure of prosperity to Alsace where many of the largest manufacturing centers of the republic are located. But the expected benefits of the rearmament program were wiped out by the September crisis during which virtually all trade and industry were paralyzed for a month as Alsace was turned into a "war zone."

A large percentage of the population was evacuated, including half of the inhabitants of Strasbourg. Whole sections of farm land were cleared in the course of military preparations. Capital amounting to hundreds of millions of francs was withdrawn from the region.

Alsace has not yet recovered from this blow and its chances of eventual recovery are crippled by the fact that many industries have been wholly or in part moved to other regions of France less likely to be devastated by war.

ASSAILS THOSE WHO SEEK FEDERAL CASH, THEN URGE ECONOMY

Washington, D. C., July 29 (AP).—A member organization of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States deplored today the "inconsistency" of demands for federal economy in the face of local requests for appropriations from the Washington government.

In its biweekly business review, the chamber published what it said was a "sensible suggestion" made by the Wallace, Idaho, board of trade.

Mentioning "a mad scramble by local communities to secure for themselves as large a portion as possible of available federal funds," the Wallace board said it was ready to join other communities in advising their congressmen "that they henceforth are free to exercise their independent judgment in voting upon congressional appropriations without fear of local pressure or coercion."

The national chamber said that many member chambers "have declared that never have they sought any public funds for their communities and that they do not intend to in the future."

EXPECT STEADY STEEL OUTPUT AT NEW LEVEL

The sharp upward curve registered by steel activity in the last three weeks will tend to level off in the coming week, reports from steel centers indicated yesterday. A slight increase in production over the 60.6 per cent of capacity last week is expected, but the advance will not compare with last week's jump of 4.1 points.

Chicago district steel operations are scheduled to start tomorrow at 54.5 per cent of theoretical capacity, a rise of 0.4 point from last week and 9.9 points higher than a month ago. At this time last year the Chicago output was as 37.3 per cent of capacity.

Pittsburgh operations will hold unchanged at 50 per cent of capacity, compared with 45 per cent a month ago and 25 per cent a year ago.

Youngstown district operations are scheduled to rise 1 point to 54 per cent of capacity. Birmingham operations will record a 2 point advance to 84 per cent of capacity.

Canadian Pacific's Net Operating Income Rises

The Canadian Pacific railroad yesterday reported a net operating income of $1,063,318 for June, against $511,408 in June, 1938. Six month net operating income was $5,351,343, compared with $2,681,028.

2 New Trains Win Approval of Travelers

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 29.—Carrying about 600 passengers between them the Pennsylvania railroad's Trail Blazer and the New York Central's Pacemaker completed the inaugural runs from Chicago today.

Both new trains are experimenting with mass transportation at high speed and low cost. Each runs on a schedule only about an hour slower than the de luxe sixteen hour trains of the two roads.

Passengers on both trains voted them a success. As the Trail Blazer sped across Pennsylvania last night many of the young riders danced in the de luxe observation car to music supplied by the radio.

Who Wants to Sleep?

The train rode comfortably. But perhaps inspired by the comaraderie of an initial run few of the passengers got more than a few hours of sleep.

Officials of both the Pennsylvania and New York Central railroads report a heavy demand for seats on the two trains, which consist solely of chair cars, diners, and lounge cars. Both trains are running with three or four extra cars in both directions.

Conversations with many of the passengers indicated that had it not been for the low fares and speed of these trains they would either have used buses or they would not have traveled.

Cheap Meals Are Feature.

One young woman, who got on at Fort Wayne, said she was inspired to take the train from a story she read about it in a Chicago newspaper. Another said the low cost meals were one of the principal reasons for taking the train.

"Meals on the regular trains cost too much," she said.

Two young people who got on at Pittsburgh said that last year they took a bus to the east, but the low fares and fast service of the Trail Blazer induced them to take that train.

The Trail Blazer carried about 300 passengers to New York. About 400 rode the train, some getting off en route and others taking their places.

PRICES OF BONDS EASE; JAPANESE ISSUES FIRMER

New York, July 29 (AP).—The bond market eased today. Brokers credited the declines largely to buyers' apathy, because business news remained cheerful.

In the foreign section Japanese loans found a firmer footing. Substantial loses were incurred recently following American denunciation of a 1911 trade treaty with Japan. Although a few small declines appeared, Japanese government 6½s managed to edge forward. Panama bonds slipped back, the 5s of '63 A dropping 2 to 77.

There was little demand for United States government loans, which ended 3-32ds of a point higher to 5-32ds lower.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS SLIP TO 274 MILLIONS

The Chicago Clearing House association reported yesterday that Chicago bank clearings declined last week. The total was $274,800,000, against $296,000,000 in the preceding week. In the corresponding 1938 week clearings totaled $261,500,000. The association's report follows:

END OF TREATY MAY CAUSE JAPS TO RUSH BUYING

Can Make Use of Six Months' Notice.

New York, July 29 (AP).—Some foreign trade circles said today the United States notice to Japan of abrogation of the commercial treaty with that country might prompt some immediate expansion of Japanese purchases here of such things as iron and steel, petroleum, and automobiles.

So far this year Japanese purchases have been somewhat less than last year, but it was thought the Nipponese might take advantage of the six months' notice to increase supplies of materials for which they look across the Pacific. This would be in preparation for the possibilities of less favorable trade conditions under such new treaty as may be negotiated.

Japan Is Good Customer.

Although Japan bought only 7.7 per cent of total American exports last year, it was individually the third best customer of the United States. Its total purchases ran to $239,620,000, exceeded only by United Kingdom and Canada.

In the first five months of this year Japan took only $96,267,000 of American products, which was $13,371,000 less than in the same months of last year. The decline reflected somewhat smaller purchases of cotton, petroleum, automobile parts, and airplanes.

Japan has been buying much more from the United States than this country buys from her. American purchases from Nippon totaled only $126,820,000 in 1938, leaving an excess of American exports to that country of $112,800,000. This was more than offset, however, by shipment of $168,739,000 of Japanese gold, which was sold to the United States treasury, thus providing Japan with dollars to make purchases.

Japanese Sales Increase.

In the earlier months of this year Japanese sales to the United States showed a little higher dollar volume. Through May they amounted to $50,250,000, up $2,406,000 compared with last year, but this was due to higher prices for silk, resulting from curtailed production.

The outstanding trade between America and Japan was long the swapping of cotton for silk. But in 1938 Japan bought $52,850,000 worth of cotton and sold the United States $83,651,000 worth of raw silk, both figures showing substantial shrinkage from earlier years. Japanese purchases of such things as iron and steel, machinery, automobiles, and petroleum came to substantially more than her cotton buying.

Cotton Subsidy May Aid Japan.

Washington, D. C., July 29 (AP).—The American government's new policy of subsidizing cotton exports may be a boon to Japan to the extent of $4,000,000 to $10,000,000, officials of the agriculture department said today.

They explained that, although the state department had given notice of its intention to abrogate the 1911 commercial treaty the pact would continue in effect for six months and make it impossible to deny Japan the export subsidy benefits granted other nations.

Under the export subsidy policy, designed to increase foreign purchases of surplus American cotton, buyers abroad will be able to purchase the raw fiber at prices about $7.50 a bale below domestic quotations, the American government paying the difference.

HOG PRICES END HIGHER; SIX DAY AVERAGE LOWER

Prices of hogs closed last week at levels higher than those of the preceding Saturday, making the better showing despite a drop in the six day average price to a new five year low. Various classes finished with gains of 10 to 50 cents per hundred pounds for the week, with the heaviest hogs advancing most.

The six day average, $5.70, was 5 cents less than for the preceding week and $2.75 less than in the corresponding 1938 week. Two years ago the average was $11.85.

Cattle and sheep sold at steady to lower compared with a week earlier. Steers were unchanged to 25 cents lower. Yearlings, cows, heifers and replacement cattle held steady. Calves were unchanged to 25 cents lower.

Lamb prices dropped 35 to 50 cents, with the six day average slipping 35 cents to $8.95, the lowest weekly average since the six days ended May 27. Yearlings, old sheep and feeding lambs were firm.

Speed Probate of Estates by New Law

Speedier movement of estates through the probate court will be effected under the new consolidated Illinois probate act, trust officials said yesterday. The bill recodifying the old laws into one act has been signed by Gov. Horner and will become effective Jan. 1.

Reuben A. Lewis Jr.
Praises new law.

Acceleration of probate machinery is expected from the provision in the revised law which limits the time for filing claims against estates to nine months. Previously creditors were allowed a full year.

The reduced time for filing claims, trust officers said, will permit the executor or administrator of an estate to complete his duties in many instances soon after the nine-month period.

Predicts Speedy Settlements.

"The settlement of estates and the payment of claims to creditors," said Reuben A. Lewis Jr., "will be speeded up through enactment of the new streamlined probate act." Lewis, executive vice-president of the Metropolitan Trust company, has prepared a digest of the law.

"The probate law, hitherto scattered through 34 different chapters of law," he said, "has been condensed into one chapter. Various inconsistencies have been removed."

Attorney Frederic H. Bengel, counsel for the Northern Trust company, said recodification of the probate laws simplified the law of administration of estates and defined clearly the duties of executors, administrators, conservators and guardians.

Marriage Does Not Revoke Will.

"The most important revision that I noticed in the new law," Bengel said, "is that marriage does not revoke a will made previously. Under the old law, the act of marriage automatically nullified all wills made before marriage."

Lewis considered the widening of the field for investment of funds by guardians and conservators as among the most significant changes. Funds under present rules can be invested only in government or government guaranteed securities, high grade corporate stocks and bonds, and some first mortgage bonds, subject to the approval of the court.

May Invest in Real Estate.

The new law permits investment in real estate in the United States, in other classes of first mortgage bonds, and in fully paid endowment and annuity policies.

The award to children from deceased estates has been increased from $200 to $300. The widow's award for living expenses is still determined by the court after examining the size of the estate, her station in life and her living standards.

An unusual section of the act excludes a convicted murderer from inheriting any interest in the estate of the person he has slain. This was included in an effort to remove one motive for homicide.

Revision of the probate laws was accomplished by a committee of the Illinois State Bar association headed by Attorney William M. James of Chicago.

Washington, D. C., July 29 [Special].—The value of building permits issued in June was $196,909,470, an increase of 41.9 per cent over June, 1938, the department of labor reported today. The total was 0.4 per cent higher than the May, 1939, total.

A 40.7 per cent increase in new nonresidential construction from May to June more than offset a 14.4 per cent decline in residential building, the department announced. The drop in residential building reflected principally a decrease in United States Housing authority projects from the record level of 8,803 family dwelling units in May to 2,877 in June.

Federal and state construction contracts awarded in June totaled $33,033,000, down slightly from the $35,234,000 reported in May, but much higher than the $8,032,000 total for June a year ago.

Schedule Willys-Overland Meeting on Voting Powers

Stockholders of Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., will hold a special meeting Aug. 14 to consider a proposed amendment of the certificate of incorporation. The directors propose to revise the provisions which give the preferred shareholders exclusive voting power in case of arrearage on six quarterly dividends.

TRADE CATCHES BREATH AFTER SUMMER CLIMB

Some Lines Falter, but Two Set Highs.

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

Several branches of business faltered last week after an extended summer climb, but two—steel making and residential building—pushed on up to new high ground for the year.

Automobile production declined in keeping with the seasonal trend. Latest figures on freight car loadings and power output were lower than in the preceding week. Shrinkages were reported in new financing, engineering construction awards, cotton textile manufacturing and retail trade. Wholesale orders maintained their better than seasonal showing of the preceding week. Bank loans for business purposes declined in Chicago but increased in New York City. Bank clearings expanded.

Steel Output Rises.

Steel mills expanded their output to 60.6 per cent of capacity, the second consecutive week in which new 1939 peaks were reached. The rate compared with 56.4 per cent a week earlier and 37 per cent a year earlier.

Automobile assembly lines turned out 40,595 cars and trucks, against 47,420 in the preceding week and 31,890 in the corresponding 1938 period. Most plants were reported to be busy changing over from 1939 to next year's models.

The decline in railroad freight loadings was attributed largely to smaller shipments of grain. Loadings totaled 656,341 cars, compared with 673,812 in the preceding week, which ended

July 15. The volume was 13 per cent larger than in the 1938 week. The latest figures on freight, like those for power production, are for the week ended July 22.

Power Production Dips.

Electric power production totaled 2,294,588,000 kilowatt hours, against 2,324,181,000 in the July 15 week and 2,084,763,000 in the corresponding 1938 week.

The volume of new financing tumbled to $40,741,500 from $191,933,750 in the preceding week. In the corresponding 1938 period offerings of new issues amounted to $10,848,875.

Engineering construction awards declined to $42,134,000, from $43,783,000. The volume in the 1938 week was $48,716,000.

In the week ended July 23 sales by department stores were 8 per cent larger than a year earlier, the federal reserve board said.

The Associated Press composite index of industrial activity advanced to 92.6 per cent of the 1929-'30 average. It stood at 90.4 per cent a week earlier and at 70.8 per cent in the corresponding 1938 week. The index, with its seasonally adjusted components, compared as follows:

In the corresponding 1938 quarter it earned $810,273, or 81 cents a share. Six month profit was $2,846,910, or $3.04 a share, against $2,200,460, or $2.10 a share, in the first half of 1938.

White Motor company, builder of commercial vehicles, reduced its six month loss to $469,045, from $884,778 in the first six months of last year.

Reports Sales Rising.

Robert F. Black, president of White Motor, said sales of the company's heavy duty trucks accounted for a large share of the business in the half year. He said also that a new delivery truck with an air cooled engine, is selling in increasing volume.

Yale and Towne Manufacturing company, maker of locks and builders' hardware, reported profit of $5,986, or 1 cent a share, in the June quarter. It had a net loss of $152,624 in the corresponding 1938 period.

FUNDED DEBT.

What is funded debt? Of what significance is it in studying a company—E. F.

Answer: Probably the most satisfactory way to define the term "funded debt" is to tell what it includes. It consists of all bonds, debentures, serial notes or other indebtedness other than that due within one year. This is considered current debt and is listed by the company under current liabilities.

Debt is not necessarily bad for a company. Ernest T. Weir, chairman of National Steel corporation, has been quoted as approving some debt because it makes every one in the company work a little harder. Companies borrow money because they believe they can use it in such a fashion that the return to them will be greater than the interest they must pay on the borrowed money.

Industries which have passed their growth stage are often troubled with debt contracted in earlier periods. The railroads are an example of this fact. So far as actually operating the lines is concerned, railroads make money. But many of them do not make enough money to cover interest and principal payments on money they borrowed to build their lines.

When a company is unable to meet interest and principal payments on funded debt, it must go into receivership. The debt is then "scaled down"—the holders of junior securities are given other securities in the reorganization. A new company is formed. Sometimes common stockholders are wiped out in a severe reorganization.

In a railroad reorganization, for example, holders of bonds secured by second or third liens on trackage, rather than a first lien, may often receive bonds bearing a lower interest rate, preferred stock, or even common stock in the new company. Sometimes they get a little bit of everything.

Even first mortgage bonds are not always left undisturbed in railroad reorganizations. Much depends upon the importance to the entire line of that trackage pledged as security for the bond. If it is of minor importance, the bondholders will find themselves getting different securities. If it is of major importance, bondholders are likely to find their securities unchanged in the reorganization.

Companies may raise money through borrowing or by increasing their outstanding stock. When the number of shares of stock is increased, the earnings for each share are reduced. If interest payments in relation to gross earnings are not large, the management may consider funded debt a better way to raise money than by diluting the earnings of the stock.

INSURANCE MAN PAYS STREET, BUT 'NOT FOR JUDGE'

Another Witness Testifies on Missouri Scandal.

The late Charles R. Street, described as "sort of a Hitler" in the fire insurance business, received a $11,000 payment from one insurance executive, but only on the assurance that the money would not be used to "buy a judge," it was testified yesterday. Carsten Claussen, western American manager of the London and Lancashire Insurance company, gave the testimony at a hearing before Special Commissioner Paul V. Barnett, in the Insurance Exchange building.

Barnett, a Kansas city lawyer, was appointed by the federal court to investigate alleged fraud in the Missouri fire insurance rate compromise. In imprisoning Thomas J. Pendergast, Kansas City political boss, and R. Emmet O'Malley, former Missouri insurance superintendent, for evasion of income taxes, the federal government charged Street paid Pendergast $315,000 and O'Malley $62,500 for agreeing to the compromise.

Deny Knowledge of Fund Use.

Barnett left Chicago last night with the testimony of nineteen insurance executives who swore they had no knowledge of what Street did with funds they said he collected from 137 insurance companies in 1936. His inquiry will be resumed in New York tomorrow.

Attorneys in the case said the report which Barnett will make to the federal court at Kansas City will be an important factor in deciding upon the disposition of more than 7 million dollars in premiums which have been impounded by the court.

Claussen said Street had demanded 5 per cent of the premiums that Claussen's four affiliated companies had impounded in Missouri, informing him the money was needed for "expenses." The witness said his request for an explanation was answered by Street with the statement: "Well, I am sorry, Mr. Claussen, but I can't tell you that just now."

Testimony About Judge.

Claussen said he finally ordered the checks written for his companies after he had asked Street, "Is this money to be used in the settlement of this case, possibly to buy a judge or some one?"

The witness said Street replied:

"Mr. Claussen, I can answer that question with a positive 'no.' These funds are to be used for legitimate purposes only."

From testimony of the day before, it appeared that other insurance officials had turned funds over to Street without much investigation of the exact use to which the money was to be put. One witness said Street was "sort of a Hitler," because of his dominating personality.

Claussen said he capitulated to Street's request when Street produced an envelope bulging with checks of New York insurance officials.

FEDERAL CORN LOAN BINS WILL DOT LANDSCAPE

Calls for More Millions to Aid Farmers.

additional day, so long as the grain remains in good condition.

AAA representatives are urging farmers to reseal their corn and extend their loans to further Secretary Wallace's "ever-normal granary" plan. Recent letters to farmers advocating this step have been construed as indicating the government as represented by the present administration intends to continue the loan plan indefinitly.

View of AAA Official.

What he termed advantages of resealing were emphasized in a recent letter to farmers written by Carl M. Bornet, Cook county chairman of the Agricultural Adjustment administration, and headed "Dear Coöperator."

Bornet blamed the "ups and downs" of both corn and hog prices on fluctuations in corn production, which he said "has varied by nearly a billion bushels in two of the last five years."

In urging farmers to reseal, he said: "We have a chance to establish the kind of ever-normal granary for corn that will go far toward leveling out these wide variations in corn and live stock prices.

"It will not be easy this first year when we are providing additional storage space. But our whole program is built on the ever-normal granary plan. We must maintain it if our farm program is going to operate effectively. To keep our present farm program is worth whatever sacrifice we can make in providing ways and means of keeping this corn on the farms."

Growers Hesitate Over Expense.

Bornet notified farmers that although their 1937 corn must be stored as shelled corn, the 1938 supply may be stored either shelled or on the ear. Although shelling of the corn would enable farmers to store a larger amount, saving space by comparison with that required for ear corn, many farmers are reluctant to undertake the added expense of handling it. It was pointed out that the ear corn, usually stored in cribs, would have to be shelled and restored in bins.

Many authorities fear that the government's experience in cotton may be duplicated in corn. The government made loans to cotton planters based on prices far above those which the staple commanded in the market and found itself the owner of most of the cotton.

Several large railroads reporte[d] higher net operating incomes fo[r] June and the first half of 1939 tha[n] for the corresponding 1938 period[s]. The Santa Fe, however, earned les[s] in June than a year ago. Its si[x] month report showed improvement.

The interstate commerce commis[sion] said class 1 roads had a com[bined] June net railway operating in[come] of $39,095,476, against $25,159,522 in June, 1938.

Industrial Gains Reported.

The week's reports covering Jun[e] included the federal reserve board'[s] survey of industrial trends. The boar[d] said business made substantial gain[s] last month and that the gains wer[e] maintained in the first half of Jul[y]. The board's index of industrial pr[o]duction climbed to 97 for June fro[m] 92 in May and 77 a year earlier.

The department of agriculture est[i]mated that farmers' cash income fro[m] marketings decreased to 501 millio[n] dollars last month from 508 millio[n] dollars in May and 514 million dollar[s] in June, 1938. Such income usually i[n]creases from May to June. Includin[g] 51 million dollars of government pay[]ments, the June income of farmer[s] totaled 552 million dollars, compare[d] with 589 million dollars in May an[d] 559 million dollars in June, 1938.

Ship More Structural Steel.

The American Institute of Stee[l] Construction said June shipments o[f] fabricated structural steel were th[e] largest for any month in the last tw[o] years. Shipments of tires in June, a[s] reported by rubber companies, totale[d] 5,733,216 units, the largest for an[y] month since June, 1933.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Ch[i]cago reported that business made a[n] unusually good showing in June in th[e] Seventh federal reserve district, an[d] that the traditional summer contrac[]tion did not develop. The state labo[r] director said employment and wage[s] in Illinois last month increased mor[e] than the usual seasonal amount.

Among the reports covering the firs[t] six months of the year was one b[y] the department of commerce whic[h] showed that national income was 93 million dollars more than in the firs[t] half of 1938. The total for the 193[9] period was 32 billion 496 million do[l]lars. National income includes wage[s] dividends, rents, and income fro[m] other similar sources.

Retail Auto Sales Larger.

Retail sales of automobiles, as re[]ported by the Automobile Manufac[]turers' association, were 43 per cen[t] larger in the first half of 1939 than i[n] the corresponding 1938 period. Th[e] Ford Motor company is not a membe[r] of the association.

American foreign trade felt th[e] effects of large decreases in exports o[f] cotton, corn, and wheat. The nation'[s] excess of exports over imports fell t[o] $320,864,000. In the first half of 193[8] it was $629,833,000. Exports of railwa[y] equipment were less than half th[e] dollar volume of a year ago. Howeve[r] exports of pork increased in June a[s] compared with May, and the foreig[n] trade situation of packers was th[e] most favorable since November, 193[], the department of commerce said.

The American government put it[s] butter price pegging machinery in mo[]tion again after a lapse of severa[l] months. Secretary Wallace ordere[d] the federally financed Dairy Product[s] Marketing association to resume buy[]ing on the mercantile exchanges.

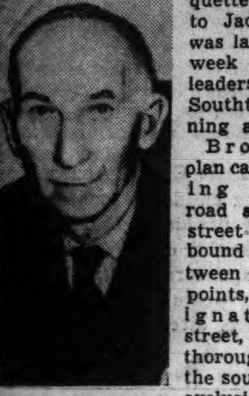
Group Wants It One Way Street.

A campaign to relieve trafic congestion in Marquette road from Marquette park east to Jackson park was launched last week under the leadership of the Southtown Planning association.



Lincoln Rogers.

Broadly, the plan calls for making Marquette road a one way street for westbound trafic between the two points, and designating 68th street, the next thoroughfare to the south, for the exclusive use of eastbound vehicles.

To accomplish this, both the city and the Chicago park district must give their assent, according to Lincoln Rogers, executive director of the planning association. If the city consents to this solution of the problem of Marquette road congestion, the park district, which now has jurisdiction over Marquette road, will be asked to take over 68th street also. Steps to get the city's consent will be taken in the next few days, it was said.

Street is Overcrowded.

"As matters stand," Mr. Rogers said, "Marquette road is grossly overburdened. Population growth has brought it a load of trafic much greater than its safe and comfortable capacity.

"When we solve the problem of trafic overload here we will have taken a big step toward halting the down trend of realty values, not only in the Englewood area, which my association serves, but also the entire south side."

Mr. Rogers listed several reasons why the plan is desirable. It will, he said, avoid destruction of the trees that line Marquette road throughout most of its length. It will entail a minimum of expense and trouble, because no property condemnation will be necessary; it will reduce fatalities, injuries, and property damage from trafic collisions, and uplift the entire neighborhood by encouraging property improvement.

Means Wide Benefits.

Benefits of the Marquette road project would be felt by motorists from other neighborhoods because it would be the city's most southerly east-west boulevard for quick, pleasant crosstown travel, Mr. Rogers declared.

Other organizations are aiding in the fight to relieve trafic congestion in Marquette road. One of these is the 17th ward Community council, composed of several improvement and civic associations in the area and headed by Max Fenneman.

This project is only one of several on the aggenda of the Southtown Planning association, Mr. Rogers revealed. Other methods of raising the tone of the Englewood area and thus reversing the decline of property values are either in operation or are being planned, he said.

Aim at Beautification.

One of the first acts of the association when Mr. Rogers entered the picture last Feb. 15 was to launch a city beautiful contest in which prizes are being offered for the prettiest window boxes, the best back yard gardens, the most attractive front gardens and the best kept yards. This contest will end in September. More than 400 families are entered.

Officers of the association are now correlating information gathered in a land use survey, preparatory to working out a long range plan for the Englewood area. This survey was one of the first of its kind ever made by a similar association.

The territory served by the Southtown Planning association is bounded on the north by 54th street, on the west by Marshfield avenue, on the south by 76th street and on the east by State street. It takes in parts of the 16th, 17th, and 18th wards.

It covers an area of approximately six square miles, and has about 150,-[illegible]0 inhabitants. There are some [illegible],000 dwellings in the area, of which [illegible] per cent are one or two family homes.

Coöperation is Sought.

Recognizing that voluntary coöperation is necessary to its work, the association has placed much reliance on its committee on residential coöperation, Mr. Rogers said.

Harry S. Himmel, a director, is head of this committee. Working in close coöperation with him are four territorial chairmen, Charles L. Leinecker for the northeast part of Englewood, Capt. John J. Flynn for the northwest, Victor T. Eckert for the southeast and Charles J. Quinn for the southwest.

Each of these territorial chairmen works with four neighborhood chairmen, who in turn direct the activities of between 600 and 700 block captains.

"Thus we cover our area like a blanket," Mr. Rogers said. "With this comprehensive organization we can get immediate word of any condition likely to have an adverse effect on property values and take steps to combat it."

Lyrical Lady to Make Party a Perfect Day

BY RITA FITZPATRICK.

Valiant is the word for Carrie Jacobs-Bond. Some people whistle to keep up their courage. Forty years ago Mrs. Bond sang to keep up hers. The songs were her own, written in a barren room at 31st street and Lake Park avenue. Those melodies, now surrounded with fame and the affection of the nation, hide a tale of early tragedy and hardship in Chicago.

[Bushnell Photo.]

Guests at the Chicagoland Music festival luncheon Friday noon, Aug. 18, in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel, will see Mrs. Bond as a quiet little woman of 77 years whose white hair rests softly like a cotton bloom on her forehead and whose prestige falls even more gently on her shoulders. She will rise graciously, as the special guest, to cut the tenth anniversary cake for the festival. Then Edith Mason, well known opera star, will sing Mrs. Bond's famous song, "I Love You Truly," elaborated with a tableau bridal party which will appear on the stage. Fame will seem easy and graceful to all onlookers.

Struggle in Big City.

Mrs. Bond, herself, will see another side of the story. She will remember the thin, plain little woman who once tackled the Big City the hard way. The now famous composer came to Chicago during the depression years after the first world's fair. She had left tragedy behind her in Iron River, Mich., where her second husband, Dr. Frank Lewis Bond, had been killed by some harmless children robust at their play. There was only a little insurance money, too much furniture, and her young son.

She had been reared gently as befitted the young ladies in well to do families of her day. In Janesville, Wis., where she was born, Mrs. Bond's education had been music, painting, needlework, and cooking. Faced with the necessity of earning her own living in Chicago, Mrs. Bond candidly viewed her ladylike talents with alarm. She selected her music as the most likely asset.

As a little girl Mrs. Bond had played any piece which she heard the first time. At 9 she had mastered Liszt's "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" entirely by ear, and hundreds of little songs which had no name and no sheet music ran through her head. During her early years of security and happiness Mrs. Bond had often written down those songs for the pleasure of her family and husband. In Chicago she decided to write them for a livelihood.

Starts Own Business.

Writing those songs of faith and love in a little room, where the gas burner had to hide behind the piano and where there was perhaps only bread for supper, staved off discouragement for Mrs. Bond and her son. They made it a game for each other's benefit. When a group of those brave melodies were grudgingly purchased for a mere $35 by a publisher who thought them unsalable, Mrs. Bond decided to publish her own compositions. To be the owner of a few songs that nobody had ever heard she knew would not get her far. The songs had to be sung.

With no pride in her vocal ability, only hope, Mrs. Bond began to sing at little recitals in the drawing rooms of her influential friends who relayed her story to other people. For several years she went from home to home, singing for her supper. The Arche club on the south side claims to be the first organization to give Mrs. Bond a paid engagement.

Suddenly those warm songs reached the ear of George McConnell who began to sing them in his beautiful tenor voice, and of Jessie Bartlett Davis, contralto of the Bostonians. Mrs. Davis thrust $250 on Mrs. Bond for the purpose of publishing seven of the songs in one little book titled, "Songs as Unpretentious as the Wild Rose." That book contained "I Love You Truly" and "Just A'Wearying for You."

Success In a Song.

"When You Come to the End of a Perfect Day" finally established Mrs. Bond as one of the great American song writers. Even that beloved melody took years to entrench itself in the hearts of the people.

Today Mrs. Bond resides with her son in a beautiful home appropriately named "The End of the Road" in Hollywood, Cal. She is, nevertheless, making the long journey eagerly to come back to a Chicago which has become music minded. She will greet many old friends at the festival luncheon, among them John T. McCutcheon, whose influence once aided her during those struggling years, and Mrs. Charles S. Clark, clubwoman who has visited at "The End of the Road."

Another famous person, beloved by the American people, will sit beside Mrs. Bond at the luncheon. He is George Ade, the humorist. Residents of Chicagoland are invited to be present with them. Luncheon reservations are $1.50 each and are available at festival headquarters, Tribune Tower. Checks or money orders should be made payable to the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

Add Beauty to Yacht

These are the days when you shade your eyes on the shore near Jackson park harbor and watch the billowing spinnakers and the gleaming hulls of south siders' yachts as their bows spurn the cool, green swells of Lake Michigan. These are the season's best days for local yachtsmen and the beauty of their ships makes a much prettier picture when amateur sailors like Pat Davis (left) and Lucille O'Connell grace the deck. The girls came out to the harbor last week to help tidy up the Rajah II., Dr. Harold A. Hooper's power boat, which is one of the two yachts to be used by the Hyde Park Kiwanis club in the regular weekly meeting scheduled to take place far out in the lake Aug. 9.

IRISH TO MEET IN PROTEST ON ULSTER DIVISION

Riverview Park Outing Is Set for Aug. 13.

Keeping the age old "Irish question" alive, thousands of Irish-American patriots of Chicago will gather Sunday, Aug. 13, in Riverview park grove to discuss among themselves and to frown upon the partition of Ireland and the dismemberment of the province of Ulster.

The meeting, which will be in the form of a picnic and entertainment, will be sponsored by the Irish-American National alliance, a federation of Chicago Irish organizations which have united for the purpose of campaigning against what they believe to be an artificial division of the Emerald Isle.

Among the most active participants in promoting the meeting are 300 Ulster men and women, members of the Ulster Irish Liberty legion. The organization was established last October and is headed by Bernard MacGillian, president.

Program for Day.

The meeting will open with "The Star Spangled Banner" and close with the national anthem of Ireland, "The Soldiers' Song," written by Victor Herbert.

While picnic luncheons and suppers are being unpacked beneath the trees, the young people will have an afternoon of Irish and American social dancing. Tentative plans for the outing even include the Irish game of hurling. A concert will be presented in the afternoon by the Irish Choral society directed by Dr. J. E. Cordon.

Members of organizations present at the outing will include those of the Wolfe Tone club, the Douglas Hyde club, the Irish Mummers, the De Dannan society, the All-Ireland Republic club, the Ulster Irish Liberty legion, the United Irish societies, the Sarsfield club, and the Irish National clubs.

Besides eating, the schedule calls for bowling, racing, dancing, and various games.

WATER SPRITES SHARE FETE WITH DRY LANDSMEN

Fishermen, Dancers Join in Carnival.

In the cool of the evening beside the newly remodeled pool, residents from throughout the southwest side will assemble Tuesday for the sixth annual water carnival at McKinley park, 39th street and Western avenue. Colored flood lights will play over the water while expert swimmers and divers flash in and out of the pool in stunts and races.

During the first hour of the show, beginning at 8 o'clock, the swimming events will take place. Social dancing also will be at the same hour on the main stage. The entertainment will begin at 9 o'clock featuring Irving Bedard, national junior tumbling champion. Alternating with the stage acts will be aquatic exhibitions. A group of ten talented mermaids will present a water ballet.

30 in Ballet Dance.

A pageant portraying the history of the dance will be presented by the Hinds ballet troupe of thirty dancers on the main stage. Immediately after, the all-star diving exhibition will be held at the pool with Miss Arlite Smith of the Central Amateur Athletic union and Al Greene of the Olympic team as stars. A casting contest, for the interest of local fishermen, will be staged by Miss Margaret Weaver and Eddie Davis, both nationally known in the sport world.

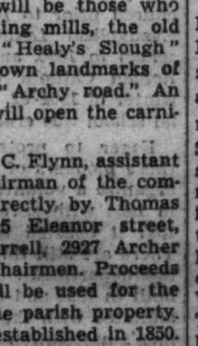
ST. BRIDGET PARISH TO OPEN HOMECOMING FESTIVITIES TODAY

Despite whizzing transport trucks and motor cars, time will turn a handspring on Archer road today when old timers will return for the annual homecoming week and carnival of St. Bridget parish, 2928 Archer avenue, on the church grounds. Bridgeport was the scene of the late Finley Peter Dunne's stories in which old St. Bridget's largely figured.



The Rev. Francis W. Glynn.

The Rev. Francis W. Glynn, pastor, has designated this evening as Old Settlers night and invited hundreds of former parishoners from throughout the city to attend. There will be those who remember the rolling mills, the old street car barns, "Healy's Slough" and other well known landmarks of the 19th century "Archy road." An afternoon parade will open the carnival.

The Rev. Wilbur C. Flynn, assistant pastor, will be chairman of the committee, assisted directly by Thomas J. McNichols, 2815 Eleanor street, and Miss Mae Farrell, 2927 Archer avenue, assistant chairmen. Proceeds of the carnival will be used for the rehabilitation of the parish property. St. Bridget's was established in 1850.

". . . let your dollars chant a song of warmth to the generous tune of a brand new heating plant" runs the last two verses of the plea on the envelope sent to parishioners of the Christ Methodist Episcopal church. The envelope, which encloses an invitation to the church's special program Thursday evening in celebration of the silver wedding anniversary of the Rev. and Mrs. Lloyd Hoover, pastor and wife, is a reminder that the event will serve a double purpose. Not only will worshippers take part in the wedding commemoration of the beloved couple, for which a novel musical arrangement has been made, but they will be able to contribute toward a heating plant for the parsonage.

3 ON SO. WEST SIDE DUE TO MAKE REFUNDS

21,000 Depositors to Be Benefitted.

The 21,000 depositors of three closed state banks in the southwestern part of the city and county will divide an additional $262,500 during the next few weeks if the prediction made last week by State Auditor Edward J. Barrett is borne out. They are the Brighton Park State bank, the Central Manufacturing District bank, and Depositors State bank.

Mr. Barrett's announcement came with his release of the statements showing the condition of the first group of closed state banks for the quarter that ended June 30. These statements are based on figures supplied the state auditor by the receivers for the banks.

May Divide $17,500.

The Brighton Park bank, with 2,400 waiting depositors, may soon divide another $17,500.

The Central Manufacturing bank is contemplating a new refund totaling about $125,000 to its 7,600 depositors.

The Depositors bank's new repayment will amount to about $120,000, and it will be shared by 11,000 depositors whose funds were frozen when the bank suspended in January, 1932.

Analyses of the new figures for the first group of southwestern banks are given below, together with the most accurate available estimates of the future outlook for depositors:

Auburn Park Trust and Savings—Total receipts, $670,300. Paid on prior claims, $162,980. Paid depositors, $251,711, or 47½ per cent. Costs: Receivers, $6,119; legal, $22,189; clerical, $46,411; interest, $350; advanced to protect assets, $163,559, with $155,083 refunded. Cash, $16,977.

WANTS INVESTIGATION.

As a client and taxpayer on Chicago's great southwest side I'd like to have you print the following or investigate what I have to say. Forty-seventh street is being repaved between Kedzie and Kolin avenues. The Ready Coal and Construction company is paving it west of Archer avenue.

All day trucks bearing the name "Ready" are dumping load after load of old roadbed rock and cement on all streets west of Kolin avenue. This will later have to be removed at great cost to Chicago taxpayers. Not only is this an eyesore but a great danger to our children who will play in between these mountainous dumps of rock. I want to know if permission was granted to dump on city streets or who is getting what and why. A TAXPAYER.

URGES BUS LINES.

Will the presidents and village trustees of the following towns on greater Harlem avenue send a letter to the Southwest Bus company, also the south suburban Safeway Lines, also to the Blue Bird Bus lines and Chicago and West Towns Bus company, asking them to install bus lines on Harlem avenue from 63d street, a seven cent car line, south to 123d street? These towns—Worth, Chicago Ridge, Summit, Argo, Justice, Palos Park, Harlem Heights, and Broadview—have a combined population of 90,000.

Also on south Cicero avenue from the airport at 63d street to 9100 south. Two more southwest suburban buses are needed, as hundreds of new homes are being built all along Harlem avenue and Cicero avenue south of 63d street. Where are your civic clubs in this territory? Will you try to get these two badly needed bus lines? GEORGE PATTERSON.

PRAISES PARK GOLF.

After reading the article by "Disgusted" in the "Voice of the Southside" Sunday, July 23, concerning Jackson park golf course, I take exception to the whole article. Golf has become so popular that many more people are flocking to the park courses, due to the fact that other courses are too far from the city and too much time is lost in travel, especially where a car is lacking. The Chicago park officials have gone to a great deal of expense and trouble to make the Jackson park golf course one of the finest in or around Chicago and this is one of the reasons why people from all parts of the city are coming out to Jackson park, thereby causing an overcrowded condition.

Due to a great number of firms closing down Saturdays, many who cannot take advantage of a weekday to play, sign up earlier in the week for Saturday and Sunday, as I have done, always signing the sheet myself and paying my 50 cents, not one dollar, as stated. We all like to be on time and for that reason I have always made an effort to reach the park ten or fifteen minutes before the time set for teeing off and perhaps I have been taken for one of the many sitting around.

In fairness to the park officials and the employés on the course, may I, and I am sure there are many others, compliment them for their courtesy and splendid manner in which they conduct the course under such trying conditions. HARRY J. MCCANN.

SCAVENGERS AND HUCKSTERS.

I have noted with interest controversial views regarding peddlers, who have been classified in letters sent you between [a] hucksters and [b] unlicensed scavengers.

In Oakland-Kenwood hucksters shout their wares to the annoyance of residents. Too, they take from shopkeepers paying rent and taxes which provide the city with more revenue than peddlers' licenses, the patronage required to meet those costs. Ironically, to meet requests for merchandise not "in stock," hucksters purchase in local stores articles costing a few pennies. By this procedure the storekeeper loses the principal sale for the dubious opportunity to sell through an interloper an article representing a fraction of the consumer's purchases. And peddling occurs in violation of no-peddling ordinances and signs.

Junk dealers with pushcarts overturn débris containers in search of salvage, thus littering alleys and handicapping the bureau of streets and alleys in its job of keeping the community clean. In their defense it is said they are so engaged to keep off relief rolls, and perhaps some are. But the combination of overturned garbage cans and the loss of articles of value from porches and yards following the visit of others make them unwelcome in Oakland-Kenwood.

And with the aid of the police department we are correcting both nuisances. J. V. O'NEIL.

1,000 BARN DANCE FANS TO SWING IN SOLDIERS' FIELD

Show Will Be Feature of Music Festival.

Barn dance experts from the country can soon look in on how the city folks do it. In eighty-nine neighborhood parks of the park district they are swinging their partners in rehersal for the biggest barn dance ever held. The jamboree is a special feature of the Chicagoland Music Festival to be presented in Soldier's field by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

On the evening of Aug. 19 a thousand city residents will do the do-si-do, the balance and the swing in an area equal to three football fields. The square dance caller will use a public address system and the old-time fiddler will be substituted by a festival concert orchestra.

Rehersal Every Night.

The dancers, groups of housewives, retired elderly men and those representing all kinds of businesses, professions, and jobs, are meeting for rehersals every evening in the parks. They are beginning now to concentrate on the two numbers selected for the festival night, "Ladies to center and back to the bar" and "duck and dive."

The tunes "Turkey in the Straw," "Arkansas Traveler," and other typical American folk music will be played by forty musicians selected from the festival orchestra and directed by Henry Weber, music director of W-G-N. R. U. Nelson, director of the Chicago parks square dance feature, says "A great majority of the participants have never done any dancing before. Square dancing is surprisingly easy to learn. In one evening you can master the fundamentals well enough to get along nicely and have a lot of fun."

The dancers will go down to Soldiers' field for one dress rehersal before the festival night. Members of the committee in charge are M. R. McLean, chairman of staging; D. K. Penny, chairman of the control book committee; John Shiff, publicity; Sid Novak, checking committee; Herman Roy, teaching committee.

Champions to Dance.

Among square dance groups taking part are the Gage Park Barn dancers, the champion square dance set of the park district. The Gage park group last spring won the system wide parks barn dance contest.

Other southwest side parks where square dance groups are being organized are Mark White square, 29th and Halsted street; McKinley, 39th street and Western avenue; Davis square, 45th street and Marshfield avenue; Fuller, 45th street and Princeton avenue; Cornell square, 51st and Wood streets; Sherman, 53d street and Racine avenue; Ogden, 65th street and Racine avenue; Marquette, 67th street and Kedzie avenue; Hamilton, 72d street and Normal boulevard; Ridge, 96th street and Longwood drive; Palmer, 111th street and Indiana avenue, and West Pullman, 123d street and Stewart avenue.

STEGER, FORMER PIANO CENTER, PLANS FESTIVAL

Homecoming to Be Held Aug. 12-13.

Aiming to have the name of Steger, once the piano center of the United States, resound again, a homecoming celebration will be staged Aug. 12 and 13 by business men, citizens, and officials of the village. The event was officially announced last week in a quaint proclamation by Eugene C. Smith, president, which was posted in the village hall.

Eugene C. Smith.

Throughout the two days the entire town will turn out and old residents will return for dancing, ball games, wrestling matches, a parade, band concerts, rides, airplane races and stunts, parachute jumps, and stage entertainment.

Situated in Cook and Will counties, the village is thirty-two miles south of Chicago on the Dixie highway. It was laid out and originally plotted by James Keeney in 1891. He named it Columbia Heights. The town retained that name until its incorporation on Feb. 23, 1897, when it was christened in honor of the first president, John V. Steger, later the owner of one of the largest piano manufacturing companies in the nation.

Piano Plants Closed.

Several piano plants opened up in Steger during its formative years and attracted hundreds of residents. These factories sold out or closed later but left in their wake a furniture factory, makers of radio cabinets, a dress factory, and a macaroni company which provide employment for hundreds.

The first two room public school in the village opened in 1892 and was replaced by the Steger school building in 1911-'12 and the Central, which provided additional classrooms and a gymnasium, in 1933.

Religion was established early in Steger, with the Congregational church prior to 1897, the Emmanuel Evangelical Lutheran church and school in 1896, and the St. Laborius Roman Catholic church during the winter of 1901-'02. A Catholic parochial school was erected in 1912.

Eager to protect their property, those pioneers of Steger hastened to organize a volunteer fire department in 1894 with seven members and in 1897 it boasted thirty-two members. There are still thirty-two members in the department. The firehouse was built in 1894 and the department was affiliated with the Illinois State Firemen's association eight years later.

Buy New Pumper.

It was one of the first village departments to use a motor truck. Last year a new pumper was purchased to complete the equipment. Two police squad cars now patrol the village, replacing a one officer system.

Before its incorporation Steger's village affairs were handled by a citizens' council of seven members. The council was dissolved in favor of a board of trustees in 1897.

Officers of the present village board are Mr. Smith, president; Waldermar J. Koch, clerk and collector; Joseph Lamham, treasurer; H. Marvin Craig, Dominic J. Onofrio, Donald O. West, Stanley S. Ratkowski, Carl O. Anderson, and Alva Hickman.

Official Hostess

Miss Rosemary Montbriand, 1525 Ridge road, Homewood, will be the official hostess during the Homewood homecoming celebration, which will be held during August. She will act also as hostess at the opening event of the celebration at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Washington Park race track in Homewood.

YOUTHS TAUGHT TO SWIM IN POOL AT GAGE PARK

City swimming pools offer more advantages for youngsters than the famous "ole swimming holes" lauded in books and recollections. At the city pools the timid beginner is taught to make a skill of swimming. At Gage park, 55th street and Western avenue, boys and girls are instructed in the art by a public address system which enables the coach to teach the group as a unit.

Boys are given instructions from 4 to 5 o'clock on Tuesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays, and the girls' group meets on Monday and Thursdays at the some hour. As the youngsters become more proficient in swimming they are promoted and awarded classification ribbons.

Any boy or girl who has accomplished the feat of swimming 10 yards is rated as a jellyfish and as the length of their swim increases they graduate to sword fish, flying fish, and star fish divisions.

Buses will leave at 9:30 o'clock in the morning from 63d street and Ashland avenue.

The village of Homewood, which is entering on its last decade of a century, is a pleasant residential town of 4,000 people. Within the last year much progress has been made in Homewood with the erection of new homes, and the building of the new village hall which will serve as a community center. Archer Heights Church Conducts Bible School

Proving that Bible school can be fun, the Archer Heights Presbyterian church, 5000 Kedvale avenue, is conducting a daily vacation Bible school every morning from 9 to 11 o'clock. Craftwork, songs and drama are intermingled with studies of the catechism and the Bible. Instructors are the Rev. Charles W. Shedd, pastor; June Kueviant, Shirley Elliott, and Florence Thompson.

Library in Brighton Park Makes Borrowing Easier

So that residents do not have to walk the red tape line, the Brighton Park branch of the Chicago public library, 4144 Archer avenue, has eliminated the required signature of a guarantor for library cards issued to adults. Only identification needed is a social security card, drivers' license, gas or electric bill. This does away with the necessity for days of waiting before approval is given an application.

Ready for Big Parade

A lady has to be fussy about her child. Little Cheryl Agnes May, 7228 Hermitage avenue, is certain that her china child will make a good impression Thursday in the annual baby buggy parade at Murray playground, 73d street and Hermitage avenue, for no other doll will be so surrounded with bows and ruffles. The parade is sponsored by the business men of the community for children under 12 years old. More than fifty prizes will be given away. Al Hartigan is director of the playground.

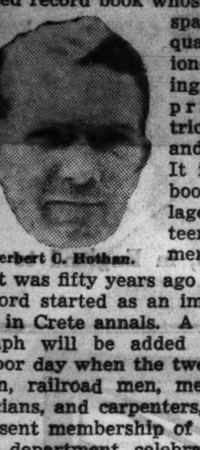
TATTERED BOOK TELLS STORY OF FIRE FIGHTERS

Crete Department Record Goes Back 50 Years.

Out in Crete there is a tiny, tattered record book whose yellow pages, spattered with quaint, old-fashioned handwriting, tell a tale of pride and patriotism, courage and camaraderie. It is the minute book of the village's first volunteer fire department.



Herbert C. Hothan.

It was fifty years ago that the little record started as an important chapter in Crete annals. A glowing paragraph will be added this year on Labor day when the twenty-five milkmen, railroad men, mechanics, electricians, and carpenters, who are the present membership of the volunteer fire department, celebrate their golden jubilee with a village parade, program, and picnic.

There will be only one man present, Fred Kelpien, now in his 80s, who will remember the first entry in that little record book, who will recall the droning voice of the charter secretary reading:

"Meeting of citizens of Crete, Jan. 24, 1889, for the purpose of organizing a fire company. The meeting was called to order by M. E. Quackenbush, who, on motion, was duly elected chairman. The committee on heating room reported and were instructed to rent store of J. W. Diersen and buy 500 pounds of hard coal."

Each Gave 20 Cents.

Perhaps there will pass in his memory that score of charter members, now dead, who each donated 20 cents to buy that coal.

That first bucket brigade were a proud and energetic lot, eager to prove both their good will and efficiency. The record boasts, on May 2, 1889:

"Three fires were reported in the village, two of which were in the rubbish piles built by the business men to test the efficiency of the fire department. At first the men were fresh and the fire was easily extinguished in short order. And the second, although a sharp run of forty rods was made, the boys turned to it with a will and done it up in thirty seconds." Two years later that fleetness served to save the village school. Gradually a hand pump was acquired by the department.

Pulled Pump to Fire.

"The men had to pull the hand pump to the fire and work so hard to bring up the water," says 28 year old Herbert C. Hothan, the present chief, "that they were all tired out before they really got to fighting the blaze. Some years later, however, they purchased a horse drawn cart to carry the hose. Then they only had to chase the cart. Those must have been the days of real sport."

Young Hothan is in his third term as head of a group of firemen who range from 22 to 65 years old, but he is one of the most experienced in the department. The old fire house, now a gray frame structure of one story, was his favorite playground as a boy. When he was old enough to tussle with a hose the men allowed him to join the force. He has been a member now for fourteen years.

It is something of a distinction to belong to the fire department in Crete, the men maintaining it as a rather exclusive club for willing workers and good companions.

Meet Once a Month.

Meetings are held once a month and drills are frequently called to preserve efficiency. Many a social gathering is enjoyed by the firemen and their women folk. When the work is slack the boys help to direct trafic at civic events and will go on parade at the drop of a hat.

The present equipment of the department is valued at $3,000, the boys affectionately referring to the pumper truck as "Old Betsy." There is also a utility truck equipped for prairie fires and an inhalator and resuscitator.

The equipment will go on parade for the second golden jubilee celebration on Labor day. [The first event was a dance held last January.] The school children of District 189, students of the Crete High school, the Parent-Teacher association, and business men will march with the fire department down the Dixie highway to the north end of town, where the parade will disband in the village park.

Throughout the day athletic events will be held and three or four local baseball teams will conduct a tourney. Social dancing will be held in the evening.

Guests Are Expected.

Officials of the Community Firemen's association, which takes in thirty-five surrounding towns, and of the Illinois Firemen's association, with both of which the Crete department is affiliated, will be guests at the Labor day jubilee. George W. Mussman, mayor of the town, will be honorary chairman of the celebration.

Members of the department will make up the general committee. They are Chief Hothan, chairman; Adolph Rinne, first assistant chief; Kenneth Weeks, secretary; Frank Devert, treasurer; Wilbert Paul, Ray Bennett, Henry Boehner, Ronald Buchanan, Roy Blanton, Orlin and William Buchholz, Bernard Christopher, Roy Devert, Henry and John Dohmeier, Charles Gaines, Theodore and Elmer Hothan, Walter and Wilmer Matthias, Earl Ruckman, August Weber, Albert Wilkening, and Henry Schweer.

Blue Island Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey O. Antilla, 12434 Maple avenue, Blue Island, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Phyllis, to Dr. O. A. Taylor Bell, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Aylesworth B. Bell of the First Congregational church in Blue Island. Miss Antilla is a graduate of the University of Illinois and her fiance is an alumnus of the college of dentistry of Northwestern university.

CHILDREN TAKE ROLES IN DRAMA SERIES AT PIER

26 from South Sector to Play in Shows.

"A Trip to Europe" on a fanciful transport of music, dance, and drama is being rehearsed in operetta form by 300 boys and girls currently taking advantage of the free summer cultural classes jointly sponsored by the Chicago Drama league, the Mothers' Drama club, and the city on Navy pier. Twenty-six of the children and youths, all of whom are between the ages of 8 and 18, are from the south and southeast sides. This is the 23d season the classes have been held.

The children rehearse on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays for the show, which will begin the series of weekly Monday evening performances on Aug. 7.

To Depict Foreign Customs.

The operetta has been written for the Children's Civic theater production, and relates scenes and adventures of a trans-Atlantic voyage and, in later weekly sequences, the folk customs of foreign countries.

BEVERLY HILLS WOMEN KEEP UP CLUB ACTIVITIES

Sponsor Bridge Luncheon for Aug. 9.

The purpose of a vacation is to have time for enjoyable pursuits. Members of the Beverly Hills Woman's club in the 3d district of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs do not really need a vacation. They heartily enjoy their club activities. Even though August is one of the hottest months of the year and most women are content to sit on the front porch with an electric fan and a glass of lemonade at their side, the Beverly Hills women are still bustling with club energy.

The club will sponsor a bridge-luncheon Wednesday, Aug. 9, in the Beverly Country club for the benefit of club philanthropies. Mrs. Harry W. Bohnet, chairman of the ways and means committee, and her assistants are in charge of the arrangements. Reservations may be made through Mrs. J. A. M. Robinson, 9955 Seeley avenue, president, or Mrs. Charles Stolp, 2050 West 103d street, chairman of hospitality.

Plan for Season.

In addition, plans have been completed for a bigger and better club season by Mrs. H. C. Wright, program chairman, and her committee. Mrs. Ada Adams, 8852 Bishop street, will be the new sponsor of the club for its eleventh year. The position was previously held by Mrs. Marge Howieson, who was with the juniors for ten years, but is unable to continue her sponsorship due to many obligations with the senior group, of which she is vice president. Mrs. Adams is an active member of the senior group also and is known for her philanthropic work in the federation.

Chicago Lawn Woman's Club.

The club will participate next year in national, state, district, and county federations of women's clubs, as well as public welfare agencies through eighteen delegates recently named by Mrs. Sidney Hand, president. They are, Mrs. Albert Klatt and Mrs. I. S. Pomerance, delegates to the district; Mrs. Bert Davies and Mrs. H. H. Pelley, alternates; Mrs. G. A. Mitchell and Mrs. Thomas A. Kaufman, delegates to the Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. H. E. Reinsch and Mrs. C. M. S. Seybold, United Charities; Mrs. W. A. Hanson, Travelers' Aid society; Mrs. Hand and Mrs. J. H. Activities in the department will center around personal and practical work on behalf of the children of the Juvenile court, inmates of the occupational therapy shop at Oak Forest infirmary, students of the Park Ridge School for Girls, the Ogen Park Infant Welfare station, Sarah Hackett Stevenson Memorial home, students' aid, the Child Haven home, and the New Mothers' aid. Last year $1,000 was spent by the club for welfare work.

In October she will present a reading of a current play and in December, in conjunction with Mrs. J. J. Bickel Jr., literature chairman, she will introduce Mrs. Annie Locke MacKinnon, story teller.

THREE FORMER NEWSBOYS CRASH A MUSICAL GATE

Trafic Bump Opens Way to Song Success.

Behind the plaint of "Get yurr morning papurr" one never knows what songs are sung. Last week three ex-newsboys, who as youngsters had hawked their papers together and traded shy ambitions among themselves, broke into the big time with a song of their own composition and publishing. Their piece, which bears the brusque title "You Know Just as Well as I Know," is now being played at the Aragon ballroom by Dick Jurgens' orchestra and over national networks by Jack Teagarden, Jimmy Dorsey, and Griff Williams. It is also in the music stores on sheets and on records made by Teagarden. Music leaders give it seven weeks to be a national hit.

Edward E. Shields.

The boys, who believe they "have brought Tin Pan Alley back to Chicago" and who have seventy-six pieces ready for the public ear, are Edward E. Shields, 1743 West 47th street, organizer of the Southwest Newsboys' association and newspaper truck driver; Joe King, 4630 Paulina street, and Stuart Vavrin, 5008 Wolcott avenue, machinists.

Bumps Into Luck.

How the boys broke into big time is one of those accidents which sometimes happen on the road to fame. Shields, who is an ambitious young man and the newsboys' candidate at the last election for alderman in the 14th ward, was driving along Wabash avenue recently when his car hooked bumpers with a fine car at Madison street. Brooking no interference, stocky Shields immediately began to defend his rights against the owner of the other car. Suddenly the argument stopped when Shields realized he had collided with good fortune. The driver of the other car was Jack Teagarden and Shields had songs to sell.

Teagarden glanced over the music which Shields quickly brought from the car, scratched his head and then announced, "Come over to the Blackhawk Saturday morning and I'll see how it sounds in rehearsal." When Shields and his two astonished collaborators reached the night club the following Saturday morning, Teagarden surprised them with the news that "This is the first number I have ever picked up to be a hit."

Would Help Poor Boys.

King and Shields are the collaborators on the lyrics for the trio's songs and Vavrin, who was once an orchestra leader but gave up the profession for the machinist trade, writes the music.

Shields announces he will put the money from his songs into a club for underprivileged boys.

Imagine a cereal as crisp and tempting as your favorite National Biscuit Company cracker! Or instead of imagining it . . . just taste it . . . taste National Biscuit Company's CUBS. They're the delicious new form of shredded whole wheat—little spoon size snacks all ready to eat . . . fresh as a fresh roasted peanut, and as crunchy and good tasting too. But here's where the really good news comes in. CUBS are whole wheat . . . so prepared that the 7 vital food elements listed below are retained. And so, when eaten regularly, they help you in 7 ways . . . in 7 different ways. If you buy CUBS today, you'll be glad tomorrow!

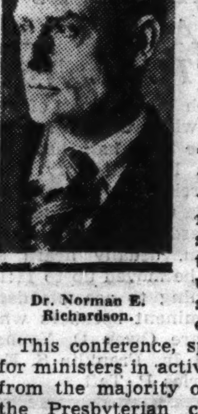
PRESBYTERIAN PASTORS TO HOLD ANNUAL PARLEY

Six Day Sessions Will Open Tomorrow.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

The tenth annual conference for ministers conducted by the Presbyterian Theological seminary, 2330 North Halsted street, will open tomorrow and continue through Saturday. The Rev. Dr. John Timothy Stone will preside and lecture on practical theology. The director of the conference will be Dr. Norman E. Richardson, a member of the seminary faculty and professor of religious education.



Dr. Norman E. Richardson.

This conference, specially intended for ministers in active service, differs from the majority of conferences in the Presbyterian church, most of which emphasize certain phases of endeavor. Nine years of experience have convinced the faculty that what the active minister needs most in a conference is fellowship, recreation and inspiration.

Plan Balanced Program.

"We do not seek simply to supply lectures and discussions of the forum type," said Dr. Stone in his personal message to the conference, "neither do we seek merely a spiritual retreat. But it means a great deal to get away from the fervor and fever of routine duties and 'come apart' for time, so our conference undertakes to balance the intellectual with devotional and ritual."

Dr. Merton S. Rice, minister of Metropolitan Methodist church, Detroit, Mich., will preach throughout the week at the daily evening chapel service, and Dr. Sam Higginbotham of Allahabad, India, moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church, U. S. A., will be guest speaker on Monday and Tuesday.

The lecture courses and seminars, conducted by notable conference leaders and members of the faculty, will be given in the four major divisions of theological education—the Bible church history, systematic theology and practical theology. Special consideration will be given to the needs and responsibilities of the chairmen of committees of presbyteries and synods. Seminars on foreign missions, national missions and Christian education will be held in the afternoons conducted by the Rev. Henry Little, the Rev. J. Leon Hooper, Dr. Merlyn A. Chappel, and the Rev. Ralph Cummins.

Course on Church Unity.

In view of the proposed concordat between the Presbyterian and Episcopal churches, an interesting course is offered by Dr. Louis M. Sweet—"Doctrinal Barriers to Church Unity"—covering the creeds, the church and its ministry, ritual and worship, organization and government and the World and the Kingdom of God.

"Ordinarily we deal with the unities and consider barriers incidentally," says Dr. Sweet. "In this study the order is to be reversed. We take the unities for granted and deal with the barriers."

Two other courses, not strictly theological, are "Psychology in the Service of the Pastor," by Dr. Karl Ruf Stolz, dean of Hartford school of religious education, dealing with the pastoral care of thwarted and depressed individuals, and "Problems in Psychiatry," by Dr. Sadler, counseling parents on the personality problems of children and adolescents."

As in previous years, the course on "Church Music and Hymnody" will be conducted by Harold B. Simonds, organist at St. Chrysostom's church, 1424 Dearborn parkway.

The recreational trip to the Field museum on Tuesday will be in the charge of Dr. Ernest G. Wright, instructor in Old Testament, and that to the Art institute under Prof Arthur A. Hays, a member of the institute's staff.

Bride-to-Be

[Mandel Brothers Studio.]

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Witt, 8442 May street, have announced the engagement of their eldest daughter, Marie Lucille, to John Joseph Nevell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Nevell, 7831 Hermitage avenue. Miss Witt is a graduate of the Academy of Our Lady and Mr. Nevell received his diploma from De La Salle institute.

SET NEW DATE FOR SOUTH SIDE MUSIC FESTIVAL

Program in Jackson Park on Aug. 12.

The Greater South Side Music festival will be held Saturday evening, Aug. 12, instead of Sunday afternoon, Aug. 13, according to the South Shore Community council, which is sponsoring the event in coöperation with the park district. The program will begin at 7:30 o'clock in the Jackson park band shell at 63d street.

Two contests have been tentatively scheduled for the festival, one for guitar or accordion ensembles and the other for the oldest and the youngest singers on the south side. St. John's church, the Viking, the Serbian, and the Englewood Opera company choruses have already indicated that they will participate.

Others Sign Up.

Other musical organizations signed up for the occasion are the drum and bugle corps of Englewood post of the American Legion and Woodlawn post of the Sons of the American Legion.

Aiding in the program on arrangements are John Bathum, supervisor, and Miss Erna C. Claas, director of activities at Jackson park. Others are Mrs. Lewis Kahn, recreation chairman of the Southeast council P.-T. A. and Byron T. Wherry, past president of the O'Keefe P.-T. A.

Miss Emma Rund, 2200 East 71st street, originator and chairman of the festival, has obtained the backing of the South Side Chamber of Commerce, Miss Helen Howe, director of music for the board of education, and others.

Purpose of Group.

The purpose of the newly organized South Shore Community council is to coördinate the various activities of civic and improvement clubs in the district. It will present resolutions to Mayor Kelly and President James B. McCahey of the school board, asking that school gymnasiums and auditoriums be made available for community events.

RED CROSS PAYS TRIBUTE TO 3 SO. WEST SIDERS

In recognition of long service, three southwest side women recently were paid tribute by the American Red Cross, according to announcement made last week by James B. Forgan, chairman of the Chicago chapter. Mrs. Julia Stevens, 6138 Winchester avenue, was appointed general chairman of the Englewood Red Cross unit to succeed Judson L. Parker, with whom she has served as assistant general chairman for the last two years.

In addition to her new office, Mrs. Stevens will be chairman of the Englewood roll call committee which she has headed for many years. Under her direction the Englewood unit has attained a greater Red Cross membership than that of any other Chicago neighborhood. Mrs. Leonora Washburn, 11047 Hale avenue, will be roll call chairman for Morgan Park. The Morgan Park unit is part of a division headed by Fred L. Johnson, 9750 Hoyne avenue, general chairman.

Red Cross service chevrons and bars in recognition of ten years of volunteer in the Braille department of the Chicago chapter were awarded to Mrs. Glenn S. Noble of Flossmoor. During her years of service Mrs. Noble has transcribed 15,178 pages of Braille.

Drexel Park Services.

"The 'By Chance' Ministries of Jesus" will be the topic of the 11 o'clock morning sermon today by the Rev. Clinton C. Cox, pastor of the Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 64th street and Marshfield avenue.

THERE'S NO LACK OF COVERING FOR BATHROOM WALL

Washable Type Available for Any Pocketbook.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Bathrooms for some time now have been approached from the viewpoint of making extraordinarily attractive interiors out of them. But wherever you go you find that beauty and utility are hand in glove in these rooms, and while their walls and floors and fixtures and accessories are highly decorative they are efficient and easy to clean.

This year has seen a wider choice available in materials for walls and floors than ever before. There are materials priced for every pocketbook.

In the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Schmitz, 8357 South Ada street, black ceramic tile was used for the walls and a lovely shade of medium blue was chosen for the fixtures. For contrast and harmony the black tile of the walls is striped with blue, while the shower stall is of blue tile, with black stripes.

Cream and Yellow Floor.

It is a stunning room, designed and planned by Elmer C. Carlson, 7936 Cottage Grove avenue, the architect. The floor is also of tile in cream and yellow, with black and pearly gray touches. At the window there are oyster white Venetian blinds with blue tape, and the lavatory has a semi-oval basin to reduce danger of splashing and for added convenience in washing.

In the powder room the walls are of an opaque glass, the fixtures of a pastel shade of pink. In the kitchen marble, one of our most aristocratic of materials, has been used for the window sills, while linoleum appears on the walls and floors.

The home is finely modern, with light colored brick exterior walls and airy sun deck. But whatever type a home may be, traditional, conservative, or modern, the surfacings for bathroom and kitchens and lavatories have one point in common: They must be washable. In brief, they must be soap and water walls.

Rubber or Composition.

Painted plaster walls are probably the least expensive, and we see a great many nicely designed bathrooms with walls of painted plaster.

Some of the new materials for walls and floors for bathrooms and kitchens include rubber tiles or sheets, which come in marbleized or flat colors and are waterproof and resilient. Then there are the composition tiles of magnesite, asphalt, or asbestos. The magnesite tile are lighter in weight than the asphalt. The asphalt tiles come colored or marbleized and have very durable, heavy duty surfacings. They also come prewaxed, which make them resistant to greases. Then there are the linoleums, tiled, colored, or marbleized: The marbles, in natural stones and slates, the ceramic tiles, and wall surfacings of glass, in brick, block, mirror, or sheet, opaque or tile.

A wide variety of these glass surfacings is available, from mirror glass, which comes in different shades and color tones, to the opaque glass and the glass tile.

Metal or Wood Veneer.

There is a wide variety also of composition boards and wall boards, which are available in many beautiful colors, with lustrous finish; the enameled metal tiles; the synthetic resin materials in lovely soft, dull finishes, and colored, textured, or patterned; wood veneers mounted on cloth in many fine wood patterns and treated for moisture resistance; washable wall papers of many designs and colors; metal surfaced wall papers [which have a charming finish at once soft and lustrous], and wall cloths [a cloth material with a paint finish not unlike oil cloth].

Four Officers End Period at Camp McCoy, Sparta, Wis.

Four southwest side officers of the 497th field artillery regiment, citizens' military training corps, will resume civilian duties tomorrow after a ten day period of soldier life at Camp McCoy, Sparta, Wis. They are Capt. Theodore L. Schlueter, 956 West 57th street; First Lieutenant Alex H. Grabski, 708 West 118th street; First Lieutenant Ned Preston Veach, 617 East 103d place, and Second Lieutenant Barton O. Baker, 1435 East 90th street.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, July 31.

As the season advances the same general care of plants is continued. Cultivation should be given to keep down weeds and conserve moisture. Even a slight stirring of the soil is highly beneficial, especially where the soil becomes hard and packs. Soils of this kind lack humus, such as decayed organic manures or other vegetation.

Tuesday, Aug. 1.

Order madonna lilies for they will be available soon. They will stand a bit of sun a part of the day. So will regal and tiger lilies and some others. Most of them like plenty of leafmold in the soil. It is often advisable to dig out the old soil and replace it with a good mixture of loam, sand, and leafmold. Mulching with leafmold is excellent practice. Avoid placing manure in direct contact with the bulbs. Do not allow lily bulbs to lie around exposed to the air any longer than is necessary.

Wednesday, Aug. 2.

Plants that are intended for next winter's use should receive attention now. New plants can now be propagated from cuttings or seeds. Small plants can be bought at the florists and the cost is small as compared to finished stock. If plants are growing in the garden prepare them for potting by taking a long bladed knife and cutting a third way around the plant, slanting the blade toward the root. Cut so that the ball will be smaller than the pot in which it is to go. Water around the plant well before digging, cut back some, and pot in good soil.

Thursday, Aug. 3.

You can make new rubber plants at this time by air layering, or rooting in a handful of sphagnum moss in the air. Make a diagonal cut several inches below the lowest leaf about two-thirds through the stem; hold the two sides of the cut apart by inserting a bit of moss between them; tie a small handful of moss around the cut, and keep well watered. In a few weeks the rooted section can be removed and potted. This is an interesting method of propagation. You can give house plants a new start by removing them from their pots, washing out the soil from the roots, and repotting in good soil.

Friday, Aug. 4.

Prepare to make the lawn this month or early in September. Sow froget-me-not seed now. This is a fine plant for carpeting bulb beds, such as tulips. Keep the rock garden in the best condition and restrict the over crowding of weak plants by thinning out many plants. Creeping phlox, sedum, arenaria, and other plants are examples of the types that need attention. Sow pyrethrum seed now. It is best to buy seed from a specialist than to save seed from the garden for these plants seldom come true from seed. You can have delightful flower arrangements by cutting morning glories in the bud for opening. Cut at night, keep in a cool place, and they will open beautifully.

Saturday, Aug. 5.

Do not continue feeding roses much later than this for new growth will start which may not ripen thoroughly before frost. Iris still may be divided and planted. Narcissi for outdoor use should be ordered and planted as early as possible. They require earlier planting than other bulbs. Plant about 6 inches deep and do not disturb the bulbs unless absolutely necessary for they get better each year. Move oriental poppies while they are at rest. Doronicum should be transplanted now. Pot grown strawberries planted now and kept well watered will produce fine fruits next season.

TURNER REVEALS BRITISH RADIO'S WAR DEFENSES

W-G-N Pianist Describes Air Raid Precautions.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Harold Turner, W-G-N pianist, on a leave of absence of a year for study in England, in a letter has given his impression of British broadcasting and of Broadcasting House, origination point of the bulk of the Empire radio programs.

Mr. Turner is soon to leave London for a tour of other European countries in company with Jim Fleming, former W-G-N announcer. Both are then returning to the United States and Turner will be back at W-G-N early in September.

"A trip through Broadcasting House," Turner wrote, "is especially interesting just now because of all the ARP [Air Raid Precautions] measures which have been adopted. The master control room is now on the eighth [top] floor and naturally would be the first to be hit if a bomb should fall on Broadcasting House.

Emergency Control in Cellar.

"A supplementary control room has now been installed in the sub-basement. The touch of a switch would throw all of the emergency gear into action. The basement of the BBC isn't at all ordinary. It's several floors deep and will hold a thousand people. In the event of war it could function quite apart from the rest of the building.

"Down there they have a complete air conditioning plant, a standby electric supply, a deep artesian well and stores enough to keep this colony alive during a siege. Steel, rubber lined doors have been fitted to all exits, making them bomb and gas-proof.

The basement lies sixty feet below the street level and since Broadcasting House rises eight stories above the street level, a bomb would have to go through eight concrete floors; hundreds of concrete floors which have been on the roof since the crisis of last September, and the upper basement before disturbing the announcer who would be giving warning signals into a gas mask microphone.

Transmitter Defense Secret.

Details of the defense of the transmitters is a complete secret, Mr. Turner wrote. But it's common knowledge, he continued, that extra-deep auxiliary cables have been laid to them from the studios. If one were destroyed another could be put into immediate use.

The question of how effectively enemies could "jam" BBC broadcasts is still controversial, he wrote. "No one quite knows," he said, "whether such a device could be effective enough to interfere with broadcasting."

The post office department, which controls both wireless and telephones, he said, is working out a plan through which telephone subscribers would be able during peace time to receive [by wire] the radio programs of BBC—regional, national or empire. During war the BBC believes there could be no interference from exterior sources with such a service. It would form a valuable communication link between the government and millions of homes.

Technique Similar to Ours.

Through this service warnings and instructions for evacuations could be transmitted speedily and secretly, it is believed. This service is to be available within a year.

The technique of broadcasting Turner found very similar to that in America.

"The microphones look very similar," he wrote, "to the ones used at W-G-N. The studios are modern and well equipped. The music libraries are immense and the staff is not only large but well trained.

"Audience facilities are wanting. There are accommodations for small audiences in two or three studios. The concert hall seats approximately the same number [600] as W-G-N's studio 1 but it is used only on very special occasions. Tours of the building are not being encouraged and I am indebted to our Mutual representative John Steel for my entrée and hospitable treatment."

Handling the King's English.

Announcers are hand picked, Turner said, and are exponents of the king's English as the cultivated Londoner speaks it.

"Announcers I have met," said Turner, "are young men whose speech is unaffected and whose proximity to and experience with foreign languages has made the pronounciation of foreign titles and composers' names quite as natural as English."

Except in major programs, Turner said, "ad libbing" is regular procedure for announcers.

"Announcers give a minimum of editorial comment on the program material as a result," he continued. "This sometimes means a long pause on the air while the musicians turn their pages and prepare for the next number. But pauses are not important here. To an American trained broadcaster it's a serious offense. Naturally I have been conscious of it."

[In another article Turner's impressions about radio music, comedy, variety and the attitude of British listeners to their radio system will be set forth.]

The Friday Promenade, directed by Henry Weber, will offer a program of light melodies with the singing of Kathryn Witwer and Wesley Summerfield from 9:30 to 10 p. m. Friday on W-G-N and the Mutual network. The ever popular "Ciribiribin," by Pestalozza, will be Miss Witwer's solo number. Wesley Summerfield will do Openshaw's "Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses."

RADIO MUSIC IS A DISTILLATE OF LONG, HARD WORK

A Step by Step Story of W-G-N's Process.

The musical radio program, that modern commodity which is meted out on the air lanes in such exact quantities of minutes—and even seconds, is the distillate of complicated effort of days, weeks, perhaps months. Like mining for gold, mountains of obstacles are reduced before the nugget is produced.

It takes no longer than the smoking of a cigaret to listen to a single musical number. Yet that number may have required a whole week of preparation and rehearsal by a staff of musicians and technicians on a station like W-G-N.

When a listener tunes in Harold Stokes and the dance orchestra or Henry Weber and the concert orchestra he may be aware that there are careful rehearsals prior to the broadcast. What he may not realize is that rehearsals are only one phase of the work that precedes a broadcast.

How It Is Done.

Here is the story step by step. Suppose that Henry Weber wishes to include a special arrangement of "One Alone" from "The Desert Song" in his Thursday Concert Revue. This number [and others] is sent to the program department which must "clear," or obtain the right to give a performance of the numbers.

The copyright to all music from "The Desert Song" is controled by the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers [ASCAP] and guarded by national and international copyrights to protect the composers. Before this number may be broadcast, permission must be obtained from ASCAP by W-G-N, which obtains a "release" from ASCAP's office in New York. Some numbers controled by publishing societies may not be played under any circumstances; others are permitted on payment of a special fee. Still others are restricted for use on noncommercial programs only.

All this is the work of the musical division of the W-G-N program department. This department has in its files index cards of 85,000 musical numbers for reference to music composers, authors, publishers, and the date of copyright. Fortunately, most musical compositions are not restricted or the "clearing" of a program would be virtually impossible because of many red-tape barriers to overcome.

After the song, "One Alone" has been cleared Mr. Weber and his staff in the music library are ready to prepare the selection. Since a special arrangement is desired—and it is special arranging which makes one orchestra stand out from others—W-G-N's staff of arrangers, headed by Adolf G. Hoffman, goes to work. A special orchestration for solo, or octet vocal rôles which will be used with the orchestral accompaniment is written. The arranger also writes out music for the portions to be carried by each of the twenty-four instruments in the orchestra.

A carefully arranged score which requires four minutes playing time may ocupy an arranger for three or four full days. The copyist who "extracts" from the specially arranged score the parts to be carried by each of the twenty-four instruments may require a day or two for his share of the work.

The Vocalists Rehearse.

The music for a forty-five minute program then goes to the orchestra for at least three two-hour rehearsals. Participating vocalists are coached by Robert Trendler for their parts. They are first rehearsed separately from the orchestra and then join rehearsals with the orchestra. Thus, "One Alone," a small fraction of the 45 minute program, is made ready for broadcasting.

Other numbers in the program may go through this same process or may be taken from ready-made arrangements rented from musical houses in Chicago or New York. Special arrangements are preferred because they are better adapted to the type of orchestra playing the number.

Mr. Weber frequently selects a 20 minute medley of operetta numbers for special arranging. This is a task which may occupy Hoffman seven or eight weeks before it is ready for the microphone.

6,000 Selections Available.

After the song, "One Alone," has been played, it is filed away in the spacious library of W-G-N for at least six months before it is used again. In file are approximately 6,000 musical selections, including popular tunes, operas, operettas, symphonies, and other forms.

Included in the library are the eight "streamlined" operas which have been broadcast under Mr. Weber's direction. Such operas, which present what on the stage is usually a three hour show in an hour's span, undergo additional attention from the conductor who cuts those portions he considers dispensible.

Dance programs presented under the direction of Harold Stokes require a larger number of special arrangements per program than concert shows. Popular tunes are played more frequently, over a shorter period, and must have originality. Fortunately for the arranger in this case, popular tunes are more simply constructed and entail less work.

$75,000 Yearly in Fees.

All major composers are affiliated with some publishers' association or other which, under terms of agreement with the composers, acts as their legal representative in dealings with radio stations. W-G-N has contracts with four of the leading publishers' societies—ASCAP, the Association of Music Publishers, Inc., the Society of European Stage Authors and Composers, and G. Ricordi & Co. of Milan, Italy.

W-G-N pays these groups a yearly fee for the privilege of broadcasting music controled by them. Special fees also are exacted for music not cataloged as covered by the yearly payments. W-G-N's payments to publishers' associations and copyright owners total more than $75,000 per year.

While only 14 years old, Betty Barrett, young NBC contralto, has been singing on the air for six years. She is heard on the Sunday Dinner at Aunt Fanny's, Ransom Sherman Presents, and Jamboree shows.

TWO CONCERTS FROM GRANT PK. ON W-G-N-MBS

Two more concerts of the Grant park series will be heard over W-G-N this week. W-G-N and the coast to coast Mutual network will present a half hour of the music of the Chicago Symphony orchestra from 9 to 9:30 p. m. Tuesday. This broadcast will be directed by Hans Lange, associate conductor of the Chicago Symphony. Brahms' Symphony No. 2 will be played in its entirety. Saturday evening at 8 p. m. the Chicago Opera company orchestra, under the baton of Joseph Raffaelli, will be heard in "Marche Heroique," by Saint-Saens, and Annunziata's "Symphony in G Minor."

WILL, U. of I. Station, Airs 19 Courses from Classroom

Champaign, Ill.—Ninteen courses were broadcast directly from classrooms of the University of Illinois through its radio station, WILL, into listeners' homes last season, Josef F. Wright, director of the station, announced in his annual report. Last year WILL made the greatest progress in its history, the report noted. In the year, WILL operated 2,904 hours. Classroom broadcasts were only a part of the service offered. Thirteen series of special educational talks, and a large number of talks not a part of such series brought 536 persons before the microphones for a total of 6,635 appearances.

Thorgersen's Sports Resume to Be Heard on WGN-Mutual

The familiar voice of Ed Thorgersen, sports commentator of the kilocycles and Fox Movietone, will be heard over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting System in a series of weekly broadcasts, to be heard on Saturday from 5:45 to 6:00 p. m., effective September 30. The Thorgersen sportlight will be focused on the day's football scores and highlights.

MARION MANN GUEST SINGER ON SUNDAY DATE

Debussy Themes Slated on Concert Revue.

The smooth voice of Marion Mann will be heard on "Your Sunday Date," directed by Harold Stokes, from 8 to 8:30 tonight on W-G-N.

Miss Mann, a veteran of the airlanes, movies, and night clubs, has been featured singer with Bob Crosby's orchestra and has been heard in many shows on W-G-N from the Blackhawk restaurant. She made her debut six years ago, singing with such orchestras as Emerson Gill and Richard Himber. She has chosen as her solo number, the new hit tune, "Wishing." With the chorus, Miss Mann will sing, "This Is No Dream."

Lawrence Salerno will with Miss Mann do "Love's Serenade," and will join the chorus in "I've Got Plenty o' Nuthin'."

The Pageant of Melody, under the direction of Henry Weber, will, present the singing of Mark Love, basso, Attilio Baggiore, tenor, and Harriet Brewer, soprano, in a concert of semi-classical music from 9:30 to 10:15 p. m. tomorrow on W-G-N and Mutual.

Baggiore's solo will be "O Paradiso," from "L'Africaine." With the octet he will sing "I Hear a Thrush at Eve," by Charles Wakefield Cadman. Love will sing the Aria from Verdi's "Masked Ball."

Songs concerning the American Indian will be presented in a medley, including "Zuni Indian Call," "Waters of Minnetonka," and "Pale Moon," all to be sung by Attilio Baggiore, Love, and Miss Brewer.

Kathryn Witwer and William Miller will be featured vocalists on the Concert Revue, to be conducted by Mr. Weber, from 9:30 to 10:15 p. m., Thursday, on W-G-N and Mutual. Themes from Debussy will occupy the major portion of the program.

Miss Witwer will sing "Midnight Bells," by Fritz Kreisler. Miller will sing Edwards' "By the Bend of the River." Miller and Miss Witwer will join with the orchestra in presenting the Debussy themes.

MUSIC PARADE WILL FEATURE POPULAR BANDS

Music by topnotch dance bands will greet morning listeners in the recorded program, "The Music Parade," to be heard from 7:45 to 8:00 a. m. Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, beginning Aug. 1st, on W-G-N.

In response to public requests each day's program will present the music of one well known orchestra, including the theme song of that band and specially arranged numbers which have made it popular. Lewis La Marr will announce the programs.

Col. Stoopnagle to Toss Quixie Doodles on Mutual

Col. Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle will be the master of ceremonies of a new weekly series of programs known as Col. Stoopnagle's "Quixie Doodle Contest," to be heard on Fridays from 7:00 to 7:30 p. m., effective October 20, over W-G-N and Mutual. Participating in the "Quixie Doodle Contest" will be five contestants, chosen from the studio audience, called "batters," who will work as a team trying to hit out the correct answers to the Quixie Doodles pitched to them by the listeners—the "pitchers"—who send in the questions.

George Barrere Will Be Chautauqua Hour Soloist

George Barrere, noted flutist, will be soloist with the Chautauqua Symphony orchestra, Albert Stoessel conducting, during the concert broadcast from the Amphitheater at Lake Chautauqua, N. Y., at 2:00 p. m. today over WMAQ. Barrere will be heard in Mozart's Concerto for flute and orchestra in D minor. Stoessel has programed the Suite from Gretry's ballet, "Cephale and Procris," to open the program.

W-G-N Guest

Marion Mann, ballad singer featured with Bob Crosby's orchestra, who will be heard as guest star on "Your Sunday Date," directed by Harold Stokes, at 8 p. m. today on W-G-N.

W-G-N FEATURE INSPIRES SERIES BY A PUBLISHER

"Memory Lane," the popular musical feature which presents old time favorites on the "Music Counter," on W-G-N and the Mutual network, has inspired a prominent music publisher to print a group of familiar melodies under the title, "Memory Lane Series."

Two years ago, Harold Stokes, director of the W-G-N dance orchestra, conceived of the idea of presenting three old timers each Wednesday night on his Music Counter program. With tunes that harked back to the civil war, the Spanish-American war and early twentieth century times, evoking memories of the tandem bicycle, the early "horseless carriage," the bustle, and Sunday afternoon ice cream socials, the feature was an immediate hit.

Popular demands exceeded the supply and word of the feature reached New York where the music publisher heard it and decided to revive the favorites of yesteryear. Numbers used in the series will be rearranged for piano—not in swing style—and sold separately in sheet form.

BETA THETA PI CENTENARY DAY ON MUTUAL NET

W-G-N, through the facilities of the Mutual System, will present a special broadcast of the last half hour of the Beta Theta Pi Fraternity Centenary day exercises at Miami university, Oxford, O., from 11:45 to 12:15 p. m. Tuesday, Aug. 8. June Baker's program, usually heard at 11:45 a. m., will be moved up to 11:15 a. m. that morning to accommodate the show. Prominent speakers who will be heard are Owen D. Young, Walter Hubbard Jr., Franklin S. Edwards, and Charles P. Taft.

SAYS AMATEURS BEAT PROS IN AS RADIO SLEUTHS

Professionals are not as good as amateurs in solving radio mystery dramas, according to George Zachary who produces the Adventures of Ellery Queen on WBBM-CBS.

"This is no reflection on their intelligence," he explained, "but rather on their unwillingness to rely upon deductive reasoning alone. In other words, they are not content to put two and two together to arrive at—six.

"The trained observer is too literal in his scrutiny of case facts," Zachary believes. He cites as an example a professional detective who sat in on an audition of the first adventure, that of the Gum-Chewing Millionaire.

"He would have had a specialist examine the suspect's teeth for identification. He would have checked the railroads to determine whether the suspect had arrived in town at the time he stated," Zachary said.

Actual crimes are comparatively simple to solve by such examination of physical evidence, according to the director-producer. These "nondeductive" methods always employed by police in crime analysis—unless the case is a rare baffler, bereft of clews—Zachary describes as dull dramatic material.

Northerners to Present Romberg and Porter Music

The Northerners will feature music from the pen of Sigmund Romberg and Cole Porter in their program of popular melodies from 9:30 to 10 p. m. Tuesday on W-G-N. This will be the final audience broadcast for the Northerners for a few weeks. The Romberg-Porter tunes will be presented by the entire singing cast of the Northerners. Miss Bernice Rickman will sing for her solo Carl Bohm's "Still as the Night."

Errol Flynn to Make Radio Appearance Here

Errol Flynn, swashbuckling player of the movies, will come to Chicago to make a guest appearance on the Knickerbocker Theater program at 8 p. m. Wednesday on WBBM. Flynn will play the lead in "Holiday." He will be supported by Betty Winkler and Elliott Lewis.

The House of TOMORROW

can be seen again TODAY

The hundreds of people who visited this house last Sunday proclaimed it to be one of the most attractive and beautiful houses they had ever seen.

In addition to this house we will have eight other 6, 7, and 8 room, 1½, 2½, and 3 bath houses open for your inspection. They are the finest group of houses to be found anywhere. All of the refinements found in much higher priced houses are included, even to the Magic Chef Stove and Frigidaire or Servel-Electrolux Refrigerator.

DON'T SIGN THAT LEASE

until you see what you can get for your rent money. This is your last chance because you are going to have to give your landlord an answer next week.

WE WILL ASSUME YOUR MAY LEASE

WE ARE ALL INTERESTED

In RAISING our living standards and LOWERING our living costs.

These things may be accomplished, easily at BARRINGTON-BILTMORE ESTATES. Here you may live in the privacy of 800 acres of beautifully rolling land, restricted to residential use, protecting you against any and all business or other undesirable encroachment, and yet you will be only 39 minutes from the Loop.

All homesites are exceptionally large and for those requiring more space, acreage tracts are available. All prices are exceptionally reasonable, and attractive terms are available. The property is situated in Lake County, where taxes are low.

Homes are under construction for those who need early occupancy, and other designs are available or will be built to meet your particular needs and to take full advantage of the natural beauty of the country.

Locations are outstanding—overlooking private lakes and private golf course and giving unrivaled wooded, ravine, hillside, or hilltop sites.

Rigid racial, minimum building cost, and architectural design restrictions are enforced.

Accepted buyers receive life membership in the Biltmore Country Club, which is strictly private and owns its 18 hole golf course, clubhouse, tennis courts and 2 natural lakes—FREE OF ALL ENCUMBRANCE. This makes possible exceptionally low dues, and gives you swimming, tennis, golf and fishing at your door.

This is a community of year around homes, the owners of which commute to Chicago daily at a low monthly fare.

Buy your homesite now and build while low cost financing is available and your monthly payments are less than rent.

There is only one way the many attractive and unusual features of this property can be appreciated—namely, by seeing for yourself. We therefore urge that you drive out promptly—Saturday, Sunday, or any weekday—to see these beautiful estates. Do not delay.

Take Route No. 14 to Barrington, turn right on Route No. 59, 2¼ miles north to the property. Call at our office near the Clubhouse.

Day by Day on the Farm

By BOB BECKER

Jealousy in Birdyard.

July 29, 1939.

A CASE of professional jealousy upset the peace and quiet of the DuPage county farm this week. While the men were quietly doing their work in the fields, and the farm women were canning fruits and vegetables in their kitchens, a fussy hen was causing trouble in the game bird yard. This hen raised a family of ringneck pheasant chicks, but her youngsters have deserted her, being old enough to take care of themselves.

Bantam hens in the same yard are mothering quail and partridge chicks which follow them around the yard. The hen whose chicks have deserted her evidently is jealous of the bantams that still have their youngsters, so she has tried to make life miserable for them. None of the bantams could eat in peace as long as the jealous hen was around—she would chase them from the feed pans.

Deported to Barnyard.

The men tried to solve the problem by giving her a feeding place of her own, but then she ran back and forth between her own pan and the feeding place of the bantams, chasing them away from the grain at both places. To keep peace and order in the game bird yard the men had to issue deportation orders for the troublesome hen, ordering her back to the barnyard away from the bantams and the game bird chicks.

A pair of Bob White quail gave us a surprise one evening this week. While making the rounds of our bird banding traps we examined one cage at the edge of a cornfield and found two of these beneficial birds trying to find a way out. Bob Whites, which are protected on the farm like all the other game birds, seem to be plentiful this season. These two evidently were traveling along the hedgerow which borders the cornfield, found the liberal supply of seeds in the bird trap, and went in for a free meal. When released they headed for the middle woods to resume their feeding schedule of weed seeds and insects.

The men who work in the sample garden at the DuPage county farm have had more than their share of trouble from predatory animals this season. Several weeks ago raccoons invaded the garden and ruined almost a whole row of peas which were ready to be picked.

Woodchucks Raid Flowers.

Now the gardener reports that woodchucks have taken over the job of acting as official troublemakers, destroying more than thirty sunflower plants. Sunflowers are planted in the garden each spring, and in the fall the seeds are threshed for feeding pheasants and other game birds which live in the farmwoods. But the woodchucks have been visiting the garden at night and eating the tender green leaves of the young sunflower plants. The pests didn't ruin all the stalks, however, so there will be plenty of seeds for the game bird feeding shelters this winter.

The Canada geese which live on the farm have had a change of appetite. All spring they ate the tender tips of corn leaves, but now their tastes seem to be running to fresh oats. The flockmaster was telling us the other day that the geese have been raiding the oat field near the pond. They use their bills to strip the grain from the stalks.

REAL ESTATE LOANS, MORTGAGES.

WHAT THE LAWYERS SAY ABOUT US: Attorney R.: "My client went to your firm to see whether you REALLY help people in trouble, as you advertise. I am glad to say that your work saved their home."

The facts: We not only got them a loan—much more than others would O. K.—but since even that was not enough, we also got their mortgagee to accept $1,400 less than due, paid him off, thus preventing the foreclosure of our clients' home—their life's savings.

Why can we serve you better? Because of our first rate organization. Our officers are highly skilled and experienced in real estate and mortgage work able, willing, and ready to devote all the time and full personal attention needed to help you.

Without boasting, our records show that we prevented or settled quite a large number of foreclosures or lien suits, thus saving for our clients many, many thousands of dollars.

We lend up to 15 years on homes, 2 to 4 flats—frame, stucco, brick—up to 30 years old, on large apartment buildings, stores, factories, and garages. [2.] Place 20 to 25 year 80% to 90% FHA loans. [3.] We advance funds to settle estates, heirs' interests, taxes, liens; redeem property under foreclosure. [4.] If even our top loan won't do, we will negotiate with Trustees, Mortgagees, Bondholders' Committees, Banks, to cut down overly large debts to present day levels. We appraise property, advise and help to finance, purchase, build, and sell property.

See us! We will not fail you!

Save the Difference
Commonwealth's rate is substantially less on all loans than the maximum rate permitted by law. You do not have to be an executive or have a "special" credit standing to qualify for OUR reduced rate. Commonwealth's monthly rate of 2½% on loan balances of $150 or less and only 2% on loan balances above, applies to ALL TYPES AND CLASSES OF LOANS. Anyone who can make regular payments can qualify; there is no discrimination. EVERYBODY GETS THIS SAME RATE. Of course, persons whose incomes are above average can afford to make larger payments and thus make substantial reductions in their loan cost.
No credit inquiries of friends or relatives. Applications received by personal call, letter or telephone will receive immediate attention.

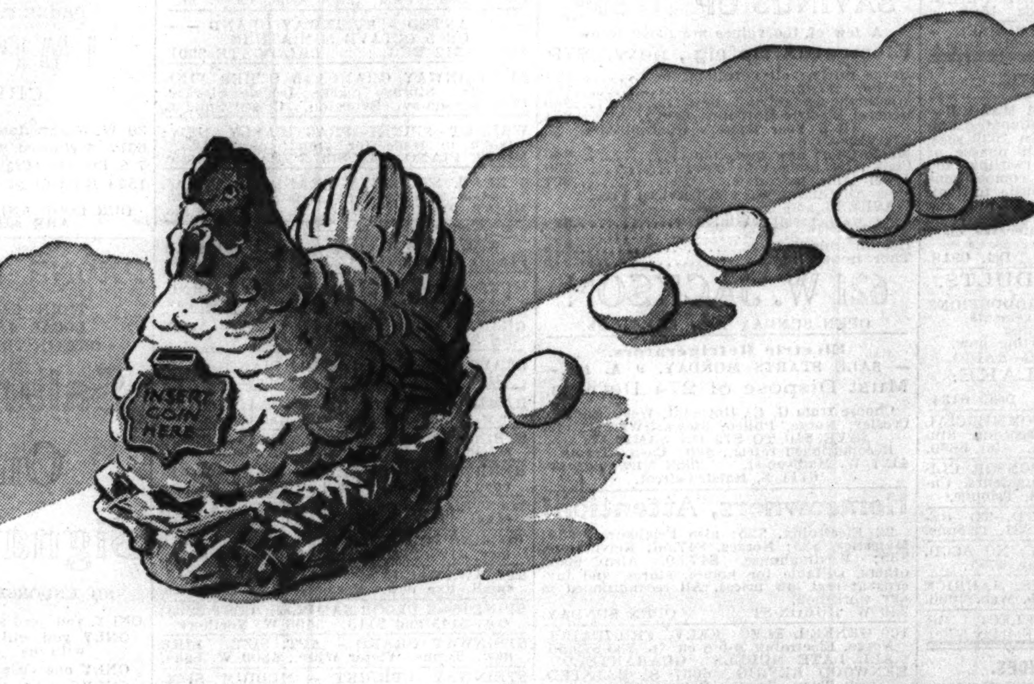
Chicken that lays a hard-boiled egg



WE never saw one, but we are told there was a time when saloon equipment in many parts of the country included a fantastic fixture which contributed no little to the gayety of the old-time bar.

Hard-boiled eggs being a popular barroom delicacy, some ingenious wag invented and found a ready market for a coin-operated device to dispense them. It was fashioned of castiron and realistically painted to resemble a lifesize hen sitting on a nest. When you put a nickel in the slot, the hen would let out a cackle and deliver a hard-boiled egg.

A Chicago business man we know makes a hobby of collecting such mechanical curiosa of bygone days. In his factory he has a museum in which quite a few such items are on display all in working order. He owns what is believed to be the first money-paying slot machine ever made. He has several of those mechanical violin and piano players once so popular in ice cream parlors throughout the land. He has a whole collection of music boxes which tinkle out forgotten tunes punched in metal disks.

There were a number of items, however, which his collection lacked and for some time he had been searching for them without success. The other day it occurred to him that maybe a Tribune want ad might aid the search. As a large employer, he has often used Tribune want ads to find help for his factory, but he never had had occasion to use them for any other purpose. So he decided to take what he considered to be a long chance and ran an ad offering to buy several items, including a chicken that lays a hard-boiled egg.

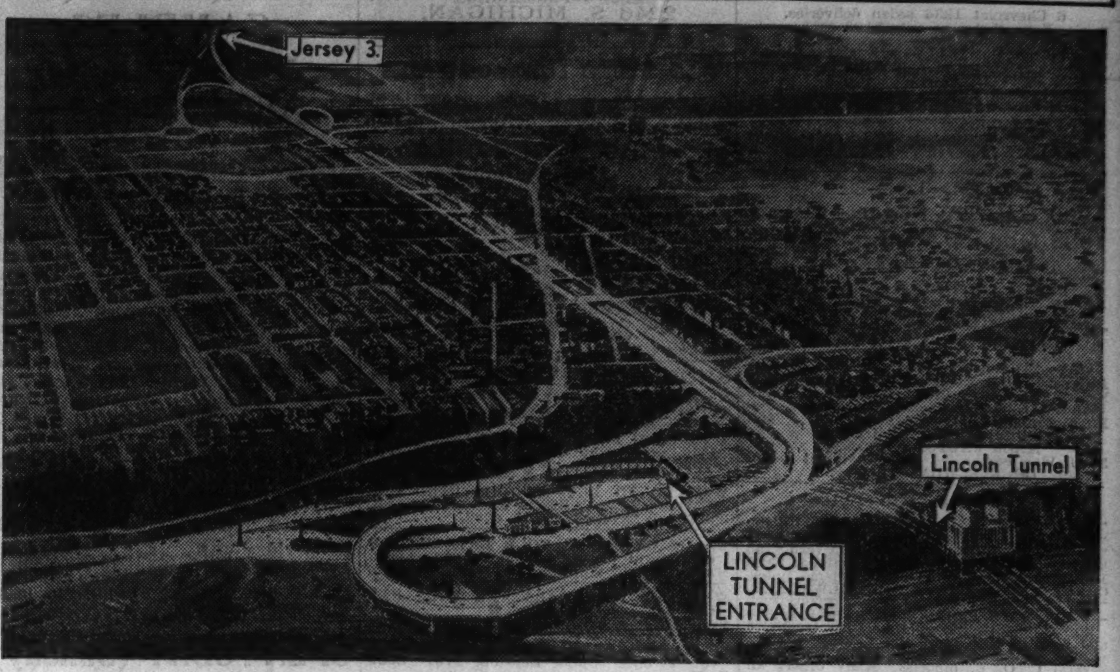
Among the replies was a letter bearing a post mark from Wiscasset, Maine. It was from a man who said he had such a machine, but that it was in a sad state of disrepair. After some correspondence back and forth, arrangements were made to ship the machine to a place in Rhode Island where, it seems, are located the only repairmen who know how to put the hen back in good working order.

This just goes to show again that you never can tell what you may come across in the want ads. You may not have a chicken that lays a hard-boiled egg, but if you have, it's too bad you didn't see that ad and maybe cash in on it.

At a distance, the want ad columns may look pretty much alike to you each day. But when you get up close to them you discover that these tightly packed columns are alive with interestingly different offers every day of the week.

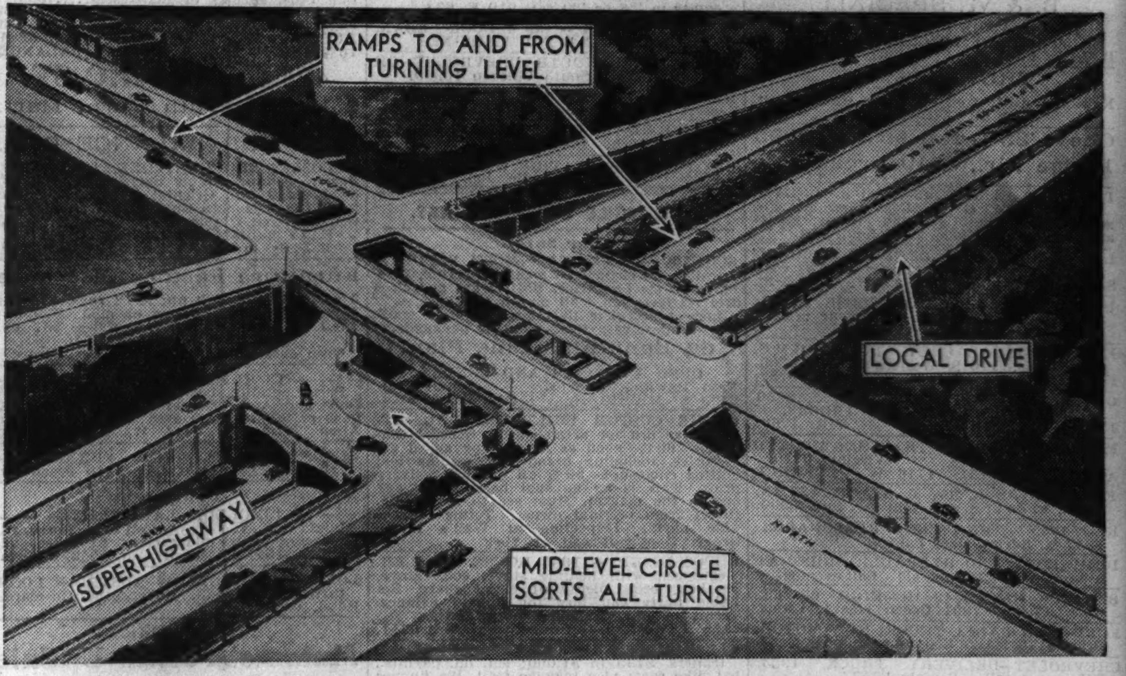
MOTORS—TRAFIC—HIGHWAYS

$10,000,000 for Two Miles



This is looking west from the Jersey terminal of New York's Lincoln tunnel under the Hudson river, showing two miles of superhighway approach nearing completion. The roadway, elevated and depressed and with ingenious trafic sorters, impressed Chicago and Cook county engineers working on designs for Chicago.

Three Level Grade Separation



At the intersection of Hudson county boulevard with the New Jersey approach to Lincoln tunnel, a circle on a middle deck sorts the turning movements while express travel on the bottom and boulevard travel on the top proceed without interruption. Ramps connect the bottom with the middle and the middle with the top.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

A DANGEROUS PRACTICE.

Chicago, July 23.—Recent reports of the American Municipal association on all-night parking in other cities make us realize how careless our own city is. We have an unenforced ordinance against all-night parking, but every city street is filled nightly with parked cars, in some cases even in double lane. It is difficult to drive past these parked cars. Frequently newspaper articles appear chastizing delinquent taxpayers [usually small apartment or home owners], yet every alley displays many private garage for rent signs. Inquiry shows these can be rented for $2 to $4 a month. Many more tax bills could be met if these garages could be rented. It is a price any car owner could pay to help eliminate the overcrowded streets at night, thereby increasing safety and in addition increase our city's tax receipts.

If every car owned in Chicago were parked on the streets nightly, they would be filled from curb to curb. So it becomes an unfair privilege for some at the expense of others.

We moved from a prominent boulevard corner apartment mainly because of the noise of cars' parking and starting at the curb, accompanied by loud talking and raucous laughter at all hours of the night and early morning.

The fire and accident hazard should of course be considered. Ask city firemen what they think of these cars parked nightly on the streets.

Chicago will remain lax until another experience happens such as the Iroquois fire with its tragic loss of life due to laxness and unenforced laws. That next time will likely be some apartment hotel fire where fire apparatus could not be used to advantage because the streets were filled with all-night parkers and fire plugs blocked.

When will Chicago wake up!

MORE ON QUEBEC ROADS.

QUEBEC, Que., July 14.—Our attention was drawn to a certain article which appeared in the June 25 CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE under the title "Voice of Trafic" and signed "Chicagoan."

The statements contained are so malicious and unfounded that we cannot hold still any longer. For your information, we may say that the road to Montreal and Quebec City is paved from Montreal to Cap Santé, a distance of about 132 miles, and is in excellent condition. From Cap Santé to Portneuf there is about 4 miles of construction, but there is no detour. Trafic is maintained and that piece of road is perfectly safe for travel at a reasonable speed of 30 to 35 miles per hour [which you will admit is not so bad for a road under construction]. From St. Augustin to Champigny, a distance of about 5 miles, the condition is about the same and work is scheduled to be completed by September. At present we see people every day who drive from Montreal to Quebec City in just about three hours.

If your Chicagoan after having covered that distance in about that time still has the nerve to tell us that the road is bad, I don't know what his conception of a good road is.

As far as the condition of the road from Maine to Quebec is concerned, we must admit that this road is a bit rough in some spots. That this applies not only to the province of Quebec but to the state of Maine also. This road, if you ever had the opportunity of driving over it, is narrow and winding and is not fit for driving at 75 miles per hour.

The condition has been improved recently and this road will be in fair condition during the balance of the present season.

Chicago Studies Superhighway Designs for New York Roads

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 29.—Two miles of highway costing $10,000,000 are nearing completion on the Jersey approach to the Lincoln tunnel. Chicago and Cook county engineers, studying superhighway designs here for the possible use in Chicago, were impressed by the magnitude of expenditures and by the ingenuity of pavement layouts.

The $82,000,000 Lincoln tunnel is the third roadway crossing the Hudson river to Manhattan. The first, the $50,000,000 Holland tunnel, was opened in 1927. The George Washington bridge, costing $60,000,000, was opened two or three years later. The $60,000,000 Tri-Borough bridge and the $85,000,000 Whitestone bridge are new structures on the other side of town.

Includes 13 Grade Separations.

This two miles of new construction includes thirteen grade separations, a trestle spire, a three level trafic sorter, and two circled ramps. These terms won't be understood by Chicago motorists without some explanation but they give a pretty good picture of the unconventional complication of pavements that simplify trafic movements at this concentration point.

Use Three Levels.

"It's apparent," said LeRoy H. Cather, consulting engineer for the city of Chicago, "that we'll need radical departures from familiar street designs when we concentrate trafic in Chicago upon superhighways."

Duncan M. Campbell, chief engineer of the Cook county highway department, and Harry W. Lochner, design engineer for this department, gave particular attention to a Hudson county boulevard crossing of this superhighway route. Here, to conserve right of way requirements, the designers expanded vertically, using three levels.

On the upper level is the boulevard pavement with center ramps for cars to turn into the superhighway route. Also on the upper level are the service drives for local trafic paralleling the super route.

On the middle level is a circle where turning trafic merges and separates without right angle conflict. On the lower level is the express trafic. Ramps connect the mid level with both the top and the bottom for the turning trafic.

Much Is Depressed Highway.

Much of the new mileage is a depressed highway. For the right of way a solid block, one of the short New York blocks, was condemned. The normal street on each side became a one way local drive at grade. Cross streets bridge the express roadway with a few having connections with the super route.

On a trestle spiral, the super descends from the palisades to reach the mouth of the tunnel. On the western end of the new pavement, where the Jersey meadows accommodated more right of way, the superhighway is elevated over U. S. 1 and U. S. 9 with one of the ramps flowing into a circle to remove friction in the conflux of the trafic streams.

By RHEA SEEGER

THE annual rush of feminine fur trappers begins tomorrow, the August trek to town to order, compare, and select the best pelts, the newest designs, and to take advantage of superior workmanship without pressure. These are the reasons why a careful shopper buys a fur coat during the hottest weather of the year. Blistering heat outside, but delightfully cool interiors where fine furs are presented under the most favorable of buying conditions. In this air-cooled, frosty atmosphere the furs are fluffy, as electrically alive as they will be next winter when the mercury dives below zero.

So fur coat shopping no longer has to be rushed through when the first nippy temperatures suddenly remind the laggards that blizzards and cold weather are just a matter of hours. Lucky shoppers these days select and order their winter furs carefully and with cool comfort. Expert designers confer over the smallest detail, fittings also are sessions of cool comfort, and in August you have the pick of the first showings, the benefit of unhurried fur workers, and the unusual August fur sale prices.

New designs, new "workings" of the finest pelts, new shoulderlines, exciting new silhouettes, together with distinctive details, all are launched during the next thirty days. It is now that you'll find out that all shades of brown are fashion spotlight stealers; that Persian lamb is 'way out in front of the fashion parade as the best of the all-purpose, general-wear coats; that sealskin is as young and smart as anything in sleek caracul; that mink-dyed muskrat is the rage of the showings, and that London smoke is one of the most flattering of new squirrel shades.

New silhouettes assure the right coat or the right model for every individual. If you're tall, willowy, and blessed with a wasp waistline you'll cheer for the belted-in coats with swankily flared skirts. If you're medium you can find just the right length swagger in virtually any pelt you may desire.

Long-haired pelts or sleek, satin smooth pelts, collars or no collars, any amount of new and different sleeve designs, plus plenty of very interesting shoulderlines—the assortments are almost bewildering! You select the furs that will dramatize your personality, determine the design that will subtly slenderize and flatter the streamline, gloat over the reasonable price tags, and proceed. Usually three fittings are sufficient if you order your coat made. If you select from the dozens ready to wear out, your fur-hunting expedition is finished with speed and complete fashion satisfaction.

Brown leads the parade, with lovely sheared beavers, all the mink-dyed muskrats, the sable-toned squirrels, and the patrician minks. Versatile designers have achieved sensational success in the beauty of the soft draping, the beautiful swirled patterns of the skins, not only in the luxury type furs but in the modestly priced as well. There isn't a dull model to be seen.

Seven-eighths lengths are the best sellers during August. This length coat is the choice of the careful shopper. It's the coat that usually is especially designed, a collarline of one model, sleeves of another, details of a third, all cleverly combined by skilled craftsmen into the individual coat for the exacting and appreciative woman.

Such are the individual new fur coats presented during the August fur sales. Illustrated are six new arrivals, showing new detail, new silhouette, and new working of the fine pelts.

Fashion Scout Reports Latest Paris Openings

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Dog days ought to be the time when right minded people devote themselves exclusively to iced drinks and contemplating the subtemperature of a big stretch of sea. But fashion reporters and dress buyers get no such break. At this moment they are sitting on hard chairs packed into closed-up salons, looking at the new fall and winter styles. I've spent eight hours in one day alone doing just this, and the only people around me who are more underprivileged are the mannequins, who have to wear all that velvet and those loads of fur and keep moving while they do it.

But we're a contrary lot, because we take it and like it. We'd have to be tied to be kept away from the opening showing of a big house. There's an excitement about it, an "on the verge of big things" atmosphere that melts away from later shows. The new clothes, the colors, the luscious materials, the embroideries, and the gadgets are at the peak of their charm at this moment. They're more potent than a champagne bath.

Hints of intentions to change the shape of our clothes this fall have become ultimatums in some of the French dressmaking places. Longish jackets and draped skirts that don't spread to swing size make the daytime styles look very different. Daytime skirts with suggested bustles at the back or pint size panniers at the sides are new with a vengeance. SKIRTS ARE LONGER. They're not 'way down to there, but they're definitly somewhat longer than the skirts we've been wearing this summer. Suits with circular skirts paired off with longer jackets are entirely different in effect from the same skirts with those short basque jackets of the late season.

Waistlines grow positively waspish, but they're charming because the whole thing is a trick of cut and girdles. There are capes. There are overskirts with colorful underskirts that show below them. Daytime necklines are mostly high but fancy, with collars, or irregular cut, or trimming. Hats are high and trimmed in a big way. Pearl gray feathers on hats and pearl gray gloves with black make color excitement more powerful than red to the bull.

Coats often come in two colors. They have skintight waists in one shade and circular skirts in another, and a dress under them matches one of the two colors. But the really breathtaking quality of these fall coats is the way they are trimmed. Fur on coats is something different. Fur ruffles or gathered panels, or stripes in contrast to the shade of the coat, give them a just born look that is simply irresistible.

There are coats in the fall shows made of light colors such as beige and gray, and trimmed with dramatic dark furs. Collars of fox are choker in front and shawl at the back. They're mobile so they can be worn several ways. Mink trims black coats. Persian lamb fur trimming looks like something else because it is scalloped and ruffled. Dark red and dark green coats are shown by several houses, trimmed with black or dark brown furs.

Coat sleeves are likely to be all swelled up into barrel or leg o' mutton shapes. A sample is a Bruyère model. The barrel sleeves, or you may prefer to call them melon shaped, are trimmed with stripes to the elbows, done with skunk tails, with shaded brown to beige braid embroidery at the elbows and on the cuffs. The scarf collar has skunk tail fringe.

One of the new fall coats from Maggy Rouff looks as if it had a crinolined skirt. It is made of smooth black wool like broadcloth and trimmed with double ruffles of black Persian lamb, the borders of the ruffles being scalloped and edged with cloth binding. Ruffles over the shoulders give the sleeves a fluffy look that's new.

In Maggy Rouff's cape and suit ensemble the cape is black wool with a collar and cut out epaulets of black Persian lamb, a patch of which is set on the coat front near the hem. The jacket is vivid shrimp pink wool with ruffles of Persian lamb on the sleeves. The overskirt is black, and the pink wool underskirt shows at the bottom. It has a fur hem.

An important entry is the two color coat by Bruyère. This model has a black wool skirt and a waist of pearl gray wool, with a big fox collar that's the same color. The leg o' mutton sleeves are important details. A blouse of gray satin and a black skirt make the dress under this coat. The postilion hat of black cut beaver is trimmed with a gray feather.

Definitly in the style limelight, according to homemaking experts, are beds with headboards upholstered in quilted satin, taffeta, and chintz, with matching bedspreads available. The upholstery is used slip-cover fashion and is easily removed for cleaning. In some styles the upholstery is set into removable panels in both headboards and footboards.

Custom made upholstered beds first came into the style picture a few years ago. This year they are being shown in many ready-made models.

Protecting Book Backs.

To keep book bindings from breaking paint them with a thin coat of clear shellac. This is especially advised for books used a great deal.

Patterns by Clotilde

By Clotilde.

We don't need to remind you that any frocks you make between now and autumn should be the type you may wear now and later. Such doubling up of purpose makes a frock a good investment. Three patterns today are styled for fall, and may be made of materials suitable for both late summer and autumn.

At the left, a dress styled especially for matrons. It makes up beautifully in sheers and net, as well as in crêpes. Its neckline is V and trimmed with a contrasting band that ends in a matching bow. The shoulder yoke has shirring beneath it, lending fulness to the bodice. Sleeves end at bracelet length, and a self-fabric sash is crushed around the waistline. The paneled skirt is cut for moderate flare.

Center, a frock with long lines that women with mature silhouettes will appreciate. Its V neckline is left unadorned. Shirring originating in the shoulder seams makes a graceful top for the frock. The waistline is high and gives way to a long, slender line in the skirt. Down the entire front of the frock are buttons arranged in any way you like. Crêpes are best for this model, and rather heavy sheers.

McShane, 2520 LeClaire street, Davenport, Ia.: When drying clothes inside where hanging space is limited I put shirts, dresses, etc., on wire clothes hangers which can be hung almost anywhere. I also find it convenient when washing windows to carry my equipment on an old serving tray which prevents water splashes when squeezing sponge and chamois out of water. I use snap clothes pins to pin back curtains and drapes so they're out of the way when cleaning around windows.

Mrs. T. H. G., Chicago: Early this spring I put those nonwashable oil cloth curtains up at my kitchen and bathroom windows and are they saving me the labor of washing and ironing curtains when the summer dusts blow in. I just wipe them clean with a damp cloth!

Katherine C.—Kalamazoo, Mich.: I've a large family and when some one wants a pair of washable gloves dried in a hurry I fasten the gloves by safety pin at wrist to the frame of a small electric fan. I make sure that the air fills the gloves and blows through them — and they'll dry in short order.

Mrs. G. H., Chicago: When food burns in any of my aluminum pans I clean it by putting two tablespoonsful of vinegar to enough water to cover burned spots and let stand over night. Next morning I boil mixture for 10 minutes. It works in most cases.

Freda Jones, Chicago: I always keep on hand a supply of paste or liquid wax to protect and keep in shape all our sporting equipment, such as golf clubs, fishing rods, etc. I also use it for all sorts of leather articles such as riding boots, traveling bags, basketballs—and even my parchment lamp shades. It's an easy way of keeping these articles in top shape—and saves on scrubbing and cleaning.

Clogged Vacuum Cleaner Inefficient; Keep It Clean

A vacuum cleaner with its bag clogged with dust works as inefficiently as a percolator from which the coffee grounds are not removed. Keep the inside of the bag clean so that the cleaner's "draft," which sucks the dust from the carpet, will be maintained.

Beauty aids have an annual turnover valued at $600,000,000 in England, with hair preparations ranking first, face and skin foods second, and face powder and rouge third.

Women of Kamiyo, Japan, held a big street sale of watermelons to raise funds for needy families of soldiers.

Summer Furniture Makes Use of Plain, Figured Fabrics

Summer furniture makes use of both plain and figured fabrics in its upholstery this season. A white rattan settee, for example, has seat cushions of turquoise sail cloth, while the back cushions have this tone for background with a printed pattern in scarlet and white. This combination of plain and figured fabric gives a smart, new appearance to chairs and couches.

Plain sail cloth in lovely tones of yellow, rose, deep blue, green, and rust makes ideal slip covers for porch pieces because of its durability. It is sunfast, tubfast, and will not wrinkle easily. And it's so good looking.

On the House

By Louise Bargelt

Trends in new bathtubs continue to show more and more models with seats. The sides are lower and some models have a rim seat as well as a built in seat. Trends in wall and floor materials for bathrooms continue to display beauty and utility. Manufacturers of bathroom wall materials are offering at the present time literally dozens of different types, and many of them are almost incredibly lovely to look at. Manufacturers of bathroom fixtures are offering improved models in every line. Architects and builders are designing bathroom layouts with greater thought and skill and attention than ever before. There is no reason why your bathroom can't be what your taste dictates, for fixtures and wall and floor coverings can be beautiful and durable and efficient.

If the floors or other varnished surfaces in your house are turning cloudy or whitish looking this summer, there may be moisture coming in contact with the backs of them. Moisture from sweating water pipes —between ceiling and floor above— can damage varnish in summer and turn it a sad, cloudy white. Find out the cause, whatever it is, and remove it, before more damage occurs. After that you will have to remove old varnish, and refinish as you would coat unfinished wood.

There is a new insulating interior finish on the market which claims to have an unusually high light reflection factor; something better than 70 per cent. This wall and ceiling surfacing has been given a treatment which causes it to turn lighter with exposure. It is available in tile, plank or board pattern, and besides its insulating properties it possesses a certain amount of sound absorption. Moreover, it's cleanable with a sponge or cloth.

Pickles Keep Pace with Rest of Preserving

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune.]

The jam and jelly season scarcely gets under way when home pickle makers contract the fever and as many pickle recipes as jelly recipes go out from our office.

Most common requests are for dill pickles, watermelon rind pickles, and mixed pickles. There are two kinds of dill pickle, the short process and the long process. The short method follows, and the brining process may be found in "The Pickle Parade," a mimeographed booklet which may be obtained by writing to me and sending a 3 cent stamp. The booklet also contains many other good pickle recipes.

QUICK DILL PICKLES
Cucumbers of even size
1 head dill for each quart jar
3 quarts water
1 quart vinegar
1 cup salt

Scrub small, firm cucumbers thoroughly, rinse, and pack closely into quart jars. Place a head of dill in the top of each jar. Mix water, vinegar, and salt, bring to a boil, and pour at once over the cucumbers. Seal the jars and store in a cool, dark place for at least six weeks before opening. Cucumbers will not be properly brined before that time.

Another popular and easy cucumber pickle is this one, the recipe for which was contributed by a reader of this column several years ago:

[1 quart]

Fill a clean, sterile jar with very thinly sliced, crisp cucumbers. [Don't use too large cucumbers, and be sure that they are washed free from all grit before they are sliced.] Mix 1 cup vinegar, 1 cup water, and 1 cup sugar with 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon celery seed, and ½ teaspoon white mustard seed. Pour this mixture over the cucumbers, seal, and process in a hot water bath for 5 minutes.

WATERMELON PICKLES

Cut off thin, green skin and pink flesh from watermelon rind, and slice the rind in strips. Soak overnight in salt water to cover [use 1 tablespoon salt to each quart of water]. In the morning drain and cook in fresh boiling water until barely tender. Drain again. Measure rind. For each two quarts use these ingredients for sirup: 1½ cups vinegar, 2 cups brown sugar, ½ cup water, 1 stick cinnamon, 1 teaspoon ground ginger, and ½ teaspoon ground cloves. Boil the sirup for 5 minutes, add rind, and cook for 20 minutes, or until clear. Remove melon from sirup and fill jars. Boil sirup for 10 minutes longer, and pour over the melon. Seal at once.

MIXED VEGETABLE PICKLE
2 cups carrots, cut in strips
1 cup sliced string beans
3 medium onions, sliced
1 green pepper, chopped
1 cup vinegar
⅔ cup sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon tumeric

Combine all ingredients, and boil until vegetables are tender and clear. Pack into clean, hot jars, and seal.

This recipe was printed in this column last year, and so many readers liked it exceptionally well that I'm repeating it this season. Pears may be canned in the same way.

SWEET PICKLED PEACHES
4 quarts peaches
2 cups vinegar
4 cups sugar
2 tablespoons stick cinnamon
1 tablespoon whole cloves

Dip peaches in scalding water, then in cold water, and slip off skins. Meanwhile boil vinegar, sugar, and spices together for 5 minutes. Peaches may be cut in halves or left whole. Many persons like to leave a pit or two in the pickling sirup to add flavor when peaches are cut in two. Drop peaches, a few at a time, into the boiling sirup, and cook until barely tender. Do not overcook. Pack into clean, hot jars, cover with boiling sirup, and seal.

The spices may be canned with the peaches or they may be removed from the pickles before canning. Some women like to stick cloves into the peaches in preparing them this way.

Miss Meade contributes daily to the feature pages of the Chicago Tribune, guiding housewives to the best knowledge of cookery and hostessing. When writing for information please inclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Inherits 50,000 German Marks Now Worthless

Mrs. Virginia La Velle of New York City, who inherited 50,000 German paper marks of 1910 as part of the estate of her husband, has received permission from the court in Queens to destroy the money, now worthless but once nominally worth $12,000, in any manner she wished. She tried to dispose of the marks, but finally has become convinced that they are worthless.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

This cover was carried on the first flight between Warsaw, Poland, and Belgrade, Jugo-Slavia. The cachet shows the flags of the two countries. An additional cachet commemorates twenty years of Polish postal service. The stamps are from the special block showing the portraits of President Moscicki, Marshal Rydz-Smigly in the lower row, and the late Marshal Pilsudski and J. Moraczewski, first president of Poland. The cover came from Jan Cithurus of the general postoffice in Warsaw.

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning values. Do not ask where stamps may be sold, as the Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

The first domestic 1 cent paid reply postal card was placed on sale in 1892. It was designed to provide the original user of the card with a handy means of prepaying the postage on the answer to his message, and actually consists of two 1 cent postal cards printed on a single sheet of buff cardboard measuring 5½ by 7 inches. In use the card is folded double with the message card exposed and measures 3½ by 5½ inches.

Each half of the first paid reply card bore a three-quarter portrait of Grant facing left enclosed in a broad oval frame. This oval frame contained a value inscription below the portrait reading, "One Cent," while above one card bore the words, "Message Card," and the other, "Reply Card." At either side of the oval were five pointed stars. In the upper left portion of each card were the inscriptions, "United States of America," in shaded English text, and "This side is for address only" in small gothic caps. The message card had a special inscription reading, "Postal Card with Paid Reply," while the other half of the card was inscribed, "Reply Postal Card." In addition there was an inscription in small gothic type in the lower left corner of the message card instructing the addressee to "Detach annexed card for answer." Each face of the double card was provided with a border identical in design with that used on the first international card. All of the printed portions of this double card were in black.

Postal authorities did not require strict adherence to the inscriptions printed on the cards and it was not unusual to find the original message written or printed on the reply half of cards. Also purchasers of paid reply cards who found themselves overstocked with the double cards were at liberty to separate the halves and use each as a single 1 cent card.

A list of United States ordinary postage stamps bearing portraits or figures of women has been compiled by Elmer C. Pratt of the Camden [N. J.] Courier-Post, and was recently reprinted in Weekly Philatelic Gossip. The attempt is here made to enlarge the list and to rewrite it into groups to include definite portraits of known persons, symbolic and allegoric portraits, unknown female figures in groups copied from paintings, and female figures used as incidental parts of a design.

The first group includes Isabella on several values of the Columbian issue; Martha Washington on the 8 cent value of the 1902 issue, on the 4 cent, 1922, and on the 1½ cent, 1938; Mrs. Whistler, mother of the artist, on the 3 cent Mothers of America issue of 1934; Susan B. Anthony, on the Suffrage for Women commemorative stamp of 1936; Pocahontas on the 5 cent Jamestown stamp of 1907, and possibly Virginia Dare and her mother on the 5 cent commemorative stamp of 1937, although this design is purely imaginary.

The symbolic group of female portraits includes the Victory of the victory issue of 1919; Liberty on the 15 cent stamp of 1922; America on the $5 value of the same year; the figure surmounting the memorial shown on the Ericsson stamp of 1926; the Greatest Mother on the Red Cross issue of 1931; the little girl who with a boy form the allegory of tree planting in the Arbor day issue of 1932, and the girl worker in the group of four figures on the N. R. A. stamp of 1933.

The unknown female figures include many characters on the stamps of the Columbian issue, and women in groups on the 10 cent trans-Mississippi issue, the 2 cent Pilgrim issue of 1921, the 2 cent Huguenot-Walloon issue of 1924, the 3 cent Oregon centennial stamp of 1936, and on the Inauguration of Washington issue of 1939.

The fourth group includes the figure which forms the central portion of the seal of the Massachusetts Bay Colony seal on the stamp issued in 1930, figures used as supporters on the 1 cent and $5 values of the Columbian issue, and on the 2 cent Pan-American stamp and on the 5 and 13 cent values of the issue of 1902, and female portraits in medallions on the $5 stamp of 1902 and the 1 cent value of the Jamestown issue of 1907. One stamp which was definitly a memorial to a woman bears the inscription, "Molly Pitcher," overprinted on the 2 cent stamp of 1922.

Some of the finest allegorical portraits are found on the newspaper stamps of 1857. These include America, Justice, Victory, Peace and Commerce. In addition this issue presents portraits of Ceres, Clio, Minerva, Vesta, Hebe, and Minnehaha. Since these stamps were never available to the public for ordinary postage uses, they are not included in the general list.

Vacuum Cleaner Excellent Aid in Dusting the Books

Anyone with stacks of books is likely to neglect them, but they should not be overlooked. Go over them, edges and bindings, with a vacuum cleaner or the hand model, and pay attention to the shelves, too. Vacuuming is excellent for books because anything except the lightest touch, when a dust cloth is used, rubs dust into the edges of the pages.

Duplicate Utensils.

To save steps, keep duplicates of certain kitchen utensils, such as salt shakers and paring knives, at places where they are used.

When One Is Five

By Eleanor Jewett.

Every evening after supper
I dig a harbor in the sand,
A place for sailing-boats to come,
And docks, for sailor men to land.

I dig my harbor round and deep,
I smooth the sides with greatest care;
But, curiously, with each new day
My evening harbor is not there!

There must be unknown enemies
Who do not want my boats to land
And so, by night, steal to the shore
And fill my harbor up with sand.

Sally Tells of Next Party at the Ball Game

By Sally Joy Brown.

[Activities of the Sally Joy Brown department are sponsored by Tribune Charities, Inc.]

I can just see the grins that are going to break out when you boys and girls hear today's good news!

It's time to announce our next party and I've selected something I know you're all crazy about. Yep, you're right—it's baseball!

One week from Thursday, Aug. 10, the Chicago Cubs will play Cincinnati out at Wrigley field and when the game starts 100 boys and girls will be in the audience as my guests.

Think you'd like to be in that group? Well, if you're a staunch Cub fan, and can write a letter telling me why you'd like to see this game with me, maybe you'll be there.

You see, we plan various kinds of parties to suit the different tastes of boys and girls, and for this big baseball party I want real baseball fans as my guests. If you follow the Cubs, and would have the time of your young life if you were invited to this party, you're just the one I want to hear from. I have room for 50 boys and 50 girls, and they'll be the youngsters who write the most enthusiastic letters about the game. If you prove to me that you're a real fan, and that a party of this kind would be a real treat to you, maybe you'll see your name listed with the winners in next Sunday's TRIBUNE.

In order to try for an invitation all you have to do is write me a letter which will convince me that you just must be invited to this party. All mail must reach me no later than next Thursday morning, and you must remember to include your full name, address, and age in your letter. Those are the only rules we have. If your brother, sister, and friend are anxious to come, too, their letters can be included with yours, but you may not write for them, nor may you have your mother or father do it for you. You see, I don't care if you're not a very good speller or if your handwriting isn't so very good. All I want to know is whether or no' you'd like to come to this party.

I wouldn't put off writing that letter too long, either, if I were you, because you just might get busy playing and forget to get it written until it's too late, and that would be a calamity.

The address is just Sally Joy Brown, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago.

Every single boy or girl listed here soon will receive a personal invitation from me. They're the youngsters who've been selected as my guests at our movie party, when we'll all see Mickey Rooney's last picture, "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever," at the United Artists theater. Be on the lookout for the mailman, boys and girls!

Through the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

You'd never guess it, but she's actually wearing an unusual coat of armor, an invisible film of nongreasy cream that effectively repels the troublesome mosquito. When the cream, which has a pleasant scent, is applied generously and allowed to dry, only the mosquitoes are conscious of it.

One of the things the well dressed woman is likely to be wearing these midsummer evenings is an invisible film of anti-mosquito cream. In certain sections it's quite the fashion, for the very good reason that the mosquitoes are numerous and the cream entirely effective in making them flit elsewhere.

For years rather evil smelling, drippy potions were found efficient in keeping off the horrid little insects, but they didn't contribute much to glamor. In fact, they were plenty destructive to that feminine essential.

The nice thing about the new mosquito cream is that it doesn't jeopardize one's glamor at all. Its scent is a nice one, a bit lemony, but so delicate you're not particularly conscious of it at all. When it's applied, and the application should be generous and rubbed in well, it dries on the skin and doesn't show. Only the mosquitoes will know it's there, and the knowledge is sufficient to send them buzzing in t'other direction. The cream won't rub off against clothing and can be used on face, arms, and legs.

You'd never know it by the cream texture or odor, but that old standby of mosquito warfare, oil of citronella, is incorporated in it. There are other ingredients, too, including one that makes it helpful as a sun screen. It's wonderfully popular with the vacationers, both masculine and feminine, in those sections of the country that are infested with the little fiends.

No one knows why mosquitoes bother some persons more than others, but there are definite reasons, all tied up with the fascinating, complicated matter of allergies, why bites poison some persons and give others no more than a passing discomfort of itchiness. The only weapon against them, besides the gigantic task of overcoming the geographic attractions that lure them, is to envelop one's self in some sort of sheath that repels them. And since one can't walk through the summer swathed in mosquito netting or dripping with greasy lotions, the invisible armor of cream is an excellent idea.

For information about this mosquito repellant cream telephone Eleanor Nangle, Superior 0200, or write to her in care of The Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Feeding the Child.

New and unfamiliar foods should be introduced into the child's diet gradually, in small amounts, when the child is hungry, specialists say.

These lamps, photographed at the Merchandise Mart, are intended for two different types of room. The one with the classic figure as base is for an eighteenth century English or colonial room, while the one with the frosted glass globe shade is a copy of one used in our grandmothers' day and is for a Victorian interior.

In Choosing a Lamp Consider Period of Room

By Edith Weigle.

"I have a living room furnished in mahogany—I guess you'd call it the colonial style—and I'm puzzled about lamps. What kind should I get?

"I live in an old fashioned house and the furniture belonged to my parents, so it is mostly Victorian. What sort of lamps can I put in the room that will not seem out of keeping with the furnishings?"

These are just two of many requests we receive, showing women are often in a quandary about selecting table and floor lamps. They want their homes to be in good taste and wish to have accessories that are appropriate with their color schemes, furniture, etc. Yet they hesitate, for they're confronted with so many sizes and kinds of lamps that they are baffled.

So, to the rescue. First of all, of course, you must decide what type of living room you have. Even though, like Topsy, it "just growed," the chances are it falls under one of the following classifications: 18th century English or American colonial; Victorian; early American, or modern.

18th century English: Table lamps having Chinese porcelain bases, either in plain colors or in figured designs, with shades of silk in eggshell, beige, or pale yellow are charming. Also, bases of Wedgwood china or of Spode, or of Sheffield silver, or of cut crystal are excellent choices. Or you can introduce a lamp having a figure as a base, if that figure is classical rather than modern in feeling.

One of the pictures today shows such a lamp, the figure being Grecian in line and made of a two-toned metallic substance. A little receptacle for plants is attached to the base of this lamp. The shade is of parchment with laurel leaf border design, repeating the silver tone of the figure.

Colonial: Lamps for colonial mahogany living rooms are similar to those described above. The colonial and Federal periods in our country copied the furnishings of 18th century England to a large degree.

Victorian: Lamps of the Victorian era are being copied again by several smart manufacturers. One of these lamps, shown in the display of an eastern firm at the Merchandise Mart, is pictured today. The base comes in a number of lovely, soft colors and is of glass. The globe is of frosted glass.

This model is complete, even to the little chimney, but of course it is illuminated by electricity, not oil. Other lamps suitable for Victorian rooms are of the crystal drop type, or are of cut crystal, or of alabaster, or of tôle, or porcelain. Shades are of plain or textured silk and are not, of course, as fussy as those of our grandmothers' day.

Early American: Lamps of simple materials to blend with maple furniture are used. Pottery lamps are good. So are ones of pewter, or brass, or china, or of maple, itself. An old pewter vase can be wired and made into a lamp, as can an attractive old piece of milk glass or a handsome old brass candlestick. Simple shades of parchment, of chintz, or book linen are appropriate.

Modern: Lamps for modern rooms are so distinctive, so different from the types we've been discussing that you can't fail to recognize them. If your room is furnished in light woods you can probably match them in a lamp base, for many modern lamps have bleached wood bases. Metals also are popular—chromium, brass, etc. Pottery and crystal are other materials used. And shades are of interesting new materials: transparent colored plastics, textured fabrics, grass-cloth, and even wood fiber, as well as plain parchment.

Booklets Aid the Bride with Her Problems

Do you know the correct method of conducting a bridal shower? You can learn the etiquet of bridal showers from the booklet, "The Bridal Shower," by Helen Bartlett, Tribune etiquet editor. On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. Price, 2 cents. Postpaid, 3 cents.

By Helen Bartlett.

The usual amount of space devoted during the spring and summer months to inexhaustible questions on wedding etiquet has been cut down, not because there have been any fewer brides, or less numerous inquiries, but rather because we have compiled all the information in booklet form. It is so much more convenient this way, and so much more complete than we could make it except by devoting weeks and weeks of columns to cover the same material, all of which might be a little boring to our friends who are not prospective brides.

Those brides who are interested in obtaining this booklet material are invited to write and place their order. You have only to enclose the correct amount in stamps or coin with your request, and the booklets will be sent to you immediately. A little description of the contents will help you decide on those you need.

First, there is "Planning the Church Wedding," 3 cents; 5 cents postpaid. This booklet is the largest of all, and contains information such as the procedure of the wedding ceremony, the order of the processional and recessional, the positions at the altar, the sharing of the expenses, responsibilities of best man, etc.

"The Home Wedding" also advises about the procedure of the wedding, explains the difference between a home and church wedding, suggests the manner of decorating the house, and where to arrange the improvised altar.

"Correct Wedding Apparel" suggests the correct attire for the principal members of the wedding party for each particular kind of wedding—formal, informal, afternoon, evening. This is written from the etiquet point of view, and does not concern problems of fashion such as color schemes, styles of dresses, etc.

"Wedding Breakfast or Reception" divulges information such as the order of the receiving line at the reception, the correct seating arrangement at the bridal table, duties of the host, and the like.

"Small Weddings at Small Cost" is intended to help the brides who must practice economy and cut down various expenses without sacrificing any of the dignity or charm of the wedding.

"Selecting the Trousseau" includes lists of personal clothing and household items with which it is customary for a bride to provide herself before her wedding. These lists have in mind the bride in average circumstances who intends to establish an average home. Of course, the lists can be varied by each girl to suit her own peculiar needs. It would be impossible to compile a list that would be entirely suitable to every girl.

Clotilde Children's Patterns

The fashion minded younger set is getting to be quite a task for mothers who make clothes for them. We've come to the rescue today with a stylewise pattern that is easy to follow and which creates a truly smart dress any young miss will like. Its predominating lines are of the princess variety. An unusual collar is affixed to the round neckline, and should be made detachable for laundering. It is cut in squares and may be edged with braid or lace, if you like.

The skirt is paneled from the waistline and flares generously. Buttons in any sort of arrangement you prefer are used down the entire front. Sleeves, puffed at the shoulders, may be either long or short. If the latter, cuffs to match the collar are in order. For that matter, put tiny bands for cuffs around the long sleeves, too. Such a procedure makes the frock quite dressy enough for school parties and Sunday school.

For the present season use cottons, linens, and wash silks. For the autumn, choose silks and lightweight woolens, and poplin is attractive, too.

Style No. 2623 is designed for sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14. Size 8 requires 2 yards of 39 inch material, ⅜ yard of 35 inch contrasting, and 1½ yards of braid for the version with short sleeves.

Address orders for Clotilde Children's Fashions to Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Station, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing ten cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred—wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

Important to Start Baby Off in Good Health

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.
Copyright: 1939: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Because more babies are born in August than any other month, according to statistics, perhaps yours is arriving some time soon. If it is I entreat you, if it is humanly possible, to give to your baby, so marvelously brought into the world, the food nature has so marvelously contrived for him in his mother's body.

This is my own plea to you as a mother, and as one who cares deeply about other mothers and babies. But I am not, by any means, alone in trying to give the pendulum, already beginning to swing away from bottle feeding, a hard push in the opposite direction. Others are making the same plea, and among them a great scientist of our time, Dr. Alexis Carrel, known to the general public more widely through his book, "Man, the Unknown." Since an argument presented by him may help to convince you of the importance of breast feeding, I am going to quote from an article by him on this subject.

Because of my own space limitations I am able to quote only part of Dr. Carrel's article. This has made it necessary for me to omit his fascinating presentation of certain physiological facts about breast feeding and the nursing mother. Following are the extracts from Dr. Carrel's discussion in the Reader's Digest that I consider most pertinent as arguments for breast feeding:

"Should our baby be breast fed or bottle fed?" he begins.

"Every year this question is discussed in about 2,200,000 American homes. On the answer depends the kind of care the child will be given. Although the feeding of babies particularly interests mothers and physicians, it concerns all of us, both as human beings and taxpayers. For the attention received by the child is largely responsible for the quality of the tissues and the soul of the adult. [The emphasis is my own.] Ultimately the child's development as a happy and efficient member of society may depend largely on whether it is bottle or breast fed.

"Artificial feeding is admittedly convenient for the mother and advantageous to the physician. Its technique is well developed. Its results frequently excellent. Bottle feeding is especially successful when mothers are intelligent or when well trained nurses can be employed. Therefore, pediatricians and some obstetricians in expensive maternity hospitals, realizing that their patients expect such advice, often feel justified in advocating artificial feeding.

"Nevertheless, public health officials, as well as most obstetricians and the competent general practitioners who deliver the majority of babies, prescribe breast feeding as the ideal. Modern treatises on children's diseases in Europe and the United States teach the same doctrine. All over the country child welfare clinics are in favor of maternal milk.

"The children's bureau of the United States department of labor has issued excellent instructions for breast feeding. In a letter sent to new mothers of the city, the New York health commissioner proclaims that mother's milk is the baby's birthright. On many important subjects the leaders in medicine disagree. But about breast feeding they are unanimous. They believe, first, that no perfect substitute for mother's milk has been found; second, that almost every woman is capable of nursing her young. . . .

"The child, while in the womb, is one with the mother and all the organs of her body. After birth this relationship is intended to last, although less intimately, for several months. Mother and child still remain interdependent. Although separate in space, they are united by many chemical, physiological, and mental bonds. Obviously, this union is weakened when a bottle is substituted for the breast. . . .

"The nipple is perfectly adapted to the lips and tongue of the baby. . . The act of suckling requires contractions of the muscles of the face, the tongue, and neck; alternative movements of the lower jaw, and breathing through the nose. At the same time the infant presses the breast with its little hands, as puppies do with their paws, in order to increase the flow of milk. Suckling is a hard task. It is the first physical effort to which man is subjected. This effort brings about the optimum development of the jaws, the nose, and the roof of the mouth. It enhances the beauty of the visage and the quality of the voice. . . .

"Its composition [mother's milk] is also adjusted to the requirements of growing human tissues. Woman's milk contains proteins of the same nature as those constituting the body of the child. These proteins never bring about the changes in reactivity, called allergy, which cow milk may produce on account of its foreign nature. The amount of protein, phosphorus, and calcium contained in mother's milk is more precisely adjusted to the child's requirements than any artificial formula can possibly be.

"As the child develops, its rate of growth decreases. Simultaneously, mother's milk undergoes a corresponding reduction in proteins and salts. In sum, the breast precisely adjusts the quantity and the composition of the milk to the changing needs of the infant. Like all living organs, it reaches its complex end with marvelous accuracy. . . .

"Breast feeding exerts a manifold influence on infants. First, it reduces mortality. . . . If your baby is breast fed, it has from three to ten times a better chance of surviving that dangerous first year. . . .

"Fourth, many physicians believe that breast feeding gives to children not only better health, but also greater bodily endurance and nervous equilibrium. . . .

"How does nursing affect mothers? Lactation and suckling are natural functions. If performed with appropriate care their effects ought to be beneficial. We know that breast feeding contributes to achieving the physical and mental development of women. . . .

"When mothers have proper food, rest, and exercise, their health is distinctly improved by nursing their baby. . . .

"Breast feeding, as is well known, a few months the mother becomes the slave of the child, who has to be fed at three or four hour intervals. At the same time she must attend to her household duties. She needs strict self-discipline. She has less time for outside work, social obligations, traveling, recreation.

"In exchange she is given the priceless opportunity of learning selflessness and love. She also has the joy of giving more health, strength, and beauty to her baby. That is, the capacity for a happy life. Although love is not self-seeking she prepares her own happiness in this manner. For most of the sorrows of parents come from the physical and mental defects of their offspring."

In conclusion, Dr. Carrel says:

"Should babies be breast fed or bottle fed? Under its deceptive simplicity this question hides profound significance. It requires an answer from mothers and physicians. Also, from each man and woman in the nation. Ultimately, from democratic society itself. In nursing her child the mother fulfills her high duty with regard to the community. But the community must give her the educational, moral, and material help indispensable to the fulfillment of this duty."

The article from which these quotations are taken appeared in the June, 1939, issue of Reader's Digest, and was written by Dr. Alexis Carrel. Permission was granted by Reader's Digest for this use of Dr. Carrel's article.

Contract According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.
[Copyright: 1939: By Ely Culbertson.]

The Distributional Count summarizes in a few simple tables and formulæ the entire process of bidding valuation. Many players find it difficult and troublesome to visualize the later play of the cards and thus determine quickly the total of winners and losers in the hand. The Distributional Count expresses the same natural methods in a shorter mathematical way. Players will find that, in learning the Distributional Count, they are actually mastering the principles of play.

One of its features is that, except with very strong suits where it is easier to count the losers, the length values of suits are counted separately and the honor values of the suit are added.

Thus, if I bid with A-Q-7-6-5, I simply count two winners for the five card length, to which I add one and one-half for the A-Q, giving a total value of three and one-half winners, or between three and four winners depending on a finesse. The other way of valuing the suit is by placing the missing K-J-10 in opponents' hands, assuming 3-3-2 distribution, and deducting either one or two losers from the five card length, depending on a finesse, which gives the same result, to wit, three and one-half winners. It is obviously simpler, with weakish suits, to count the length values first and then add the honor values.

In the Distributional Count all the length values are automatically fixed, but the value of the trump length is double that of the side suit length for bids of one until partner has been heard from. When he denies the bid suit, its value is reduced to the value of any side length.

After a little practice, it is desirable that the player forget the Distributional Count and value the hands naturally. It will offer the best proof that the count had served its purpose well.

In using the Distributional Count to estimate the number of available winners at his own trump bid, the player counts his honor winners and adds to them the length value of the trump and side suits. Here is the table of honor winners, which must not be confused with the table of defensive honor tricks:

Defensive value.		Playing value.
2	A K	2
1½	A Q	1½
1	A J	1-plus
2-plus	A K Q	3
2-plus	A K J	2½
1½-plus	A Q J	2-plus
1½	A Q 10	1½ plus
1-plus	A J 10	1½
1-plus	A J x	1-plus
½	Q J 10	1
2-plus	A K Q J	4
2-plus	A K Q 10	3½-plus

2-plus	A K J 10	3½
1½-plus	A Q J 10	3-plus
1-plus	A J 10 9	2½
1	K Q	1
½	K J	½-plus
plus	Q J	½
1½	K Q J	2
1	K Q 10	1½
1	K Q x	1-plus
1	K J 10	1-plus
½-plus	K J x	1
½	Q J x	½-plus
plus	Q 10 x	½
1½	K Q J 10	3
1	K J 10 9	2-plus
½	Q J 10 9	2
plus	J 10 9 8	1
plus	J 10 x x	½-plus

These valuations include every card, and no addition is to be made because of the four card length. Any other card held with the above four card combinations may be valued as one full winner.

The full value of honors: The trump suit is usually controled by the declarer, who can draw out the opponents' trumps and remove the danger that the third round of a side suit will be ruffed. Therefore, A K Q, which is valued as only two plus honor tricks against the opponents' trump bid because the queen may be ruffed, becomes three full winners at declarer's own bid. K Q J, valued as one and one-half honor tricks, is counted as two honor winners because it will surely win two tricks.

How to value the trump suit: Until partner has denied the suit [by refusing to raise] every card over three in the trump suit is valued as one full winner. Thus the trump suit 9 7 6 4 3 2 is worth three winners; change the suit to A 7 6 4 3 2 and the total value is four winners, three for length and one for the ace.

If partner supports the suit, declarer continues to count each long trump as one full winner. If partner fails to raise, declarer revises his valuation, considering the long trumps to be worth no more than long cards in a side suit [see below].

Solid trump sequences, however, are more easily valued by simply counting out the losers. Q J 10 9 8 is valued as three sure tricks, whether partner supports or not.

Four card, five card and other lengths have a definite trick-taking value which must be added to the honor value of the suit and to the total winners of the hand. As with honors, the length winners are sure and probable, worth one and one-half a trick. As a rule, the side lengths are valued on the basis of the second most probable distribution. Following is a table showing long suit tricks:

	In trump suit.	In a side suit.
A four card length is worth.........	1 trick	½ trick
A five card length is worth.........	2 tricks	1 trick
A six card length is worth..........	3 tricks	2 tricks
A seven card length is worth.........	4 tricks	4 tricks

Intermediate cards, the jacks, tens and even nines, play an important rôle in the valuation of any suit. For instance, with ♥ K 5 3 2 as a side suit, I value the king as one-half trick and the four card length as another half trick, giving me a total of one winner for the suit. If the suit were K 10 9 2 I would value it as almost one and one-half winners, for the intermediates 10-9 are a mighty important factor.

It is important to remember that the establishable value of side suits depends entirely upon the strength and length of the trump suit. Unless the trump suit is strong and long enough to draw out the poisonous fangs of the opponents' trumps, the low cards of side lengths will be worthless. Their value appears when the opposing trumps disappear.

[This subject will be continued next Sunday.]

The bidding [North-South vulnerable]:

North	East	South	West
1 club	1 spade	2 hearts	Pass
3 hearts	Pass	4 hearts	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opens the spade deuce and East plays the queen. As South, declarer, how would you go about fulfilling your four heart contract?

Answer: Win first trick and lead precisely two rounds of trumps. Now lead a low diamond to the ace and return a diamond. West cannot play the king since to do so would hold his side to one diamond trick. But when East wins with the queen, he can only cash the spade king and on his next lead is in trouble. If he plays another spade, you can discard your losing club while ruffing in dummy and finally concede only one more diamond trick. If East returns a club, your loser in that suit is automatically salvaged.

Loafing Is an Art; We Don't Mean Laziness

By Doris Blake.
[Copyright: 1939: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Can you do nothing, absolutely nothing, and do it well?

Few people in this hectic era of ours are qualified to answer in the affirmative. If you can "loaf" with complete abandon you are said to be among the favored of the gods. And your chances of being a something and a somebody far above the ordinary run are predicted to be greater if you are an expert at doing nothing well.

Just periodical debauches of do-nothingness are meant, of course, not loafing through life, not loafing on your job, but just getting away off by yourself and being able to dismiss every blessed little worry and concern, every bigger one, every ambition, and every activity that is habitual.

Among other things, it is promised you folk concerned with maintaining sweet domestic harmony that success will be more assured once you learn the gentle art of loafing. Not shirking, as that implies something quite different. Employing time that is legitimately yours, and employing it without the uncomfortable feeling of wasting time, without a nervous itch in your fingers, an impatient fidgeting of the body, a feeling of "I-wish-something-would-happen," that's the trick, the art, the enviable talent, according to our authority on the subject, Kenneth B. Wood, writing in a recent issue of a monthly devoted to raising the standard of mental health as well as physical.

We hop onto the idea and put in the domestic application because we feel that loafing profitably is one field in which women fail woefully. We feel that the constant itch to be doing something, whose value in leisure time often is nil, is a feature productive of marital disharmony. If women only would learn to let down, and let down with perfect and complete abandon, we'd guarantee a fifty per cent reduction in our annual broken home harvest. Further, we'd guarantee a smoother working household where the idea of dissolution is not entertained, but where irritations are more frequent than need be.

You could not visualize a good loafer, as here interpreted, as one given to impatient outbursts, which, as you know, start the brawl a-rolling in households. Hot, hateful words never are emitted without the impetus of bad temper to give them force or, let's call it, ragged tempers, ragged nerves. It is the constant state of being keyed up that ascribes enormous proportions to petty infractions. Almost every woman has experienced chagrin at her capacity to enlarge a mate's or child's petty infraction when her calm is returned and she reviews the incident, cold sober emotionally

To do nothing successfully, Mr Wood explains, one's mind must be keenly alive, a storehouse of associated ideas, a purring dynamo of suggestions. The person who has done the most things in his life, he says, is best equipped to do nothing. The man who has done only one thing is the worst, as that one thing has come to dominate his every movement.

The formula for development of the art of loafing, therefore, is to know how to do more than your job. If you don't know how to do enough things, you are incapable of doing nothing. Indeed, we are to infer that persons accustomed by long habit to one thing become and remain plodders, while the real doer of deeds in this world is the person who takes time out to meditate or, as Walt Whitman said: "To loaf and invite the soul."

We might even stretch Mr. Wood's suggestion, that the successful loafer is one to whom the happiest benefits accrue, to apply to that too large army of business women who let their minds respond only to the stimulus of their job activities.

It is all right to put everything one has into her daytime work, of course, but carrying it home mentally into the evening hours is the dangerous feature. These are legitimate hours in which to indulge in pleasurable loafing. By the art of knowing how to utilize that free time, bored, unhappy and sometimes cynical women will become alive, alert, gay, and interesting companions, if not life companion to one good man.

Every day there is presented, in the feature columns of the Chicago Tribune, a stimulating article by Miss Blake, who lends friendly counsel on a wide variety of common problems.

Home Owners' Queries

Elgin, Ill.—[To the Home Building Editor.]—What is the best location in a basement for a shower compartment? We are thinking of ordering such a compartment but wonder where we should place it?

JAMES T.

Answer: Such a compartment is best placed as close to piping in laundry room as possible. However, there are other considerations which might determine the best placement of your shower stall. Better call in a local plumber and ask his advice.

Chicago.—[To the Home Building Editor.]—I have read somewhere this summer of a new glass which has been manufactured to absorb some of the sun's heat rays. I would like to know if this glass would keep a sun room cooler in hot weather and where I can find out about it?

K. L.

Answer: There's a plate glass manufactured which has the peculiar property of absorbing a high per cent of the infra-red rays from the sun. It would aid in keeping your sun room cooler in hot weather. Send a stamped, addressed envelope to this department for manufacturers' name and address.

Chicago.—[To the Home Building Editor.]—What are the safest methods of keeping a porcelain sink in tip top shape?

L. K.

Answer: Use mild soaps, and small amount of kerosene where there's grease. If you use a "cleaner" be sure to keep it very mild, without abrasives of any sort. To test a cleaner rub it between two pieces of glass. If it doesn't scratch the glass it is probably safe for your porcelain enamel sink. But mild soaps and a little kerosene and gentle rubbing are usually sufficient—and very safe!

Remove Runners from the Tables During Summer

If you have embroidered Chinese or brocade mats or runners on your living room tables, take them all off for summer and see how much cooler the effect will be. There is nothing more beautiful than the gleaming top of a mahogany or walnut table. It is a thing of beauty in itself and should be seen, not hidden.

To avoid scratches from lamps, vases, etc., simply paste pieces of felt, cut to fit, on the bottoms of the various pieces.

Campus Modes by a Co-ed

By Carolyn Ramey.

Like most co-eds whose papas give a clothes allowance which they dare not exceed, come what may in the way of beaux and social events, my roommate is feeling the pinch and has ordered me to furnish her with a well rounded but rather limited wardrobe for the coming season. That is, I'm to supply the plan and the designs, and I've no doubt that she will turn those huge blue eyes in my direction with the plea to sew some of the dresses for her, too. I'm soft hearted, so I've already made one model. I'm sure Sally won't mind if I pass the design on to girl on other campuses, and to their business world sisters as well.

Simplicity is the keynote of any sound wardrobe. Frocks should be styled so that they may double up socially, that is, may be worn to a variety of affairs and also to classes. This dress is just that sort of model. It has a plain round neckline with a contrasting Peter Pan collar. The bodice is figure revealing, the sleeves moderately squared. Through the waistline sector are vertical tucks that mold the frock to the body and give it detail, too. Below the tucks in the skirt is shirring that helps lend width to the flared hemline.

The frock I made for Sally is of gray jersey, with a pale blue piqué collar. Such a scheme makes the frock wearable at all seasons of the year. Choose any silk you like and any color. The design is so simple that it makes up well in virtually any fabric.

Style No. T-8633 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 requires 3⅛ yards of 39 inch material, with ¼ yard of contrasting for the collar.

Horseradish and Cream.

Here is a new topper for cream of tomato soup—add a dash of horseradish to whipped cream and place on the soup just before it is served. The pungency of the horseradish does much for the tomato.

[Copyright: 1939: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

On the subject of women who look well in every type of dress, we recall once talking about certain women whom we called "around-the-clock charmers." We referred to women who look charming in their early morning house frock, appear at luncheons beautifully turned out, tune in at a cocktail party fresh as the proverbial daisy, and later appearing for dinner and dance, or both, a joy to the dress designer who made them what they are pictorially.

A protest came back in the next mail, with the comment that there wasn't any sech animal. No woman can look perfectly turned out the clock around, these critics insist. But we still hold that there are such women, and their secret is not hard to find, either. They're that way the clock around not so much because of the clothes they wear but because their perfect background of grooming distinguishes them in itself, likewise giving a note of distinction to anythng they put on, be it the simple, early morning garb or the evening gown.

We asked Claire Newman, talented young American designer. Said she: "Every woman wants to look glamorous. Whether she can be it all day or not is not what I want to say. I want to say, and do say, that every woman can look glamorous in the evening, and I don't care what type you produce for the test.

"Whether she's an active sports star, a helpless clinging vine, or an efficient business woman by day, when bright lights gleam every girl can become a siren that stampedes the stag line if she dresses as she should.

"For there are evening clothes that suit every type and personality perfectly, yet can create that appeal and distinction that we call glamor, for want of a better word."

The important thing to remember in selecting the clothes that will make you glamorous is to dress your age as well as your type, the young designer insists.

Qualities that are most attractive in a girl of 16, the glow of youth with all its engaging naïveté and enthusiasm, become ignorance and awkwardness if evidenced by a woman of 36 whose charms are more mature, but none the less effective.

So it behooves the young girl to wear evening clothes that bring out and play up her innate attributes of glamor. She should choose fragile but crisp mousselines, delicate laces, starched organzas, to create a picture of tenderness and innocence.

For her the new-old tight bodices with full skirts beneath them are perfect, and she should wear flowers or a ribbon in her hair, which can be long or clustered in short baby curls all over her head.

"The mature woman will be at her best in the new bustle evening gowns to be worn this coming autumn and winter," Miss Newman explained, "for these dresses combine the pencil silhouette that remains the most flattering to a sophisticated woman, with the fullness that gives dash and youthfulness and a bit of mystery.

"These new clothes are developed in rich velvets, in heavy silk-backed taffetas and failles, and they hug the contour of the figure closely through the bodice and midriff, and continue this slim line to the floor from a front view.

"But when the lady of the evening turns 'round, the subtle draping around the hips emerges in fullness that sweeps romantically behind her. Such costumes are utterly feminine, with a rare old-world charm, yet are streamlined enough to suit the most enthusiastic modern."

With these turn-of-the-century clothes that are so perfect for the woman over 25, Miss Newman suggests the hair be swept softly from the face, but clustered low on the neck with, perhaps, a jeweled pin or clip striking a dazzling note.

Another important factor in achieving glamor for the evening is to learn to wear evening gowns properly, according to this designer.

"Long skirts demand dignity and graceful motions. The brisk stride that shows trim legs off to advantage beneath a plaid sports skirts can destroy the illusion of loveliness if used in swinging an opulent velvet through a crowded restaurant.

"When wearing glamor clothes you must walk and move with long motions. There must be no nervous gestures of the hands, no chopping, mincing steps.

"Instead, a girl should seem to float, with lightness and grace."

One final word from Miss Newman is to remember your lines when you select your evening gowns. Regardless of the mode of the moment, you can find clothes that will not expose your worst features, but will cover them adequately and focus attention upon your best points.

Just because strapless gowns are being shown is no reason for buying one if your shoulders are inclined to be on the angular side. Or if the skin-tight midriffs appeal to you, still you must forgo them if subtle draping through the bodice will disguise a slight tendency to bulge in spots.

All in all, it's a simple matter of adapting the current style to your own best features in order to achieve glamor in the evening.

TWO FILM LOVELIES WHO UNDERSTAND CLOTHES APPEAL

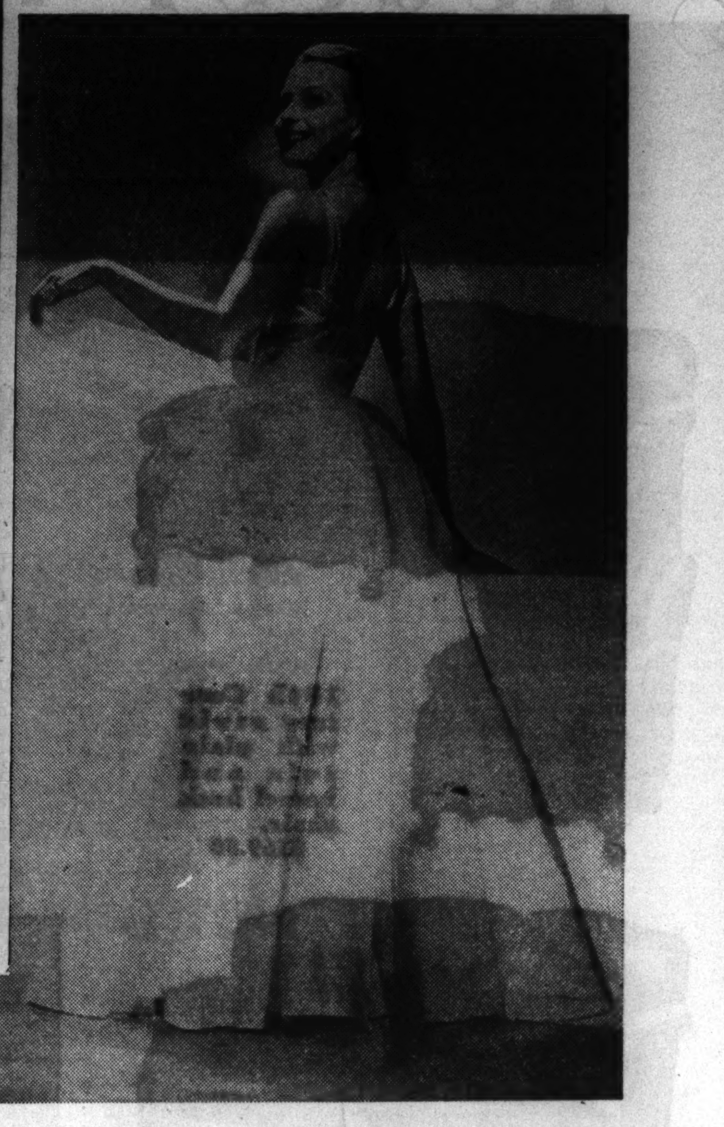
Below: Stiffened white tulle over a white taffeta slip creates evening glamor for Betty Field. This frock is from Betty's personal wardrobe and gives an excellent idea of the appeal an evening gown can impart if chosen for the wearer's type.



Crochet Purse Is Fashionably Done in Stripes

By Ellen Bruce.

Stripes are really going to go places this coming season, and will be exceptionally popular in crocheted purses. This bag, crocheted in the crazy stitch, lends itself to many types of material, such as crêpe, flat surfaced wools, carpet warp, and string. It is quick work, and is an ideal way to utilize surplus balls of yarn. With a ball of each color it is not expensive to buy enough to harmonize with any suit or dress.

For instructions in crocheting the striped purse done in the crazy stitch, No. X-309, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 5th avenue, New York City.

Book on the Art of Decoration Is Informative, Gay

"Decoration Is Fun," by Dorothy Draper [Doubleday-Doran, $2.79], is a brand new book on the intriguing subject of making your home more comfortable and beautiful, and is as gay and debonair as the bright pink striped paper which lines it. It's written by an expert and it is all done in an informal, chatty, humorous way that makes it easy to take.

Miss Draper has a bent for the dramatic, the sophisticated, and the lively in decoration. Her effects will appeal to the woman who has a champagne taste and a sarsaparilla budget. She proves that an attractive, colorful, smart interior is not so much a matter of money as of brains, and she supplies the brains.

There are chapters on backgrounds, color, fireplaces, walls and floors and what to do with them, lamps and accessories, and furniture. The book is illustrated by photographs and sketches, and there is an excellent bibliography of books, magazines, and pamphlets on the subject of interior decoration. If you are at all interested in homemaking, Miss Draper's little volume is your cup o' tea.

Mrs. W., who lives on the south side of the city, remembers a generous reader of some years ago. She again is in need of assistance and recently wrote:

"Dear Miss Brown: Some time ago, more than five years, I believe, I asked your department if you could get a bird for me.

"You did just that thing, found me a lovely singing canary. I have enjoyed him so much and have been so grateful, but now the bird is gone. He was not young at the time he was given to me, and he finally died of old age. I wonder if you could find me another, because I would be so happy to have one again, and would give it such a good home. I am 76 years old, and am living on an old age pension, so you see I cannot afford to buy another bird on my income.

"When I first received the other bird it was sick and could not sing, but with care it grew to sing beautifully and was so pretty!"

Mrs. S. presents her problems in a letter.

"Dear Miss Brown: After hearing of your kind assistance to others, I am writing to you in the hope that you may be able to help me also.

"My husband, three small children, four, six and seven years of age, and I, moved recently into our present home, an unfurnished, stove-heated flat with five rooms.

"Until last May we were on relief, and had been for some time, but my husband was fortunate in getting private employment then, and we now are self-supporting. We always had lived in three furnished rooms while receiving relief, and had no furniture of our own. However, we were anxious to provide better living conditions for our children, so decided to rent this flat and accumulate what furn'ture we could. We are grateful to friends for beds, a davenport, kitchen table, chairs, and a stove, but we still are without curtains, a rug or any other living room furniture, which would make our home cheerful and comfortable.

"I would be more than grateful for any of the above mentioned items, and my husband would gladly call for them.

"I hate to ask for any more, but he is greatly in need of a suit, size 35 or 36. He has not had one in three years and his is terribly shabby. His salary of $18 a week barely covers current bills and absolute necessities."

This family will be grateful for anything to help make their home more livable. The address is on the near north side of the city.

Surplice Top Paris Frock Combines Print and Plain

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—At any season of the year one color dresses can become pretty monotonous. They are smart, to be sure, perennially chic, but the mind grows weary of unrelieved shades. To counteract this ennui Paris designers have sponsored a new combine, a printed top with a contrasting one color skirt. Most of these are one piece dresses, and one of the loveliest is the model reproduced in our pattern today.

Sponsored by a leading couturier at the recent midseason shows, it is enjoying wide popularity among French women, and it has been broadcast that several smart American women have ordered this model for their own wardrobes. We're offering it to you in an easy to follow pattern.

The top of the original dress is of paisley printed silk of a light weight, with the skirt of beige, since that color is prominent in the print. The cross-over effect of the bodice is flattering, and the waist is built up high. While the skirt is flared, the midriff is snug as the skin.

In darker colors this design will serve well as one of the first you will wear this autumn. For immediate wear linens, wash silks, and cottons are the fabrics to be considered.

Style No. 5305 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20, and for 32, 34, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement. Size 16 requires 2¼ yards of 39 inch plain material and 1⅜ yards of 39 inch fabric for the surplice waist.

Address orders to Chicago Tribune Paris Patterns, 113 West 18th street, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred — wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

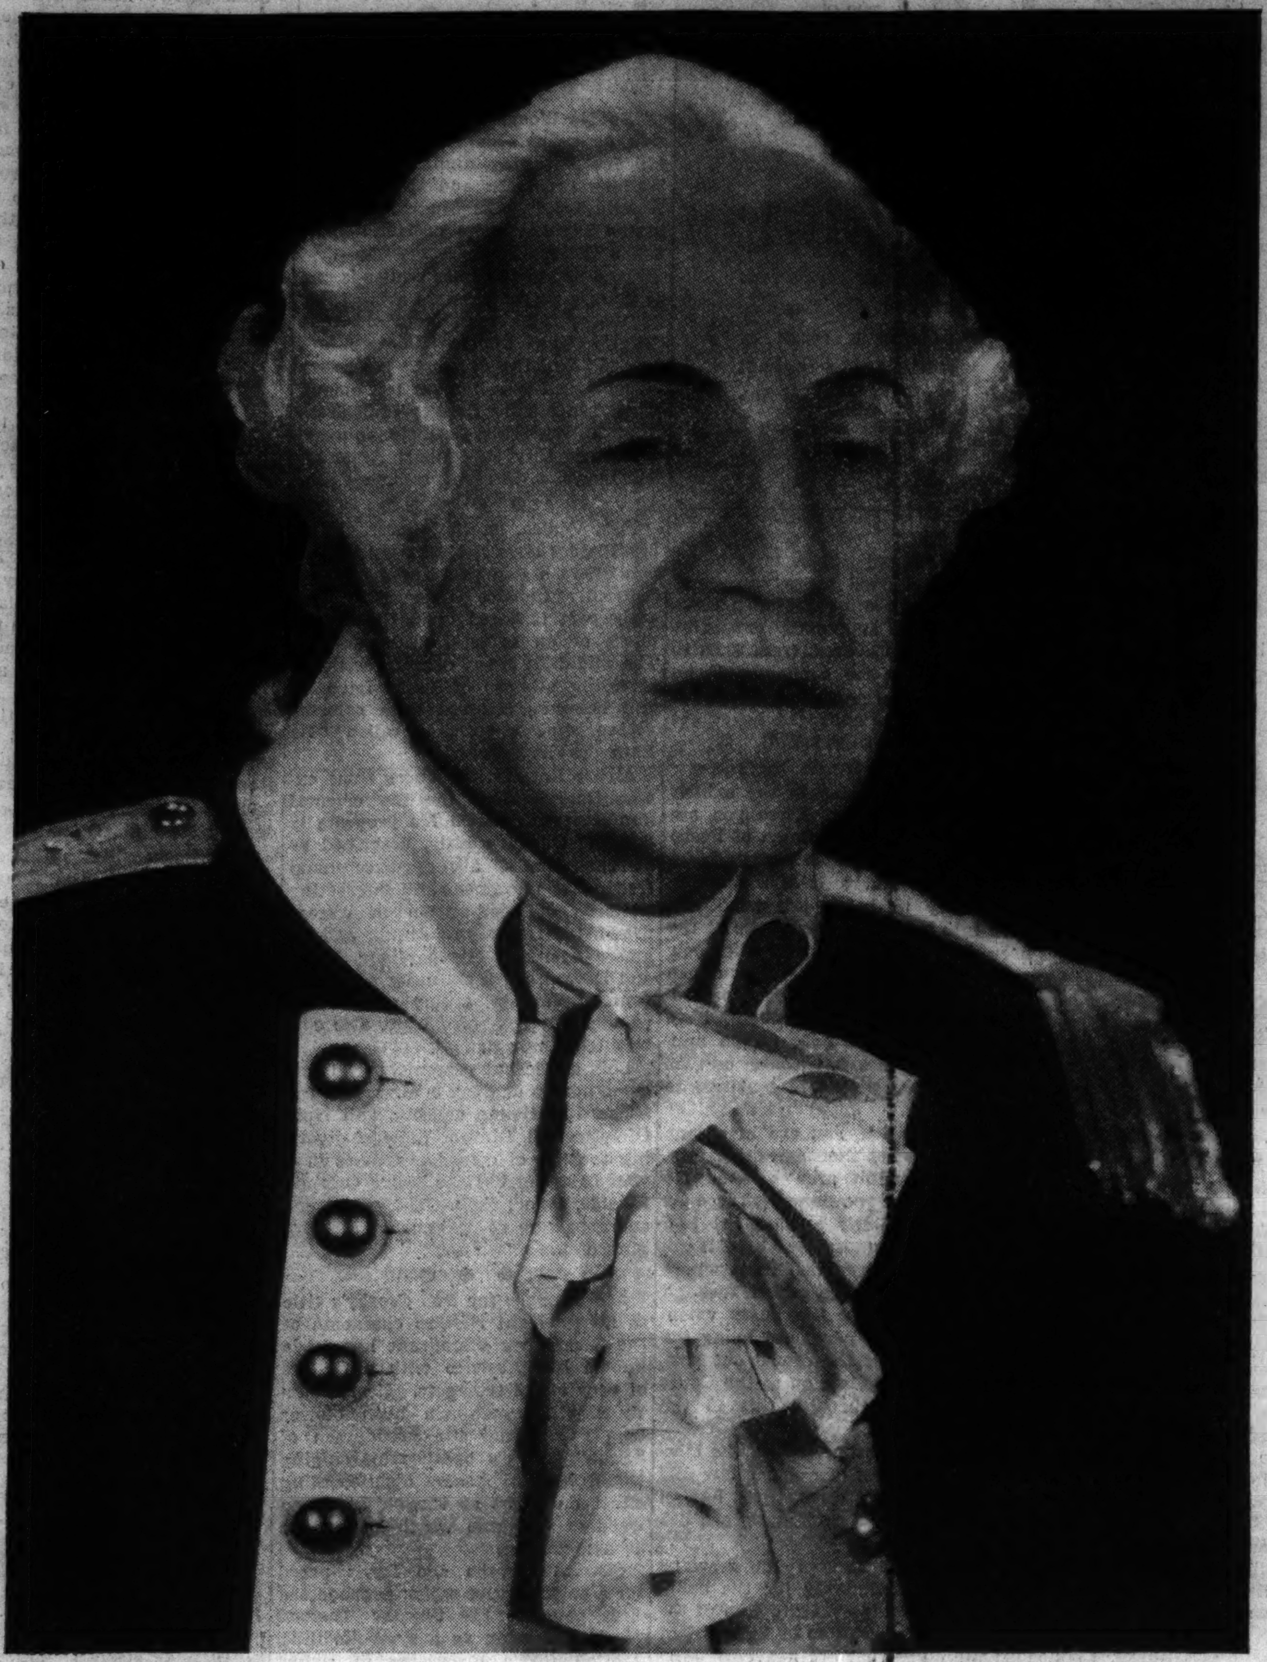
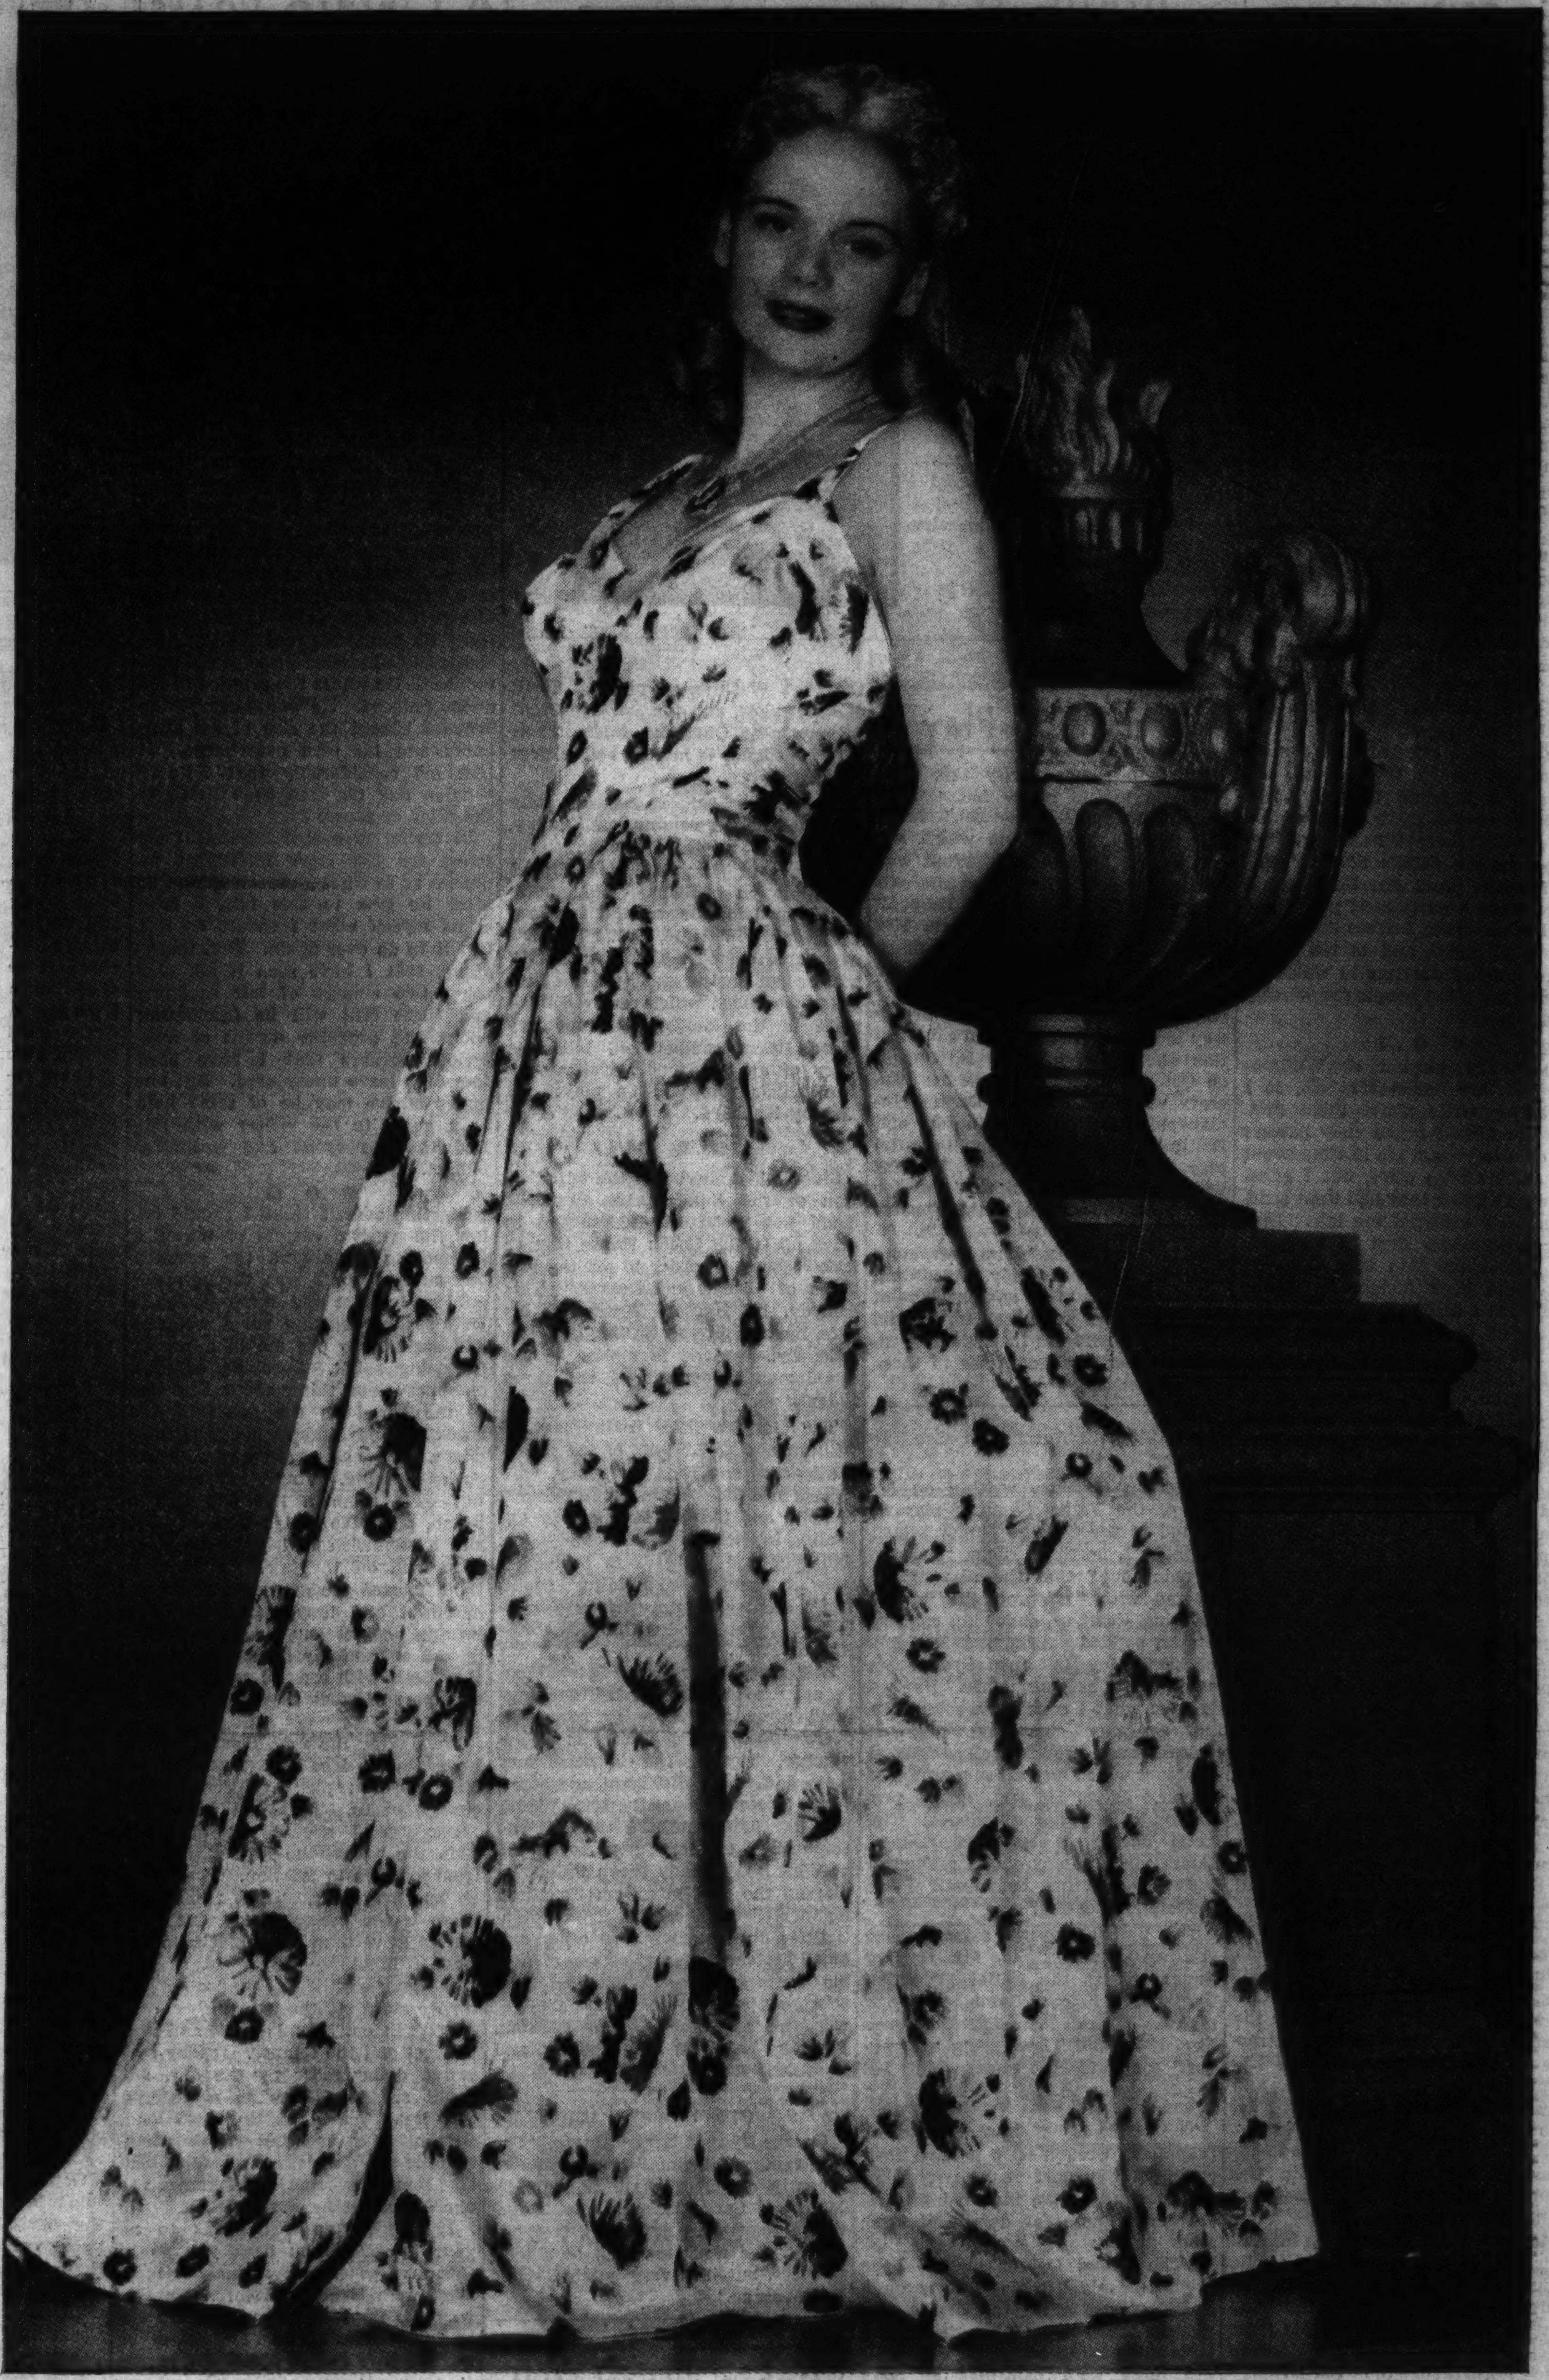
Chicago Sunday Tribune
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER
JULY 30, 1939



"Sons of Liberty," a patriotic "short" that's making the rounds of our screens, features Montagu Love looking like this.



Marie Wilson, whose forte is playing lovable nitwits, is soon to be seen in "Lighthouse Harry" with Bert Wheeler. She's also been working in "Student Nurse" with Margaret Lindsay. Busy bee!

Snug as two bugs in a rug, contented as a pair of love birds on a bough seem Wayne Morris and Jane Wyman in this scene from "The Kid from Kokomo." Also in the cast are Joan Blondell and Pat O'Brien.

Grant Park Concerts Promise Rich Rewards in August

By Edward Barry

On Tuesday the Grant park concerts will enter their second month. Through all of August and the first four days of September the Chicago park district and the Chicago Federation of Musicians will continue to bring to the lake front band shell the town's best bands and orchestras, as well as a selection of soloists of local, national, and even international reputation.

And the public, these sponsors hope, will continue to flock by the thousands and the tens of thousands to the great audience area opposite 11th street. Admission is free and there are plenty of seats—for all except gala concerts.

Speaking of gala concerts, August promises to be richer in this respect than July. Corresponding roughly to Edith Mason and Lily Pons in the first month of the season will be Maria Kurenko and Lawrence Tibbett in the second. And other names are whispered, although the sponsors of the series have not yet vouchsafed full information.

Because Mme. Kurenko's appearance is close—Wednesday of this week, in fact—it is high time for a paragraph or two regarding her. Radio listeners who remember with affection the old Atwater Kent hour, a pioneer among "classical" broadcasts, will certainly remember the Russian soprano whose artistry glorified so many of those Sunday night programs. That soprano was Maria Kurenko, then new to this country. It is she whom we are to hear at Grant park Wednesday evening.

Mme. Kurenko received her musical and general education in Moscow, then embarked on a career which carried her through many of the opera houses and concert halls of Europe and eventually to the broadcasting studios of America. Probably because her art is of the unsensational kind, little was heard of her on this side of the Atlantic until she was actually in our midst. Her activities here have consisted of radio work, concert-giving, and teaching.

Of late she has been living in Chicago, which accounts for the fact that we had two Kurenko recitals and one Kurenko operatic appearance ("The Barber of Seville") last season. All three ventures were highly successful.

Accompanied by Rico Marcelli and his symphony orchestra, Mme. Kurenko next Wednesday will offer arias from four operas—Gounod's "Faust," Mozart's "Abduction from the Seraglio," Rimsky-Korsakoff's "The Snow Maiden," and Verdi's "The Sicilian Vespers." Since this is a rather heavy diet for Grant park, and since we are confident that Mme. Kurenko will arouse a great deal of enthusiasm, we are beginning to hope now that she is preparing three or four simple songs with which to dilute this operatic fare and to satisfy the appetite which her hearers will develop.

Other important events of the Grant park week are the first 1939 lake front appearances of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. This famous organization will offer tomorrow and Tuesday the first and second programs of a series which will be resumed after the close of the Ravinia season and which will comprise a total of eight concerts. Hans Lange, associate conductor of the orchestra, will direct all the programs. It is worthy of note that when the ensemble plays in Grant park it maintains the high musical level of its Orchestra hall and Ravinia park programs. Large-scale compositions to be played on Monday (Continued on Page 3.)

Penitent Critic Apologizes for Blast at Rural Theaters

But Evinces His Joy Over Fine, Quick Response

By Cecil Smith.

On this page last Sunday there appeared an ill-natured blast at the publicity habits of the summer theaters of Wisconsin and Illinois in general, and rather unwarantedly at Chester P. Holway of Milwaukee in particular. This attack, transferred to paper at a moment when the pot of gall was evidently closer to my pen than the inkstand, was occasioned by the accusation that this department has been willfully ignoring the "straw hat" undertakings in our various vacation areas.

Actually this was no idle verbal skirmish. Rather it was an attempt to indicate that press material for the Sunday drama page ought to reach this desk by Wednesday, and that it almost never does when the summer theaters send it in.

The present week has seen a magnificent reform in this regard, for my temper tantrum has proved a beneficent boomerang. Summer theaters galore have sent in gratifyingly complete details of their current activity. And Mr. Holway and I have made a permanent peace. At least I hope so, for I wrote him promising to be nicer, and to tell about all the summer theaters in which he and so many other people are warmly interested.

The Belfry players of Williams Bay, Wis., are maddest at me, so I had better write about them first. Since the season began they haven't been able to inform me in time about their forthcoming plays, but I guess they didn't know they had been sending in their material too late. In a letter exceedingly firm in tone, Eli Popa scolds me into articulateness. A program book inclosed with the letter gives a much more inviting impression of the Belfry players than does Mr. Popa himself:

"The Belfry players present their sixth season with confidence that the theater fare of six Broadway plays which they have selected for your entertainment will prove the highest type of stage productions that can be found in any nonprofessional theater in the country. . . . Productions are presented every alternate week during the summer months in the theater, formerly a little Mormon church. The players have cleverly retained the quaint atmosphere of the original church building by keeping the pews, wiring the kerosene lamps with electricity, and leaving the old Moorish design wall paper intact. The old pulpit serves as box office in the entryway and the curtain is rung up by the tolling of the bell which used to call the good people to worship. . . . No one participating in Belfry productions receives any remuneration outside of the entertainment and educational values received."

The next production of the Belfry players, to be given nightly from Wednesday through Sunday of this week, is Dodie Smith's comedy, "Call It a Day," originally produced by the Theater Guild. The two later attractions of the summer are "The Enchanted April," Aug. 16 to 20, and "You Can't Take It with You," Aug. 30 to Sept. 3.

Farther north in Wisconsin the Peninsula players at Fish Creek are fulfilling a busy schedule, for their curriculum includes courses in dramatics in addition to a weekly public production. Their plays are given on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights. This week the bill is "Dr. Knock." Future promises include "The Return of the Barbarians" [Aug. 10-12]; a double bill of Noel Coward's "Ways and Means" [one of the "Tonight at 8:30" playlets] and Oscar Wilde's "Salome" [Aug. 17-19], and an original topical revue, "Violence Isn't Nice" [Aug. 24-26].

Considerably nearer at hand, at Lake Zurich, Ill., a group of Goodman theater players are presenting summer repertory productions each Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. The final performance of "Love from a Stranger" will be offered tonight. Next week-end they will stage Sheridan's "The Rivals." The repertory will continue with Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest," Aug. 11-13, and will wind up with Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler" Aug. 18-20. Sunday afternoon teas, at which patrons are invited to meet the players, are held each week at 3 o'clock. The managing director of the Lake Zurich playhouse is Sidney Breese.

Mary Elizabeth Aurelius is associate director.

Emerson Crocker, writing on behalf of the Valley Summer players, located at the Chicago Junior school on route 1, north of Elgin, "hastens to point out" that the players are favored with "no protecting angels hovering about us, endowing country estates, padded patron lists, or backing sufficient to hire Broadway's lesser lights as guest stars. But we do have what I consider a sound acting company comprised of well trained and professionally minded amateurs which we will surround this summer, as we did last, with a production of superior excellence. The scene design is by Bert Schneff [American Academy of Art graduate] and the directing by myself [Yale University theater]."

The Valley players' season opens this week with "Yes, My Darling Daughter" as the initial attraction Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights. "Mrs. Moonlight" follows Aug. 18-20, and "Love from a Stranger" completes the season Sept. 1-3.

The citizens of Grand Detour, Dixon, and Oregon seem to have lined up in solid support of the Grand Detour players. I am indebted to Mrs. Clarence Hough for details of their environment:

"The Grand Detour players have taken an old church and reconditioned it into a theater, giving it a modern touch by painting the walls a lapis blue, white paneled. The walls are hung with paintings by John Noff and Holden Jensen, both of Chicago. The rococo cherub suspended from the ceiling was removed as not in keeping with the modern note, but public demand forced it back into its place, where it waves a greeting to all and sundry.

"The walled-in garden with its grapevine arbor makes a charming setting for the groups from various towns to renew old acquaintance, as they sip their cooling drinks and wait for the ringing of the church bell to announce that the play is on."

The last performance of "A Doll's House" will be given this afternoon. The next bill, "Good-bye Again," will be presented Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and next Sunday afternoon.

Two theaters whose current offerings would be of public interest have not sent in information. These are the Port Washington players, north of Milwaukee, and the Portage Point players, near Onekama, Mich. Their correspondence is invited before next Wednesday.

The Coach House theater, fully identified in this column last Sunday, proceeds to its third production at Oconomowoc, Wis., this week. Under the direction of Kurt Wohlgemuth, well known for his work at the Jewish People's institute, Leslie Edgley's new farce comedy, "Wonder Child," will be put on the stage for the first time. The play, which received third prize in the Marjorie Montgomery Ward Baker competition, tells the story of an 8 year old clairvoyant. The child's rôle will be played by Tommy Hubbard.

Since I had shared in the adjudication of the Baker prize award, I could not resist the temptation to drive up to the Coach House theater last Tuesday, in order to see the première of "Ducks and Drakes." This comedy, by Herbert Agar and his wife, Eleanor Carroll Chilton of Louisville, Ky., received first prize by the unanimous agreement of the three judges.

The story, a little reminiscent of "Susan and God," tells of the machinations of one Karl Koroffsky, who chisels into the eastern country estate of John and Sylvia Montague by appealing to their impressionable young daughter and proceeds to operate a fake body-and-mind-building cult. Light stuff, but interestingly characterized and supplied with swift, amusing repartee.

Margaret Waller played Sylvia Montague, who has remarried her husband after a divorce of seventeen years. Since the character is unconvincing, because she is sometimes quite adult and intelligent and sometimes fatuously neurotic, Miss Waller had her hands full. I thought she emphasized the fraudulent touch the authors had already given Sylvia by playing the part in an emotionalized manner that reduced its comic potentialities unnecessarily. In other and much better written rôles, commendable performances—in view of the shortness of a week's rehearsals—were turned out by Norma Ransom, Florence La Cour, Don Koehler, and Tom McDermott.

In Walnut Room

Svelte artists of the dance, Consolo and Melba have returned to the Walnut room of the Bismarck hotel, where they perform to the popular music of Phil Levant and his orchestra.

Barrymore Play

Ethel Barrymore, busy this summer starring in straw hat theater presentations of "Whiteoaks," has finally chosen the play in which she will appear next season. What was rumored is now a fact—that she will be seen in "Farm of Three Echoes," by Noel Langley, an Englishman. The producer is Victor Payne-Jennings, who served in a similar capacity for "Whiteoaks." Miss Barrymore's new starring vehicle will have a pre-Broadway tour as a Theater Guild subscription offering, opening in Pittsburgh on Oct. 23. Other cities on her itinerary will be Columbus, Dayton, Indianapolis, Detroit, Washington, and Baltimore. Thanksgiving will see the play arriving on Broadway, but not necessarily as a subscription play for New York subscribers to the Theater Guild.

As in "Whiteoaks" Miss Barrymore will play a very old lady. According to one report, the authenticity of which we dare not swear to, the old lady is one who lies in her coffin, uttering unearthly prophecies to those about her.

The Canterbury Pilgrims.

George Dyson's latest cantata, "The Canterbury Pilgrims," was presented recently at Albert hall, London, by Malcolm Sargent and the Royal Choral society. According to one critic, "the work may not be a masterpiece, but it is very notably above the average."

Robin Hood Dell

The Robin Hood Dell summer concerts in Philadelphia last year were so affected financially by adverse weather that it was feared the series would be discontinued this year. However, an energetic group known as the Friends of Robin Hood Dell raised a sustaining fund, making it possible for the usual eight weeks' stretch of al fresco concerts to go on.

Having opened on June 22 the season is now in full swing. The playing ensemble is one made up primarily of the Philadelphia orchestra's members. On the list of guest conductors are Alexander Hilsberg, Erich Leinsdorf, Massimo Freccia, George Sebastian, Andre Kostelanitz, Alexander Smallens, Efrem Kurtz, Paul Whiteman, Hans Steinberg, and Sir Ernest MacMillan.

Instrumental solists, some of whom have already appeared, are Josef Hofmann, playing Beethoven's "Emperor" piano concerto; Henry Harris in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue;" Julius Katchen in Schumann's piano concerto; Hortense Monath, playing Beethoven's C minor piano concerto; Ossy Renardy, violinist; Joseph Knitzer, playing a Wieniawski violin concerto; Iso Briselli in Mendelssohn's violin concerto; Jascha Heifetz, playing both Beethoven's violin concerto and Saint-Saëns' Rondo Capriccioso, and Caspar Reardon, introducing Dana Suesse's Modern Concerto for harp.

The vocal soloists included on the series are Beal Hober and Lily Pons, sopranos; Elizabeth Wysor, contralto, and Friedrich Schorr, baritone.

Another Panther Woman

Betty Robbins, blonde singer with what is called a sweet style of swing, has joined the Berigen-Spanier "Cavalcade of Swing" in Hotel Sherman's Panther room.

Chicago Playbills

CONTINUING:

"My Dear Children," comedy by Catherine Turney and Jerry Horwin, with John Barrymore; Selwyn theater; thirteenth week. No performances on Sundays.

A Critic Tells How He Would Visit the Fair

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Going to any world's fair isn't easy. And after you get there it becomes increasingly puzzling and difficult. I don't wonder that so many worried visitors, actual and prospective, write for advice.

At the moment our own particular little show is in a ferment of price changing which adds to its mysteries. The concessionaires, it appears, are dissatisfied. There have not been enough customers. The gypping, I take it, has not been as easy as it was expected to be. And the rattier the concessionaire the louder his complaint. He hasn't anything to sell that is worth buying; so he plays martyr and complains to the directors. He wants his rent reduced. He wants the admission price at the gate reduced. He wants the salaries of his nudes reduced. He wants everything reduced except the size of his audiences and his own overcharge. It irks me considerably that Prexy Whalen and his men even listen to the likes of these.

In trying to evolve intelligent answers for the more intelligent inquiries as to what a person should do after he gets to this fair, I have asked myself what I should do if I had it to do over again. Not, understand, that I have seen it all. Another two months of fair shopping and there still will be fascinating nooks and probably dozens of mysterious corners that I have been forced to leave unexplored. But one man's advice may be of some help as a guide to the visitor with limited time to spend and a limited budget.

Starting over, I think I should follow the general custom of taking a sightseeing all around the grounds bus as soon as I was through the gate and down the ramp past the loud speaker blaring me a welcome and seeking to put me in a proper fair-going spirit. Speaking of that, one marvelous thing about this fair to me has been the spirit of the crowd. Happy, happy, happy is their chant, even when they are being pushed around. Tired they may be, but—give them a hot dog and a bench, or coffee and a bun, or beer and a sandwich and pop—up they come and off they go. Ride with them toward the subway stations at midnight and they may fall asleep leaning against you, or yawn frankly and contentedly in your face, but they do it with a smile and accept it as a part of what they expected.

Well, after the ride around, which gives you an idea of the zoning system, you can pick and choose and change buses. There's a minor extravagance I should not overlook. Ride the buses—the 10 cent buses—from location to location. The walks do not look long. "See, right over there is the perisphere!" Or: "It can be more than three blocks to the Russian building—see the star?" Or: "The man says it is just around the corner and over the bridge!"

Don't listen. Spend a dime and save the feet and the temper. It may cost you a dollar more by the day, but you'll see ten times as much and feel less cheated at the day's end. I admit that locating the bus stations is not simple, but there is usually some one handy who knows the one closest at hand.

If transportation happens to be your interest, then back you go to that area. Nearly everybody tries to start with General Motors. That is why the lines of patient waiters are so long. There doesn't seem to be anything we can do about this except to wait. With a daily fair attendance of something over a hundred thousand average, and at least half of them bent on riding through Norman Bel Geddes' Futurama, which can take care of no more than a few thousand an hour, there is certain to be a lot of waiting, even running ten hours a day at capacity. But, unless you are pressed for time, it is worth the wait.

You can, if you have to, do without a lot of information as to how they grow coffee in Brazil, or where they get crude rubber from, or how pretty girls pack cigarets and wrap sliced bacon better than you can do without this imaginative trip across the American landscape in 1960.

I think, having to start fresh, I should pick out just two or three major exhibits a day and stick to them. This dodging from one to the other and stopping curiously at every interesting item that beckons wastes a lot of time and a lot of precious energy.

While you're in the transportation area there is the tire-making exhibit that the late Harvey Firestone's handsome young men have staged. Starting with a tire at its foundation strip of rubber and going through with it until it pops out of the finishing mold a complete and handsome accessory to travel is a fine quarter hour's experience. And you come out of there plump into an electric farm that is pictorial and restful, and a concert room where there are seats and a nice musical program played against a background of cooling fountains.

In this area, too, is the Railroads on Parade item—confined now to afternoon showings, I hear—which is also worth while and filled with historical interest. All the papas who wanted to run engines like it almost as much as they do watching nervous girls try to shake off the shreds and patches the law insists they shall put on. One of the national chain restaurant services that has been wise enough not to boost its normal prices more than a nickel or a dime is housed in the Railroad building, and you'll probably be wanting a snack about this time. The frequent snack is also a great help getting around. You're going to be pretty cross if you wait for regular meal hours.

Getting out of transportation, I think, being interested, I'd try to give the Aviation building fifteen or twenty minutes. Nice to know about those Clipper ships. And then I'd take one of those caterpillar trains with the musical horns and head for Constitutional Mall and the Court of Peace.

This one costs a quarter, but it covers a lot of the exhibit area you can't otherwise reach without walking, and you can get off wherever you want to. I'd stay on the first trip until near the end of the circuit and then pick myself one of the major foreign buildings. Our own government building is a starter. Then perhaps the Russian, which is most talked of and a stunner, particularly at night; or the French, which is fascinating and offers a refreshment terrace the like of which no other government has the taste or the experience to build; or the British, which is calm, cool, conservative, historical, restful and roomy; or the Swedish, or the Swiss, or the Belgian or, in fact, any of them.

Good for a quick look-see or a long visit if personal interests are attracted. And good for a variety of food and drink around dinner time. Dinners in this supposedly expensive section, I've discovered, from $1.50 to $2.50 the plate are common. From $3.50 to $5 if you're celebrating. With Gov. Dickinson's abhorred beverages extra. And ever so plentiful.

The trick is to stay in the exhibit area through dinner. Then you are within eye-shot of the Court of Peace fountain display, which always is inspiring. Around 9 is the shooting time. Try to judge the wind and head into it so that the smoke of the fireworks and the spray will blow away from you. Unless you can wangle a table at the French or Belgian terraces, you will probably have to stand, but it is only fifteen minutes, and worth a fallen arch or two. Unless, of course, you're sensitive to fallen arches.

This over with, you are in a jam. Twenty or thirty thousand other folk, too. The exhibit area is about to close and the amusement area is about, as the boys say, to get hot. . . . And the amusement area is six or eight blocks away. This is where you'll be glad you've rested through the day by taking the buses whenever you could. Now, not being too tired, you follow the crowd out past the Russian building, on to the Court of States and through this to the amusement area.

Here, among other things, the Merrie England unit, one of the few dignified and restful concessions, has an honest show on the village green afterward.

Probably the Terrace club, a swank affair kept exclusively for the bondholders, is the top private club of the fair, but there are two or three minor private clubs that are heavenly oases if you can manage a card or an invitation. The Sulgrave club in Merrie England is one. The National Advisory club is another. The Petroleum club on top of the Petroleum building a third.

You have passed the shank of the evening now and you are in the heart of the amusement area. Here I leave you to your own devices. The best of the exhibits, from experience and hearsay, I may tell you, are the Aquacade, which still is going great guns and is really fine; the hour's version of "The Hot Mikado," with Bill Robinson, the tap dancer, which is likewise a fair hit, and no complaint; the Sun Valley exhibit, a pleasant beer garden with an ice ballet; "Little Old New York," which is loud, late, and rowdy, but at least something for the money, and the aforementioned Merrie England, with a shopping center and two or three restaurants attached.

Well, there you are, correspondents. That's the way I'd do it again.

Name and Sentence

Georgie Tapps. That is a name and a sentence, for Tapps taps at Bon Air Country club in a series of semi-classical routines that are part of the mid-summer revue.

Vaudeville

Rudy Vallee, his orchestra, and his own variety revue occupy the stage of the Chicago theater this week. Performers besides the band leader and the orchestra include the Gentlemen Songsters, Grace and Nikko, the Biltmorettes, Joan Merrill, Bob Neller, and John Gallus. "Good Girls Go to Paris," with Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondell is the current film.

Ada Leonard.

Evelyn Brent, star of the movies in an earlier day, is to be seen in person at the Oriental theater. She is assisted by Harry Fox in her act. Other features of the stage show are Rex Weber [introducer of "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime"], Block and Early, the Reddingtons, Verne Buck and the twelve dancing Sweethearts. The double bill on the screen includes "Man of Conquest," with Richard Dix, and "Bridal Suite," with Annabella and Robert Young.

The vaudeville bill at the State-Lake theater lists Ernie Stanton and Julia Curtis and their company, Elaine Arden, the Novelle Brothers and Sally, Kenny and Burke, Elaine Boyd, Al and Margie Calvin, and Dick Ware. The screen attraction is "The Gracie Allen Murder Case," starring Miss Allen.

Lunt's Plans

At least the first activities of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne for next season are now definitly known. On Oct. 9 they will open the University of Wisconsin's new theater in Madison with a performance of "The Taming of the Shrew." Before that they will present their production of the Shakespearean comedy for a week at the National theater, Washington. The stay at the university will last for three days; then the company will move to Milwaukee's Pabst theater for three more days. A week's engagement in Baltimore starting Oct. 16 brings their present plans to a close.

Fats Waller to Open Here on Saturday

"Boogie Woogie," an hilarious version of swing, makes its debut in Chicago Saturday night when Fats Waller's orchestra and the "Boogie Woogie Trio" joins Muggsy Spanier in the Panther room of Hotel Sherman's College Inn.

Piano playing Thomas Waller is one of swing's patron saints, having come up the winding road from old time "rag." The Boogie Woogies are headed by the almost legendary Meade Lux Lewis, famous for, among other things, the "Honkey Tonk Train Blues." With him is Pete Johnson of Kansas City and Albert Ammons, like Lewis, a Chicago product.

Villa Venice, on the shores of the Des Plaines river not far from Wheeling, offers a two part summer show entitled "Caprice Oriental." The early part is based upon the atmosphere of an oriental slave market. The midnight show, opening with an arresting glimpse of Betty Lavonne and her handmaidens in a colorful rococo shower bath, is called "Le Bain des Bayaderes."

Albert Bouche introduces some extraordinary talent for the oriental numbers with which his program is dotted. Chandra Kaly, described as "French Hindu," displays exceptional freedom of movement and interesting patterns of composition in dances drawn from authentic Hindu and Siamese sources. His partners, Mona and Devani, work skillfully with him. Ammon Vanessa, a tiny girl with a wonderfully controled body, also contributes Hindu dances.

Less exotic but extremely well executed adagio dancing is offered by the Richard Adrienne dancers, and Nina Olivette and Dimitri provide diverting touches of comedy. Others in a well balanced bill are Señor Orlando Ricalde, tenor; Yolla Galli, coloratura soprano, and, of course, the alluring girls of the ensemble.

A challenger for Bob Crosby's title as heavyweight rhythm champion of the Blackhawk restaurant has made known his presence with a fanfare of very sweet trumpets. He is Johnny Davis, windblown horn blower who goes under the pseudonym of "Scat," possibly because his singing would have the same disintegrating effect on a cat as the old-fashioned word of dismissal which Davis uses as a nickname.

Several months ago Davis posed for a color picture which adorned the first page of the SUNDAY TRIBUNE Graphic Section as a symbolic illustration for a discussion of swing. When he made what is really his café debut as a band leader at the Blackhawk last week Davis made good on that pose. He is a musician, as witness his sensitive trumpeting in a feature number, "And the Angels Sing." Years with Fred Waring and more recently in featured comedy rôles in the movies have given him more stage "savvy" than the average band leader.

Next to the inimitable Scat, the best show stopper at the Blackhawk is Jimmy Byrnes, the happy tapper who can get more beats into a stride than many dancers can in a routine. His dancing has a sense of humor that lifts it above mere technique. Like Jimmy, Bill Owen, the romantic tenor, is a holdover from the last Blackhawk show. Betty Van, the girl with the bashful voice, has her own specialties, and Orrin and Betty Lou do a return engagement in true jitterbug fashion.

Today is inaugural day for Davis' "Scat Club," the weekly matinée feature for Sunday steppers-out.

Music that has Latin feeling and beauty even when its theme is the Beer Barrel Polka came to the Bon Air Country club last week when Enric Madriguera and his orchestra opened what will probably be a summer-long run.

Madriguera's debut was the highlight of a midsummer revue at the suburban theater-restaurant. Headlined as the star is Benny Fields, the old pal of every one who ever met him. Benny gives the show a typical Fields-ian touch when as a finale he conjures up show closing routines in the manner of Ziegfeld, Carroll, Rose, and Cohan, only to come to the conclusion that the best way is the Fields way.

Dean Murphy, ace mimic of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, and a host of other personalities, retains the popularity he built up last winter at the Drake, in spite of being saddled with the unfamiliar rôle of emcee for the show. Mario and Florio, svelte dancers, come close to stopping the show with their dramatic and graceful routines. A touch of whimsy is provided in their revival of the Turkey Trot.

Dolly Arden opens the show with her control acrobatic dancing, assisted by the twenty Belles of Bon Air. More dancing is offered by Georgie Tapps, whose last name tells his profession. Georgie has chosen the semi-classical school of tap dancing and turns out some studied and ambitious routines.

Production numbers by the Belles include "A Pretty Girl" and the three part finale in which costumes and steps pay tribute to three famous musical show producers.

Artie Shaw will keep his date with Chicago dancers, even though he is several months late doing it. He will bring his band into the north side Aragon ballroom next Sunday for a one night stand. Scheduled to appear there in April, he was forced to cancel the engagement in favor of an appendectomy. Dick Jurgens, to all appearances the resident maestro at the Aragon, will move his orchestra down south to the Trianon, to stage a friendly battle of music with Griff Williams.

Five Concerts Remain on Ravinia Festival Schedule

Program Next Sunday to End Fourth Season

By Cecil Smith.

When Artur Rodzinski lays down his baton next Sunday afternoon after the finish of Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Spanish Caprice," another season—the fourth—of the Ravinia festival will be over. Five concerts remain to be played before then, all of them to be given by the Chicago Symphony orchestra under Dr. Rodzinski.

On Friday night Jacques Gordon, for a long period the concert master of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, will come to Ravinia to play the world première to Leo Sowerby's new violin concerto. Wanda Paul, gifted young Chicago pianist, will assist next Sunday afternoon in Szymanowski's Symphonie Concertane for piano and orchestra, a work she has twice played with great success at concerts of the Illinois Symphony orchestra. This final concert is a Slavic program, with special emphasis upon Polish music.

It is still too early to cite statistics about the summer's attendance. To the amateur observer, however, Ravinia has seemed to set a new record for day by day, regular attendance. The weather has been more beneficent than last year. Except for the first three Sunday matinées and one or two isolated evenings, the pavilion has always been well filled and the free space occupied over quite an extensive radius.

More significant, perhaps, than mere numbers is the extraordinary enthusiasm nearly every concert has evoked. I have often wished that one or two visitors from New York, who have commented to me upon the relative apathy of Chicago's musical audiences, could have witnessed the demonstration Vladimir Goldschmann received at the close of his last Saturday night concert. And on many occasions the applause and cheering have contrasted startlingly with the self-contained primness of winter listeners in Orchestra hall. Beyond all doubt the delightful natural surroundings at Ravinia break down audience inhibitions and create a wonderfully friendly sympathy between listeners and players. With more of this relaxation in the winter we should have better musical performances downtown.

The last week's programs are herewith noted in detail. Artur Rodzinski conducts them all:

Today at 4.

Overture to "Euryanthe" .... Weber
Symphony, No. 2, D major .... Brahms
Rhapsody, "España" .... Chabrier
Symphonic Poem No. 3, "Les Préludes" .... Liszt

This summer, as always, the content of the programs has been a source of infinite discussion. A large and dependable contingent comes to Ravinia to hear the orchestral staples interpreted variously by the visiting leaders, and prefers not to be disturbed by anything new. To this contingent today's matinée is heartily recommended, for there can be no argument over either the effectiveness or the usualness of any of the music listed.

Thursday at 8:30.

Three Organ Chorales .... Bach
[Orchestrated by Ottorino Respighi.]
[First time in Chicago.]
Symphony No. 1, C major .... Beethoven
Tone Poem, "Ein Heldenleben" .... Strauss

In a letter discussing program materials before the season began, Mr. Rodzinski said that he had a special desire to conduct "Ein Heldenleben" this summer. In the light of the conductor's particular interest in the work and of his superb feeling for the works of Strauss, the Thursday program looks like one of the big ones of the entire summer.

Friday at 8:30.

[Jacques Gordon, violinist.]
Overture, "Academic Festival" ..... Brahms
Symphony No. 4, G Major .... Dvorak
[First performance in Chicago.]
Concerto, G Minor, for Violin ...... Sowerby
Jacques Gordon.
[First performance in Chicago.]
Suite, Opus 19 .... Dohnanyi

Leo Sowerby, noted Chicago composer, theorist and organist, wrote his new violin sonata on commission from the Ravinia festival. When he had finished the work, he requested that Mr. Gordon be induced to play it. Thus interest in a new piece by an important local composer will share the spotlight with sentimental pleasure at Mr. Gordon's homecoming. In recent years the violinist has devoted all his time to the Gordon string quartet. In the summer the quartet, with visiting artists, gives a series of chamber concerts at a mountainside retreat near Falls Village, Conn.

The figure of Dvorak looms among the many half neglected musicians of the nineteenth century. Overshadowed by Brahms and Tschaikowsky, the Czech composer has perhaps been unduly relegated to a back shelf. Here, at length, is the only Dvorak symphony which, so far as records show, has never been publicly played in Chicago.

Saturday at 8:30.

Concerto Grosso, D minor .... Vivaldi
[Edited by Alexander Siloti.]
Symphony No. 5, E-flat major .... Sibelius
Entrance of the Gods into Valhalla, from "Das Rheingold" .... Wagner
Wotan's Farewell and Magic Fire Music, from "Die Walküre" .. Wagner
Forest Murmurs, from "Siegfried" .... Wagner
Siegfried's Rhine Journey and Siegfried's Death Music, from "Die Götterdämmerung" .... Wagner
Ride of the Valkyries, from "Die Walküre" .... Wagner

Next Sunday at 4.

[Final concert of season.]
Symphonic Poem, "The Moldau" .. Smetana
Symphonic Concertante, for Piano and Orchestra .... Szymanowski
Wanda Paul at the piano.
"Chmiel," Polish Wedding Dance . Wiechowicz
[First performance in Chicago.]
"Spanish Caprice" .... Rimsky-Korsakoff

Grant Park Soloist

The soloist at Wednesday's concert in Grant park will be Maria Kurenko, Russian coloratura soprano. She will be accompanied by Rico Marcelli and his symphony orchestra.

Current Music News

At the two free outdoor concerts to be played by the Illinois Symphony orchestra this week, Albert Goldberg will conduct and John Macdonald, bass-baritone of the Chicago City Opera company, will be soloist. On Wednesday the organization will play the fourth of its series at Washington Park amphitheater, Wilmette, and on Thursday it will repeat the program for the next to the last concert at the University of Chicago's Hutchinson court.

The program lists the following selections: Overture to Rossini's "The Barber of Seville," Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Scheherazade" suite, first and third act preludes of Wagner's "Lohengrin," and Frederick Stock's Symphonic Waltz, op. 8. Mr. Macdonald will sing arias from two Verdi operas, "Il lacerato spirito" from "Simon Boccanegra" and "Infelice" from "Ernani."

Free band concerts will be offered in three parks this week by the Chicago park district in association with the Chicago Federation of Musicians. P. A. Cavallo and his symphonic band will play in Lincoln park tonight, having the assistance of three soloists—Ilma Bayle, soprano; Leonardo Balsamo, tenor, and Vernon Gerhardt, baritone. Also playing tonight is Col. Armin F. Hand and his American Legion band, appearing in Jackson park. Guest artists there will be Rosalinda Morini, soprano; Henry Thompson, tenor; Richard Stross, cornetist; Benny Dugoll, baritone, and Edward B. Straight, drummer. On Friday Cavallo and his band move to Garfield park; this time the soloists will be Pauline Dohrn, soprano; Hazel Meisterling, contralto; Vernon Gerhardt and Desault Kirk, baritones, and John Nicastro, clarinetist. All concerts begin at 8 o'clock.

Dates for two of next fall's concerts were changed during the last week. The Woman's Symphony orchestra announced that its first concert had been shifted from Oct. 17 to the 16th, a Monday. Principal reason for the change seemed to be St. Luke's fashion show, scheduled for the 17th and the obvious destination of many Woman's Symphony boxholders. Edith Mason, soprano, and Mario Chamlee, tenor, will appear together at this first concert. While the répertoires of both singers include the same operas, and both have sung here on countless occasions, the number of performances in which they have appeared here together is small. Izler Solomon continues for a second season as regular conductor of the orchestra, and he will direct the first program. Three more concerts are on the season's schedule, these to be played on various Tuesdays. Orchestra hall will be the scene of these events.

The second change in dates was made by the Ancient Music festival, which Philip Manuel and Gavin Williamson will sponsor for the first time in Chicago next season. Last of this series of three programs has been moved from Oct. 31 to Nov. 1 to avoid a conflict with the Philadelphia orchestra. Nov. 1 being a Wednesday night there will naturally be competition at the Civic Opera house—in this instance, "La Traviata." The festival sponsors probably felt, however, that this competition is less formidable. Oddly enough, the shifting of dates eliminated another conflict for the festival, since its first concert is announced for Oct. 17. The intermediate date for the series is the 24th. Programs of the Ancient Music festival, to be held in the Goodman theater, will be devoted to works of Bach, Mozart, Rameau, Couperin, and composers of early nineteenth century London. Instruments of an old order will be played—harpsichord, spinet, organ, virginal, strings, and Muzio Clementi piano.

Avid devotees of opera will be treated to another Greek masterpiece when "Madam Peruze" is staged at the Civic Opera house on Oct. 15. They will remember that last spring, on March 26, Paul Carreri's "Marco Bozzaris" was given its Chicago première in the same auditorium under the auspices of the Hellenic Orthodox church. It was sung in Greek. The new work, bearing the subtitle "The Goddess of the Seashore," will be directed by Jean Fardulli, baritone and producer of "Marco Bozzaris."

Verdi's "Rigoletto" will be staged by the American Opera company on Sunday, Aug. 13, at Ilgair park, 6200 Touhy avenue. In the three leading rôles will be Theresa Romano as Gilda, Michael Signorelli as the duke, and Walter Blickle as Rigoletto. Eight o'clock is the time scheduled for the performance.

Scenes from Leoncavallo's short opera, "Pagliacci," will be given at Riverview park this afternoon as part of the annual summer folk festival arranged by Germania broadcast for its friends. Canio will be sung by Leonardo Amaresco, Nedda by Ria Palm, and Silvio by Carlo Hatvary. Other artists appearing during the festival will be Miga March, mezzo-soprano; Margaret Willem, soprano; Angelo Lippich, and Franzl Schoenfeld, baritone.

Two broadcasts from Berlin will be made this summer by Harriet Mason, Glencoe pianist. She went abroad last November to study after receiving a scholarship from the Alexander von Humboldt foundation of Berlin. Her first broadcast will be on Aug. 9 at 7:30 p. m., Chicago time.

Four half hour organ recitals are scheduled at the Rockefeller Memorial chapel, Woodlawn avenue and 59th street, during the week. They begin at 7 o'clock and are open to the public without charge. Edward Eigenschenk, organist of the Second Presbyterian church, will play tonight; Gilman Chase of the First Unitarian church appears on Tuesday, Knox Hill of the Highland Park Presbyterian church on Wednesday, and Frances Biery of Dayton, Ind., on Thursday.

On Bill at Ravinia

Jacques Gordon, former concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, returns on Friday night to give the first performance of Leo Sowerby's new violin concerto with that organization at Ravinia park.

Week to Bring Maria Kurenko to Grant Park

are Mozart's "Jupiter" symphony, Strauss' "Don Juan," and Rimsky-Korsakoff's Spanish Caprice. Tuesday evening not one but two symphonies adorn the program — Schubert's "Unfinished" and Brahms' Second.

Mme. Kurenko is far from being the only interesting soloist of the week. Tonight Henry Weber and the W-G-N—MBS orchestra present Eva Wachter, 15 year old Viennese pianist who was brought to the United States by Mrs. Moriz Rosenthal. This will be her first public performance in Chicago.

Henry Jackson, a pianist who once studied in Chicago and who has New York and European appearances to his credit, comes to the band shell Friday to play on the all-Russian program of the Marcelli orchestra. Saturday evening Margery Mayer, resident contralto, sings with the Chicago City Opera orchestra under Joseph Raffaelli's direction. She is the personable young singer who made a sensational debut in the spring of 1938 and who took the rôles of Mallike ["Lakmé"], Niclausse ["The Tales of Hoffman"], and the servant girl ["The Love of Three Kings"] during the Chicago City Opera company's 1938 season.

Thursday Col. Armin Hand presents two vocal and one instrumental soloist in the course of his lake front band concert.

L. S. U. Storm Recalls Words of Ex-Governor

[Dr. Evans' booklet, "Higher Education," a guide to students in selecting a college or university, may be purchased for 10 cents at Chicago Tribune Public Service offices. By mail the cost is 15 cents.]

By the Rev. John Evans.

The financial cloud, which today overshadows the administration of Louisiana State university, transiently obscures the hopes of that institution's founders so eloquently voiced by the late John M. Parker, governor of Louisiana, 1920-'24, at the dedication of the new buildings.

"In behalf of the dreamers, whose hope it is that this university will for all time be in its broadest sense American, it is my privilege to bid you a most hearty welcome," said Gov. Parker on that occasion.

"The dreamers," he said, "regard this university the best investment this state has ever made, and their sincere conviction is it will prove of untold benefit, that its diploma will represent intelligence, application, integrity, ability, and always stand as a badge of honor;

"That it will prove an eternal blessing to those earnest workers, equipping themselves for the battle of life;

"That its faculty always be of eminent standing, for Louisiana wants the best in America;

"That the administrators never yield to political pressure or religious intolerance;

"That it will never be a place for the idler, the drone, the bully, or the hoodlum; and

"That it will be always directed and governed by administrators of the highest character, free from any influence and bias."

Louisiana State university was founded in 1860 and consisted then of a huddle of buildings around the ancient Pentagon in Baton Rouge.

[The old L. S. U. pentagon was the pentagon-shaped barracks buildings that housed the cadets on the old campus in Baton Rouge. It was formerly an army reservation and has a lot of historic tradition. When the university moved to the new campus in 1925 new barracks were constructed in the shape of a pentagon to carry on the old tradition and the name retained.]

The new L. S. U. was the realization of Parker's life long dream. The capital investment is in excess of $15,000,000 and this sum was largely raised by the Severance tax, an export duty on raw material removed from the state. He watched its building, folks tell in Baton Rouge, with the eagerness of a boy.

"Won't it be great for these Louisiana young people!" he is reported to have exclaimed one day when scanning the proposed new campus. "Never got a chance to go to college myself, but they will have their chance here."

Television

When Joseph Szigeti, eminent Hungarian violinist, recently gave a performance of the Mendelssohn concerto with the British Broadcasting Corporation Television orchestra the problems of telecasting the event were greater than might at first be assumed. A discussion of the matter stated that "to most people an orchestral score of the simplest kind is apt to produce optical indigestion; when it is marked up for television the result is difficult to describe. It is not enough to give a continuous long-shot of the soloist and orchestra. The producer must aim at something like a visual exposition of the work, so the revised score marks the entry of each camera to show soloist and orchestra in turn. During important solo passages the soloist is televised in closeup; then after a 'mix' to an orchestral long-shot, the original camera may have to be moved to another part of the studio to show the entry of the brass, perhaps sixteen bars later."

New Talent Mines.

In a recent discussion of sources of new acting talent, William Morris, an agent whose business it is to know about such things, declared that small night clubs in suburban areas furnishes the best material nowadays. In former times it used to be vaudeville and burlesque, neither of which is in a flourishing condition today. Before that stock companies seemed to be the best training ground for special abilities.

Riverview Park.

A survey of ticket sales at Riverview park reveals the fact that, despite the constant influx of new and breath taking rides, the old fashioned merry-go-round continues an even, near capacity popularity. The Ferris wheels and the miniature train, also nostalgic reminders of the turn of the century, also rank high in the matter of receipts.

English Star

Good Morning!

Slapstick, of the Mack Sennett variety, is a rara avis these days. But the English must have remembered it lovingly for, in "Climbing High" they have brought it back, complete even unto squashy pies which fly through the air with the greatest of ease, propelled to their disconcerting destinations by blasts from a wind machine that has got out of control.

I have a couple of unpleasant things to say and might as well get them off the chest right at the start—for, once they HAVE been written, I expect to become most complimentary. So—

U. T. No. 1—The story is tripe.

U. T. No. 2—The dialog ISN'T funny. There! NOW—

The cast is a dandy.

Shapely, likable Jessie Matthews, acts with customary verve, and, though she only dances once—which you regret, for she certainly can dance!—keeps you interested in her from the start.

Michael ["The Lady Vanishes" and "Stolen Life"] Redgrave gives a laudably peppy performance—in a part, really most casually tailored for him. I think him too distinguished a dramatic actor to be wasted on frivolous rôles. These stars are supported by players who know their business down to the ground. And the director was clever!

The yarn reels around the adventures of a rich man and a poor girl who meet under ridiculous circumstances and, of course, fall in love. Not till the end of the picture does SHE know that she's landed a moneyed HE. . . . And by that time she doesn't care whether he's rolling in wealth or away from it. . . . Complications are many and—complicated.

Perhaps you'll laugh a lot. Probably you'll laugh some. But sho enough you'll like the players so much that you'll forgive the play's unintentional limitations.

See you tomorrow.

Whithorne Symphony.

The Second Symphony of the American composer, Emerson Whithorne, will be published by the Juilliard school of music in the near future. It was first performed by the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra under Eugene Goossens in 1937.

Surry Players

Four plays will be presented by the Surry Players in its third season at their theater in Surry, Me.: "Art and Mrs. Bottle," by Benn Levy; "Arms and the Man," by George Bernard Shaw; "Three Sisters," by Anton Chekhoff, and "Grass Is Always Greener," by Robert Pirosh. This last is a new play, a "gentle comedy" of a modern New York family and an actress who suddenly achieves success. The summer season lasts from Aug. 1 to 26.

The group of actors who call themselves the Surry Players have a certain distinction among summer theatrical companies. The theater is owned and operated by the actors and director, and the acting company is more or less permanent, playing in Maine during the summer and on Broadway in the winter. In the list of company members are many who have won considerable fame in other New York productions than their own: Anne Revere, Katherine Emery, Shepperd Strudwick, Robert Allen, John Boruff, Helen Wynn, Barbara Dale, Carl Gose, Jabez Gray, Dorothy Mathews, Tom Speidel, and Joseph Wiseman. The technical staf consists of Samuel Rosen, director; Johannes Larsen, scene designer; Jules Bricken, production manager; Lydia Furbush, costume designer, and Mariam Siwek, dance director.

RECKLESS ANGEL

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

A Conversation in the Park, a Meeting with a Woman She Hates, and a Chance Remark Prompt Angel to Write a Letter

THE STORY TO DATE

● Angela Tindall, penniless young aristocrat, has been given the nickname Reckless Angel because of her daring pranks. Ned Carvill, society jewel thief, is in love with her and hopes to marry her and make her an accomplice in the robberies he and his half-brother, George Adair, plan. But Angela is in love with Lord Bridlington, who also loves her but feels honor bound to the ageing Mrs. Woolryche, an attachment formed in his youth.

INSTALMENT II.

(Copyright: 1939: Marie Belloc Lowndes.)

THE car slowed down.

"What was it Gerald Bartram called you? I mean as you left the party?" As Angel did not answer: "Was it Reckless Angel?" Lord Bridlington asked.

"Yes."

"What an impudent puppy young Bartram is! How dared he call you that?" And there was anger, contempt, and though he did not know it, jealousy, in his vibrant voice.

She felt stung. "All the same, Brid, I am reckless. It's no good pretending I'm not."

Had he heard of her latest act of folly? Had he? Had he? A tremor ran through her. If he hadn't heard of the affair, she must tell him about it.

He slowed down, turned round, and their eyes met. God, what exquisite eyes she had! Such honest, guileless eyes, too.

"But why should you be reckless, my dear?" He seldom called her "my dear." It meant a good deal from him.

"I wish I knew, Brid. But I don't."

Did he know of her last piece of folly? His face was set in stern lines, so perhaps he did.

"Anywhere you like."

"How about Richmond park?"

"That would be very nice."

Always she agreed to anything he wanted to do, though each of them was unaware of it.

It seemed a long time to them both before they swung through the gates at the top of Richmond hill and found themselves in the now solitary green wilderness where Henry the Eighth once hunted the deer.

Lord Bridlington ran the car up a grass path and stopped it close to a spreading oak tree.

"We might sit down over there for a bit. It seems ages since we had a talk," and his voice shook. As he held out his hand to help the girl out of the car he would have given years of his life to have taken her in his arms.

He spread the car rug on the short turf beneath the branches and, after they had sat down, he asked in a would-be easy tone, "What have you been doing while I've been away?"

He was not thinking of anything as he asked the question, anything, that is, apart from the wonderful fact that he and Angel were alone together—alone as they had never been alone. He tried to forget that he would have to tell her before he drove her back to London that though he loved her with all his soul, he belonged to another woman and also that a most inconvenient possession, his conscience, would not allow him to go on being friends with a girl to whom his friendship could bring nothing good.

Angel clasped her two hands round her knees.

"While you were away, Brid, I got into an awful scrape," she said in a hard voice. "You'll soon hear all about it, and a lot about it that isn't true."

"You mean Angus Tarr's idiotic joke?"

He sensed the immediate relief in her voice as she answered, "Then you have heard about it?"

"My mother told me."

HIS voice was cold, for he was recalling with a wretched feeling of pain the odious way in which the girl now sitting by him had been described. Also he felt disgusted, and shocked, too, at the thought of that silly business.

"I wonder why Tarr picked you out to play the part of the cannibal queen? It was a caddish thing to do."

"It was my fault, I begged him to let me do it."

There followed a long, to her an agonizing, silence.

In the gathering twilight he turned and saw Angel's delicate profile silhouetted against the low branches of the oak tree. She was staring straight before her and he could not see the expression of her face.

"Well," he exclaimed at last, "that's that! We must hope that soon every one will forget all about it."

She knew she would never forget either the adventure itself or the days of suspense she had just gone through. Still, she rebelliously reminded herself that what she had done was regarded by all her other friends with admiration and even envy. Why should Brid treat her like a naughty child who has done something which has to be lived down and forgiven? Also, it hadn't been her fault that Gerald Bartram had nicknamed her Reckless Angel.

All at once the man who had so hurt her asked a joking question. "A penny for your thoughts, Angel?"

She turned her head around and he told himself that her eyes, those strangely colored eyes, unlike those of any woman he had ever seen, shone, tonight, like stars.

He had moved a little nearer to her and she thought there was a mocking expression on his face. As a matter of fact he was inwardly shaking with emotion, hardly knowing what he was saying.

"I have been thinking," she said deliberately, "that you and I are so different, Brid, that we couldn't go on being friends. You disapprove of everything I do, don't you? In fact, I sometimes wonder you can bring yourself to speak to me."

She rose, graceful and light on her feet as one of the fawns sleeping near them in the bracken, and began walking swiftly away, hardly knowing where she was going, though vaguely aware that it was toward a gate which was not far away.

Yet already she was repenting bitterly of what she had just said. What if Brid took her at her word? She knew that he had become, and she was afraid he would remain, everything to her. But she was convinced that though he had become very fond of her, the woman who mattered in his life was Mrs. Woolryche.

Suddenly she heard him close behind her and turning she faced him in the gathering twilight.

TRYING to speak naturally, she exclaimed: "I've gone through some appalling hours during the last two or three days, and of course I had to pretend I didn't care! So you must forgive my being cross and disagreeable. I can't help it."

He took her hand. It lay confidingly in his. The touch of that hand set him on fire.

"Angel?" he said hoarsely.

"Yes, Brid."

"Of course you know by now that I love you—desperately."

And then she was in his arms, and he felt her coming to him. There was nothing mean or calculating in Angel Tindall's strong and reckless nature. She loved this man who was in so many ways the opposite of herself and she would have scorned to hide her love, now that she knew he hungered for her as she did for him. And yet he was very gentle with her and, though she could not have put what she felt into words, she felt he loved her as men are believed, now, not to love the woman they desire, that is with a pure, exalted passion.

In the last three years many men had been violently attracted to Angel Tindall, including several, as she was well aware, whose intentions were strictly dishonorable. She had also had three offers of marriage. But not one of these would-be lovers or husbands had inspired her with anything but shrinking physical distaste. Never could she have let any of them kiss her.

At last he released her, and with a groan which frightened her, he muttered, "I'm a brute and a cad, my darling. I've no right to let you know I love you."

And then he saw that her eyes, her lips, were again beckoning, and again, each of them filled with solemn ecstasy, they kissed.

She spoke, now. Stepping back two paces she said firmly, "It would have been extremely cruel not to tell me, Brid."

He was astonished both by what she said and at the way in which she said it. There was something hard, positive, and pathetically sincere in the way she made that statement. Could this be the same ardent young creature who had just shared his ecstasy of bliss?

She went on, but this time her voice faltered: "It's a dreadful thing for a girl to care for a man and remain in doubt as to whether he cares for her. Some people think that funny, but I always feel fearfully sorry, and——"

"Yes?" he tried to take her again in his arms, but she eluded his embrace as she went on slowly: "I used to be so sorry for myself when I knew that I loved you, Brid, and believed that you only liked me. But now I'll never be sorry again whatever happens."

He took her hand and they walked back to the place under the oak tree and sat down again, this time very close together.

"And I've got something to tell you, something to confess, Angel."

"Don't tell me, if you would rather not. It's your love that matters to me, Brid. Nothing else matters."

"I must tell you," he said hoarsely, "though I can't expect you to understand."

"I think I shall understand," and she squeezed his hand nervously.

He said slowly, "Though I love you with all my heart and would give years of my life to make you my wife, I can never marry you."

She said, "I have never even thought of it."

"Since the day I first met you I have thought of nothing else."

He stared out into the darkness as he went on: "Ever since I was grown up a woman has cared for me and given up her life to me. It all began sixteen years ago. She had parted from her husband who was, and is, to all intents and purposes, insane.

"Though she was beautiful, she had never looked at any other man till she met me, and we have been absolutely faithful to one another. That was the only promise she exacted from me and till I met you I kept that promise. I also swore that I would never marry as long as she lived. If her husband were to die tomorrow I should feel bound in honor to make her my wife. That's why I ought not to let you know I love you, and why——"

Angel crept closer to him. She thrust her hand through his arm and knew that he was now shaking as if with the ague.

"—— I must give up seeing you."

Then it was as if he made a great effort over himself. "You are very young, my darling, and some day you may thank God that we parted. Though I'm a selfish chap, and nothing to boast about, I'm not going to wreck your life."

She nearly said, "It's wrecked already," but she loved him far too deeply to add to his misery. So, "I'll do whatever you wish, Brid," was all she said.

"Wish? It's what I'm bound in honor to do, not only for her, but for you."

"Till you met me, did you still love her?"

It was the only question Angel did ask of the man she loved during that strange conversation and she felt ashamed of asking it, but she was torn with a passion of anguished jealousy.

He answered truly: "I fell madly in love with her when I was 19. I was badly wounded in March, 1918, and she was my nurse in France. But—" he hesitated.

"Yes, Brid?"

"I never loved her at any time as I love you now. What I felt then was a boy's love, and for many years my feeling for her was just that. I love you, Angel, as a man loves the girl he feels to be his mate. I can't explain. I can only say it's utterly different."

He stopped and then he asked a question in his turn, "Did you ever meet her?"

"I've met her twice. But I didn't know you then. She is a friend of Aunt Julia."

He winced inwardly. "She's much younger than Lady Julia."

Had she not been so near to tears Angel would have laughed. "Why, of course she is!" she said quickly.

He went on resolutely, "I know she cares for me as much as she ever did, and I despise myself for not having been to see her today."

Poor Angel! She was punished, now, for her unwise question. Then came a measure of consolation.

"I could not have gone from her to you," his voice sank. "And I had to see you, or go mad."

It was not so very late when they got back into London. But late enough for him to slow down in the ill-lit square, in front of that home of Victorian love and prudery, Buckingham palace. There they kissed again, solemnly. It was for the last time.

When they reached Queen's Close he of course jumped out of the car. As they stood by the narrow door of the place she called "home," he did not say as he had almost always said as they bade each other a friendly good night, "What are you going to do tomorrow?" He only kissed her hand.

AND then Angel, for the first time in her life, stumbled up the steep staircase, crying. She stifled her sobs, though she knew that Lucy Morton slept like a top.

By the bed, which in the daytime was a divan and which at night was made up comfortably by Lucy for her, was a plateful of dainty sandwiches, and a note.

"I think there's a good job in prospect for you, dear. A lady wants a social secretary and she will pay six pounds a week. She wouldn't give her name over the phone, but she will be here tomorrow at 12:30 to give you a look over. Good night, pet. Sleep well."

Angel tossed about all night, crying out inwardly against what seemed to her an incredible, as well as an intolerable, fate.

A fearful tide of hatred and of scorn welled up in Angel's heart against the other woman. She remembered old Lady Julia, who was a plain spoken Victorian, describing Toria Woolryche by the horrid term of "chicken butcher." Yes, that was what she had been when she had got hold of a boy, fifteen years younger than herself, who was to become, two years later, one of the richest men in the country.

She had been comparatively poor at that time, living on an alimony provided by an eccentric husband who would not hear of a divorce. But for years, now, she had had everything money could provide in the way of jewels, clothes, and the innumerable luxuries of modern life.

Toward morning she drifted into a troubled sleep, to be roused at ten o'clock by her housemate, Lucy.

"I've never known you as late as this. But here is a cup of tea, and I've drawn your bath. I'll make your bed and the room shipshape, while you take your bath. Then I must scurry, scurry, scurry. Lady B. was in a bad temper yesterday, but as I stayed on fearfully late she said it would be all right if I came at eleven. No one who matters ever comes in on a Saturday morning."

Lucy was the Martha of this establishment. It was she who woke early, took in the milk and the papers, and did what housework had to be done before she started out for her wearying, thankless job.

Angel got up and dressed. The one bright spot in her present dark life was the knowledge that she had some well paid work in prospect. Not only did she need the money desperately, but idleness did not suit her. It always made her feel restless, and ready to embark on some crazy adventure.

All the same, as she lived among the kind of men and girls where no one was ever on time, she was surprised, as well as glad, when she heard at twelve-thirty to the minute, a car sweep down Queen's Close and stop before the narrow open door from whence a ladder-like staircase led to the three-room apartment she shared with Lucy Morton.

She rushed to the window, and looked out. Below was a magnificent Trianon, in fact the latest model, and she hoped Ned Carvill had sold it to its new owner.

The door of the car was opened slight touch of disappointment, for by the chauffeur, and she felt a it was not a woman, it was a handsome slender youth, who stepped through it. But at once he turned round, held out his hand, and a woman appeared. Angel heard a clear, rather mincing voice observe: "I don't suppose I shall be long, Carlo. So don't go wandering off as is your way. Just you wait for me here."

All that Angel could see of the speaker was a smart little hat. But she was obviously the lady seeking a social secretary, and perhaps the wandering Carlo was her son.

The stranger walked slowly up the steep stairs. There followed a moment of hesitation, and then rat-tat-tat on the miniature knocker.

Angel opened the door which led into a tiny lobby. She turned on the light, and then, when she saw who was standing there before her, she gave an inward gasp of amazement and anger.

Was it because she had done little else but think of her rival all night that made her see Toria Woolryche in the woman before her? But the answer to that unspoken question needed only a second glance. It certainly was Mrs. Woolryche who stood blinking at her, bewildered by the change from bright sunlight to the dark staircase, and after that by the sudden glare caused by the electric pendant in the tiny lobby.

"I've come to see Miss Tindall. I have an appointment with her. It is here, isn't it?"

"Yes, I am Angela Tindall."

The sight of this woman who, after ruining the life of the man she loved, was ruining her own life, had an indescribable effect on Angel. Never before had she felt for any human being the violent surge of hatred she felt now. She knew, too, that Mrs. Woolryche must have made her mysterious appointment simply in order to see the girl with whom gossip was linking the name of the man she had now regarded for fifteen years as being completely her property.

With fierce rage Angel asked herself, "How dare she come here—how dare she?" But she forced herself to say, "Do come in," and led the way into her bed-sitting-room.

As the visitor sat down on a high Regency chair, she observed, "I thought it better we should meet informally before I engage you, Miss Tindall. But I have a thousand things to do before lunch, so I can't stay long."

She was speaking in a mechanical way, for she naturally had no intention of engaging the girl she had been told had attracted Lord Bridlington's fancy. But she had had a burning desire to see Angel, and was not averse, if she got the chance to do so, to ask a question or two concerning the now famous joke played on the admiralty.

Angel, meanwhile, remained silent. She felt as if in the presence of a noxious viper.

Mrs. Woolryche went on in a fretful tone: "I should hate to live in a room as dark as this. It must be so bad for your eyes."

"My friend and I are very little indoors during the day."

"So I have heard from your great aunt, Lady Julia. I know you belong to a very gay young set, Miss Tindall. It must be a very tiring life that you all lead."

"It doesn't tire people who have the luck to be still young," and she tried, and succeeded, in making her voice sound indifferent.

"You must be very brave. But I suppose even you felt a little frightened when you boarded the Butterfly?"

"I wasn't a bit frightened!" cried the girl defiantly, and something in the way she answered the half-question made even Mrs. Woolryche feel she had better say nothing more on that subject.

The visitor rose from her chair and said in a fretful voice: "Do come over to the window, Miss Tindall. I don't feel as if I'd really seen you yet."

ANGEL leapt up from the low couch and almost ran into the light. When close to the little square window, the two rivals faced one another.

Mrs. Woolryche was what some of her friends called a "has been." Once exquisitely pretty, of the pocket Venus type, her days of glory had been just before the war. She had always been a man's woman, having very little use for members of her own sex. True to type, she believed herself to be still in every way as attractive and as alluring as she had been when she had first charmed the eyes, and inflamed the senses, of the nineteen-year-old peer.

Astonishing indeed was the contrast, now, between herself and the girl she had come to see. Almost everything about the older woman was artificial. Her hair was tinted, her eyebrows and lashes darkened, and she was skilfully made up in the old-fashioned and wiser way which emulates nature.

Meanwhile, Angel was telling herself that in the evening Mrs. Woolryche must still appear very alluring, and she felt a hideous stab of jealous pain. Did Brid's strained sense of honor still cause him to feel he must play the lover to this woman? Almost certainly the answer to that anguished question must be "yes."

Like most modern girls, this girl believed she knew everything about sex, and she would have been astounded to learn the part imagination and nerves play in the love-life of a civilized man. It had become impossible for Lord Bridlington to go on being what he had been so long to Mrs. Woolryche, and very bitterly did she resent a fact known only to the two concerned.

For a whole minute, but it seemed longer than that, Angel and the older woman looked at one another as if measuring words, then in a pleasanter tone than she had yet used, the visitor said regretfully: "I am afraid you wouldn't really suit me, Miss Tindall. I should always feel that you were longing to get away, for I know how tremendously popular you are among the younger set."

There came the quick click of a latchkey, and Lucy Morton walked in. For a moment she saw only Angel, and she called out: "That old Persian prince is really a wonder, darling. You must go to him! He is far more than a fortune-teller. Lady B. says he is a very powerful medium, and can make the dead come back and talk in their natural voices—"

Then suddenly she realized there was someone else there, and that it was obviously the lady who required a social secretary.

Mrs. Woolryche was thankful for the interruption, though she was glad she had come to Queen's Close, for Angel Tindall was entirely different from what she had expected. She had thought to see a little fluffy, mindless girl. This pale, now sad-looking and, from her point of view, far from pretty young creature made her feel quite reassured as regarded Lord Bridlington. On the other hand, there was something forbidding, and frighteningly determined, in Angel's expression.

Glancing at the newcomer, she asked herself whether her fastidious Brid had ever seen this beautiful creature? If yes, how strange that he should ever have given a thought to her friend! But perhaps he hadn't given Angel a thought? "Women are so spiteful," she said to herself, "and tell such lies."

WITH real warmth in her voice she exclaimed: "You must be Lucy Morton, and I am Torie Woolryche! I've known your people all my life, and I've always meant to order something from Lady Belinda Sharp just because I heard you were a mannequin there. I hope you get a commission from everything you sell?" Before Lucy could answer, she went on, "What was it you were saying just now about that Persian prince? Is he really good?"

"He's more than good! He's wonderful—" cried Lucy enthusiastically. "Lady Belinda has got an extra room we don't use, and she rents it to him. Quite a lot of our customers, after they've been fitted, go in there and consult him." She opened her pocketbook, "He has given me some of his cards, and there's a fifty per cent reduction on any one who goes to him through me. May I give you one? It means that you'll pay one pound, instead of two."

"All right, give me one of his cards." And then she added, in a patronizing tone, "I hope you get something out of it?"

"Not a cent!" cried Lucy.

She was trying to remember what she had heard lately about this Mrs. Woolryche. She had certainly heard something curious about her, during the last few days.

Meanwhile Angel, avoiding shaking hands with her visitor, had taken her to the door. There the girl stayed, listening to the high-heeled shoes tapping their way cautiously down the steep stairs. "She walks like an old woman already," she said bitterly to herself.

There came the sound of a car drawing up before their door, and Lucy, going across to the window, looked down into the mews. "What a gorgeous car!" Then she turned round. "I remember now what it was I heard about Mrs. Woolryche, Angel. She's got a gigolo. That good-looking lad must be he. Fancy taking him about like that. I expect you'll see a lot of him."

"I'm not going to her. She doesn't want me, and I'd rather sell newspapers in the street than work for her! But I don't understand what you mean, Lucy—I mean about a gigolo?"

"Lady Diana Flint and Joan Fletcher were talking about Mrs. Woolryche at our Sports Clothes Show. They said that she has an enormously rich lover, who is now on an air trip to Africa. As soon as he was well away she went to Monte Carlo, and while there she fell crazily in love with a young Italian."

"His name is Carlo!" exclaimed Angel with an angry laugh. "I heard her call him that."

"She brought him back with her," went on Lucy, "and wants to get him some sort of job in London. He is always dancing attendance on her, and they were wondering if her steady will stand for it."

Angel flung herself on the couch which was her bed at night.

Lucy sat down by her. "You look awfully bad, Angel. Were you really counting on this job? I'd hate to work with such a woman as that."

"I'm not a bit disappointed about her. I thought her loathsome. All the same, I've had a frightful letter from my bank, and I do feel bothered." She went on, in a stifled voice, "This business of the Butterfly jaunt has done me no good—from the point of view of a job, I mean."

"If I were you," said Lucy earnestly, "I'd consult my Persian prince. I really would. I can easily get him to see you for nothing." Then she added: "He likes me quite a lot. If you like, I'll take you there this afternoon." She dialed a number, then called out: "I'm Lucy Morton, and I'm bringing a friend of mine this afternoon, your highness. She's longing to consult you."

LUCY went out to lunch that day, and as soon as she had gone Angel leapt off the couch and went across to a cupboard where was her typewriter.

Her typing was bad. It had been one of the things she had been made to do during the German year she so hated to remember. She never mentioned it as among her accomplishments when looking for a job. But now she locked the door, a thing she very seldom had done since she and Lucy had come to live in this queer little place. Then she put a sheet of plain paper into the machine and waited for a few moments, thinking over what she should say in the first anonymous letter she had ever thought of writing.

This is what she typed:

"Mrs. Woolryche is warned to give up the man she believes still loves her while there is still time. He has fallen in love with a girl, and his love is returned."

Angel waited a moment. She felt ashamed of what she was doing, but it was as if there had entered into her a wild and reckless demon who was urging her to do this useless, foolish thing. So she typed on:

"If Mrs. Woolryche gives him up she will live to be glad, not sorry. But if she disregards this warning, he himself will give her up, as soon as he learns of her infatuation for Carlo, the gigolo."

If she had been what was called reckless, in her happy, care-free days, she knew that now there was nothing she would hesitate to do that might free her lover from his galling chains. But would the few lines she had just typed have any effect on the vain, stupid woman who only lived to exploit her femininity? Reason whispered that no, those lines of warning would effect nothing. All the same it was worth a trial.

"I've got something to tell you. Something to confess, Angel."

Today is not the day to attempt to settle disputes or to air the feelings; be cool mentally and emotionally. The week ahead has many opportunities for progress in ways that can be made very important in the future.

Scientific Progress

Physical science and astrological science are coming closer and closer together every day. Thinkers everywhere are arriving at conclusions that show influences on man from the universe around him. Even some who have not particularly desired to think along such lines are being forced by their observations and experiments to such conclusions. It is a great advance in practical science.

Winter Opera Is in Full Swing in Buenos Aires

The winter season of opera at Buenos Aires' Colón theater, the most important opera house in South America, is now in full swing. Two noteworthy novelties are being added to the répertoire—Ettore Panizza's "Bizancio" and "Las Virgenes del Sol," by Alfredo Schiuma, an Argentinian. Revivals also come in a pair—Rossini's "Cenerentola," last seen in Buenos Aires in 1826, and Verdi's "Macbeth," absent from the répertoire for several years. The regular list of operas includes "Norma," "Otello," "Aïda," "Turandot," "La Bohême," "La Traviata," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Die Walküre," "Mignon," "La Damnation de Faust," "Elektra," "Tristan and Isolde," "Die Götterdämmerung," and "Carmen." Johann Strauss' light opera "Der Zigeunerbaron" is being given its first performance at the Colón theater.

Nine ballets will be performed under the direction of Margarete Wallmann; "Don Giovanni" by Gluck, "Daphnis and Chloé" by Ravel, "Antiche Danze ed Arie" by Respighi, "The Legend of Joseph" by Strauss, "Oriane et le Prince de l'Amour" by Florent Schmitt, "La Boutique Fantasque" by Rossini and Respighi, "Georgia" by José Maria Castro, "Panambi" by Alberto E. Ginastera, and "Cuento de Abril" by Arnaldo D'Esposito.

Once again the general director of the opera season is Floro M. Ugarte. The conductors number three—Erich Kleiber, Ferrucio Calusio, and Ettore Panizza. [Panizza, although an Italian, was born in Buenos Aires. He has had, besides "Bizancio," two other operas premièred in that city.] Scenery is under the direction of Pio Collivadino and Dante Ortolani, while the régisseurs are Carlo Piccinato, Otto Erhart, and Josef Gielen.

Among the long list of singers are several known in this country: Rose Pauly, Gina Cigna, Maria Reining, Risé Stevens, Bidu Sayao, Edith Fleischer, Hilde Reggiani, Franca Somigli, Giacomo Lauri-Volpi, Herbert Janssen, Emanuel List, and Bruno Landi.

"La Serenade"

The final concert for last season of "La Sérénade," an organization devoted to the presentation of modern music, offered three world premières at the Salle Gaveau in Paris. These were Francis Poulenc's Concerto for organ, strings and kettledrums; Darius Milhaud's "Cantate de l'Enfant et de la Mère," and Vittorio Rieti's "Concerto du Loup." All three works were completed in 1938. Of them Poulenc's concerto received the most praise. Milhaud's "cantata" was described as a recitation to music of twelve poems by Maurice Carême, Rieto's piece derives its name not from a wolf but from a river of that name near the Maritime Alps where the concerto was composed.

Melancholy Days Near; Social Activities to Hit a New Low

By Judith Cass

When August rolls around it usually brings with it the ebb tide of summer activities. Indications are that in the next four weeks the season will hit a new low. The month-long racing meet at Arlington Park came to a close yesterday, and the concert season at Ravinia park will end next Sunday.

August is the month that most families choose to spend out of town. Those who remain behind are content to relax, preparing for the whirl of debuts, weddings, and benefits that September will bring.

With the Ravinia season over, there will be few engagements to mar the blank whiteness of engagement pads. Gardening enthusiasts have Friday afternoon of this week circled, however, for the Barrington Garden club is giving a party that day. A drive to Oconomowoc lake, Wisconsin, will be worth while on Thursday or Friday, when Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine's famed home, Danforth Lodge, will be opened for a sale of goods from the Woman's Exchange of Chicago.

Called an "open homes and garden day," the Barrington party will be a repetition of ones the club has had in the past. The places that will be on view have not all previously been opened, however; so persons who have enjoyed a Barrington tour in previous summers will have a new itinerary.

Tickets to the tour, starting at 2 o'clock, may be obtained at any of the gardens listed or at the Pure Oil station in Barrington. The price, $1, includes tea, to be served at Mrs. Edward K. Hardy's French provincial home on top of one of Barrington's hills.

The houses to be opened are Out o' Bounds Hill, Seldon White's home; Valley View, Mrs. William D. Horne Jr.'s modern architecture house; Wakefield Farm, the George Van Hagens' home; Harper's Weekly, Mrs. Paul Harper's week-end house, and The Oldfields, Mrs. Harold Cheney's remodeled farmhouse.

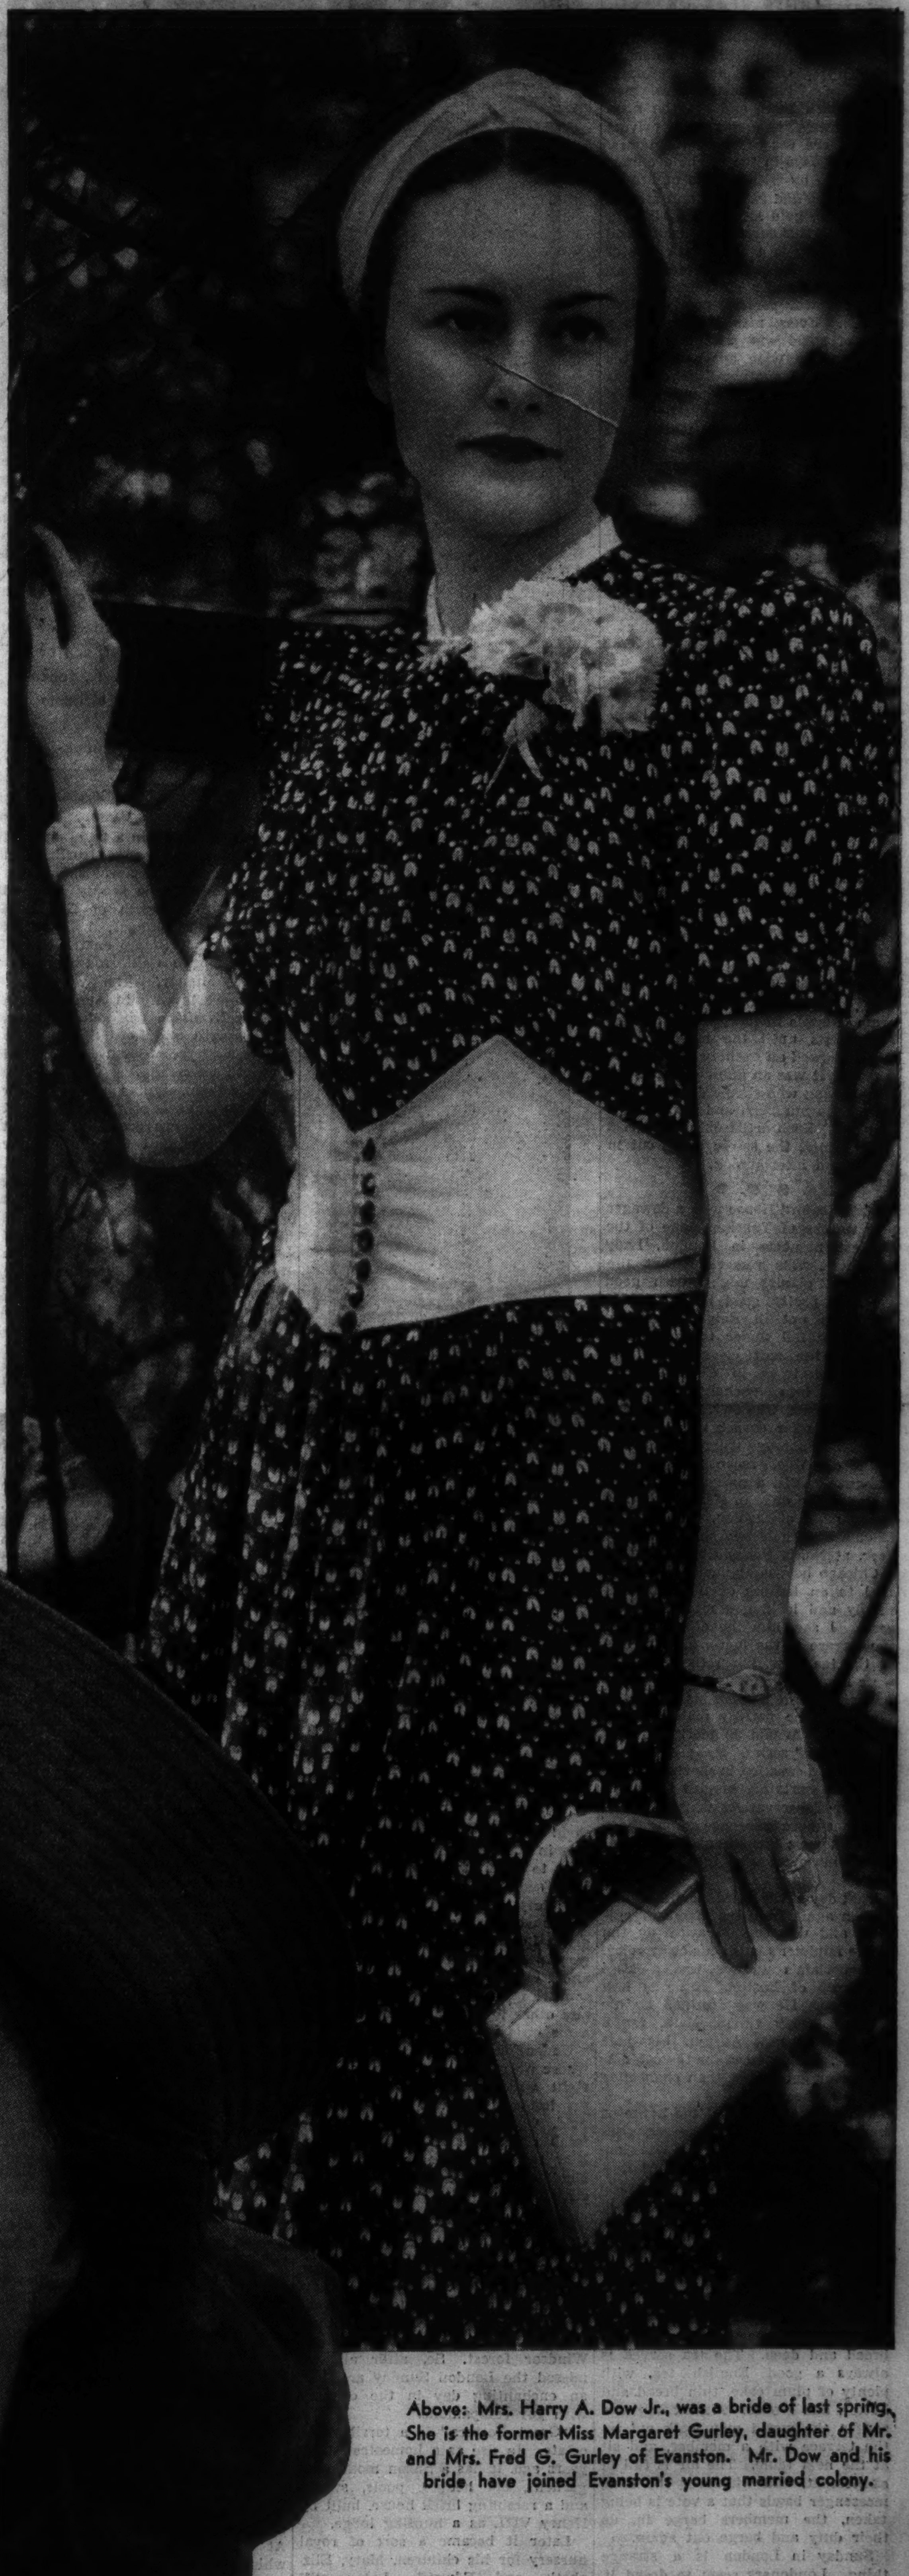
Sailors will head for Delavan lake this week to take part in an invitational "C" class boat regatta on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday. The Delavan Lake Garden club held a gay flower show with Spanish influence last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Rufus Abbott.



Above: Miss Kitty Lawrence, a debutante of the season, will spend part of the summer at Harbor Point in northern Michigan and the rest in Barrington, where her mother, Mrs. Samuel D. Rowe, lives, or in Winnetka with her father, John Harold Lawrence.

Above: Mrs. Harry A. Dow Jr., was a bride of last spring. She is the former Miss Margaret Gurley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Gurley of Evanston. Mr. Dow and his bride have joined Evanston's young married colony.

Right: Miss Jane Myers and many others of the young south side crowd flock to the South Shore Country club for relaxation on hot summer days. Miss Myers is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Urban F. Myers.

London Social Season Keeps Writer Busy

By Cousin Eve.

London's season goes forward with a rush. The royal courts at Buckingham, debutante dances, garden parties, formal luncheons where men and women meet and eat the noon hours away, banquets and private dinners are the order of the hours. On court days in the bright evenings motors go by with visions of beauty in brocades and feathers, and men in broadcloth, gold lace, and medals.

LONDON.

Beneath this current of fashion and semi-frivolity is a deep, dark tide of preparation for war. There are an enormous number of women volunteers for war service, nearly half a million. Every man you meet is a unit of some war group. And yet opinions are wide apart as to the probability of another European war at this time. It's any man's guess: This man thinks war can't be avoided. The other believes it can and will be.

Charity is unusually rampant in London this season. They put the thumbscrews on here quite as scientifically as it is done at home. A friend, having purchased tickets for an evening concert at Lady Howard de Walden's, lured me there one night with promise of pomp and good music. And she exhorted me, furthermore, to gladdest rags and special hair do. The tickets had cost $12.50, and much was expected.

Seaford House is in Belgrave square and the de Waldens themselves are worthy of Thackeray. Their house was awash with lackeys and pompous servants. The grand entrance and main stairway was glamorous with green marbles, both pale and dark, with bronze, with statues, with white marbles supporting the dome over the central gallery. The music room was entirely filled with a group interesting to me, as the faces were mostly strange, excepting always the ubiquitous "Buzzy" Hewes of Washington. The socially ambitious wore their diamonds, their ermines, and sequins. One dowager had diamond clips on the backs of her gloves, there being no other available spaces. Program damsels in fluffy skirts harried the guests until the music began, then followed an evening of exquisite sorrow. It was an affair of amateurs. People sang who shouldn't sing, there were cello numbers, and also periods of piano. Each artist obliged a great many times, the soirée being cut in two by an intermission.

I left Seaford House with a dowager also worthy of Thackery, one of the wittiest numbers in London, Lady Struthers. She remarked that the principal pianist might, with good luck, be pretty good in five years. But once out in Belgrave square, again one fell under the charm of London, the soft clear night, the grand old trees in Central park, glimpses into enchanting salons through open windows. Across the way in the far corner was the new Spanish embassy where lives the Duke of Alba, recently appointed ambassador. In a nice house at No. 3, dwells the duke of Kent, with that lovely mold of fashion, the Duchess Marina and their two children. Next door, at No. 5, Henry Channon, once a Chicago boy, is at home, now married to an heiress of the Guinness family and looking stout and handsome. I saw him the other day on the terrace of the house of commons at the tea hour, when the members were regaling themselves. I was with Andrew McLaren, Labor man from the midlands, the pottery district made famous by Arnold Bennett in "The Five Towns" series. McLaren is brilliant, witty, caustice, in short a personality. He certainly handed it to the younger Conservatives when he said, "there is more ignorance among them to the square inch than ever before. They don't even know that they don't know."

That day I had heard Neville Chamberlain again from the members' gallery, and was carried away by the prime minister's poise, his clear voice. Chamberlain's mother was a Miss Winthrop of Boston, so he is half American. He was destined by his father, Joseph Chamberlain, for a business career. Austen, his half brother, was groomed for the cabinet, but never got higher than chancellor of the exchequer.

Tea on the terrace of the house of commons is one way the members entertain their friends. The last time I had tea there was with Robert Bernays, extremely able cousin of Lewis Bernays, British consul general in Chicago. Robert is member from Nottingham, and since I have seen him, has moved up into the ministry of transport.

Beyond the ancient high stone coping of the terrace flows the Thames broad and deep. The tea served is always a good English tea, with plenty of plum cake, thin bread and butter, and scones. Almost any person in the world may walk out on the terrace with a member, and sit at the next table. The air is full of excitement, and whenever the head messenger bawls that a vote is being taken, the members barge in, do their duty and barge out again.

Sunday in London is a strange thing. Londoners seem to dread it. Every one who isn't in a hospital vanishes mysteriously; hotels and cafés are deserted, and London with its seven millions of inhabitants is quiet as a country churchyard. I was going to Warwickshire a-weekending with charming cousins, but somehow a dinner at Hurlingham with the Honorable Trevor and Frances Stamp got set for Sunday night. It was my sole chance to see Lord and Lady Stamp, traveling from Brussels and about to sail for America. So one faced all the terrors, whatever they are, of the London Sunday, and went with a Chicago playmate to Westminster Abbey.

It was a lovely day, after the heavy rains, and sun blessed us through ancient stained windows. Plaintive, shrill voices of the choir besought help in time of trouble: "We beseech thee to hear us, Good Lord." "O Lord, send thy peace upon us." And the clergy chanted and boomed in the nave for help and sustaining grace in time of war. Around us were praying, palely anxious people, and I wondered how often down the centuries other clergy had boomed and other peoples had prayed in the same circumstances.

Under our feet in the transept where we sat lay Gladstone. On the right was Asquith's tomb, and on our left was Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield, while farther along was the tomb of Pitt, later Lord Chatham. Now they are at peace eternal, and Neville Chamberlain has their unenviable job.

Coming out there were the George Masons of Highland Park, arrived from motoring in Ireland, with a car waiting. In it we were soon motoring merrily along to lunch at "Great Fosters," an historic Elizabethan place at Egham, on the edge of royal Windsor forest. So, after all, we missed the London Sunday and had an enchanting day in the country with gay companions.

"Great Fosters" is a terribly old estate. In use as a homestead 1,000 years ago, it has a Saxon moat, rose gardens, old hedges, pools, swans, and a rambling brick house, built by Henry VIII. as a hunting lodge.

Later it became a sort of royal nursery for his children, Mary, Elizabeth, and Edward. Later still Queen Mary kept her dear sister Elizabeth a quasi prisoner here, and her coat of arms is graven in stone over the portal.

The interior is handsome and harbors "paying guests." We were ushered to the dining hall, a high, raftered barn in Elizabeth's day, and there a red coated jazz band was beating the tom-toms. To its music we tore into a most elaborate menu, including lobster, with all sorts of nice berry pies at the end, and considered Great Fosters a real find. After lunch we discovered a huge blue swimming pool with bath houses behind high hedges, an archery field, tennis and croquet and nice woodsy walks.

That night I drove out to Hurlingham, the fashionable polo club, with Trevor and Frances Stamp. Their sightly apartment, in a building high for London, overhangs Hurlingham and lovely river views. Frances is still the tall blonde beauty she was as Frances Bosworth of Evanston, looking even younger, if possible. Lord and Lady Stamp on the eve of a long trip to California were delightfully happy. The younger Stamps are leaving in August for a visit in Evanston with Mrs. Charles H. Bosworth and Lord Stamp is to deliver a course of lectures at Leland Stanford university.

Hurlingham, unlike some of our own polo clubs, is of great simplicity. The grounds are specially laid out for the game, but there are many tennis courts, and large, pleasant rooms in the former great house where members lunch and dine. It was great fun seeing these friends and hearing their views. Lord and Lady Stamp had just arrived from a railroad congress in Brussels, where they had met up with some of the chamber of commerce delegates on their way down from Copenhagen. You have to hand it to the British—all this war talk leaves them outwardly calm whatever their inward qualms may be.

Of cocktail routs there seem to be scores daily in London. The shortage of servants has closed up the great houses, tall and awe inspiring, and society in the past years has been moving into "flats" or much smaller houses. The squares and "crescents" and "places" are full of madeover tiny domiciles with pale blue, crimson, purple, or leaf green front doors, and window frames to match. They are fascinating, these little houses. Fancy having a purple front door! Imagine living at the inner sweep of Brompton square as do Sir Henry and Lady Chilton, where I went late one day for cocktails. The quiet and peace of the far end of this leafy horseshoe! They are just home after a stormy few years in Madrid, where Sir Henry was British ambassador to Spain and is now retiring from the diplomatic service. Their new house is two rooms deep, painted in sea blue, and Lady Chilton was amused at the shape of them. The house is rather narrow at the front but keeps getting wider at the back like a fan. And here lies a garden, a garden house, and a view over fine trees into an ancient cemetery. You never know what you will see out of the back windows in London. At this party were Admiral Sir Sydney and Lady Bailey, Mrs. Charles Bromwell and Mr. and Mrs. George O'Brien of Grand Rapids, in-laws of Lady Chilton. There were Chilton children here, too, and other guests.

After this party, Mrs. Jacob Baur and I sped across Paddington way en route to the Van Vorsts for the aperitif. Mrs. Van Vorst, a dark beauty, is a sister of Josephine Johnson Hall, cousin of Mrs. Walter R. Kirk of Chicago, and Mrs. Hall was also receiving. It was a very lively party, with many men guests, and who should float in but the lovely Bee Kirk Cuthbert. She wore navy blue, had a bunch of pink roses pinned to her head, and carried the same sort of nosegay, and I thought never looked more enchanting.

Later I went for a long week-end in Warwickshire. It's a rainy, cold summer in England, and the landscape was drab with fog and rain. At Coventry cousins came and whisked me away to Leamington. In one of the ancient, smaller houses on the estate Oliver Cromwell lived while his soldiers were busy smashing the walls and towers of nearby Kenilworth castle.

Between showers of heavy rain, we walked out, well mackintoshed and galoshed, inspecting rock gardens, rose gardens, magnificent trees, new plantings of all sorts. In Warwickshire they garden madly, they hunt, and they madly play contract. We had many marvelous repasts, illuminating conversations, interesting neighbors, and an evening at the Kenilworth castle pageant. This show has been in the making for one year and 2,500 people of the community took part in it. Its more illustrious patrons included the duke of Kent, the marquess of Northampton, Lord Willoughby de Broke, Major H. R. Watling, Lord and Lady Helen Seymour, Percy Martin, the lord bishop of Coventry, Sir Robert and Lady Bird, and Anthony Eden.

The show was a review of Kenilworth's exciting history, from its building by Geoffrey de Clinton at the marriage of his son to Lord Warwick's daughter, to its destruction by Cromwell. Unluckily nobody asked the weather man's advice and the entire week was a perfect deluge. Five large covered stands, holding thousands, faced the east wall of Kenilworth castle, and the historic scenes set to music were acted on the gently sloping, grassy side hill It was a wonderfully effective setting, beautiful in fact, and loud speakers carried the historic dialog to perfection. The characters included Simon de Montfort, Edward II., Falstaff, Henry V., Queen Elizabeth, Eleanor, duchess of Gloster, who went in for black magic; Sir Walter Raleigh, and the earl of Leicester who owned the castle in Elizabeth's day.

We arrived through a sea of mud in a downpour. But, so charming was the entire event, and so gallant the performers in their rain soaked velvets and satins, and wet feet, we stayed until the very end. There were groups of monks who did wonderful singing. There were knights and tournaments. There were tumblers and trick dogs, and most darling of all, a pet lamb whose behavior was perfect. Queen Elizabeth Goyemo in white satin was about to seat herself in a red leather chair which had gathered a pool of water, when again Sir Walter rushed to her rescue, and slung his cloak over the wetness. There was splendid lighting of the old Kenilworth ruins. Amy Robsart's tower stood forth, and those blind windows, blacked out in Queen Elizabeth's time, when she honored Lord Leicester with her presence, and wanted no casual eye to penetrate her private apartments. Kenilworth pageant made money after all. The expected American crowds did not get over this year, but the midlands stood by the project and many thousand pounds were raised for Leamington hospital.

Regatta Heads the Calendar for Cape Cod

CAPE COD, MASS.

The brilliant spectacle of the annual Edgartown regatta began the climax of nautical and social events on the Cape this week. Many of the same boats from the Wianno Yacht club that set sail for the Vineyard early Thursday morning will be setting out next week for the equally famous regatta at Nantucket. Four star yachts from Wianno and about fifteen senior yachts from the club's fleet were in the race to Edgartown. Thomas Boyd, son of the T. Kenneth Boyds of Winnetka, whose summer home is in the Oyster Harbors colony, sailed his senior yacht, Quip, again this year.

The height of the vacation season on the Cape brings days and nights packed with activity. While the Edgartown regatta drew many of the younger crowd from the mainland, there still were plenty of attractions in the vicinity of Wianno to please the stay-at-homes.

The annual Cape Cod tennis championship opened on the sunny courts of the Wianno club this week-end, and during the next two weeks these important matches will draw a great number of spectators as well as contestants. Mrs. Eugene Underwood Kimbark's daughter, Mrs. Norman A. MacColl, who is active in all the sporting events of the colony, is a member of the Wianno club tennis committee, and busy with plans for the tournament. Elizabeth Vilas, who is a regular star on the Wianno courts, is serving on the junior committee.

The first evening party to be undertaken by the popular Craigville Beach club was a beach supper and swimming party Thursday night. This venture was to attract the younger crowd and to acquaint the old members with the many new ones that have been added recently.

The week's activities really started Tuesday morning with an annual summer sale for the New England Farm and Garden shop of Newbury street in Boston. Displayed in the spacious setting of Mrs. James Mott Hallowell's estate at Wianno, a variety of New England foods and handicrafts were sold to benefit agricultural scholarships and the agricultural peoples of the New England states.

The popular midweek dance at Wianno club, which includes exhibition and contest dancing, was an especially gay occasion, as it was turned into a dinner-dance party and prize night this week. Balloons released from a fish net cache at the ceiling contained dollar bills, tickets for dinner at the club, tickets for dancing lessons, and just plain pieces of paper to fool the unlucky ones.

The Edward C. Crossetts entertained a party of thirty at this affair. The huge Crossett estate on the banks of the sound near the Wianno club always is a busy place during the season. Right now Mrs. Edward S. French is visiting there with her two small sons, and another daughter, Mrs. John L. Mothershead, is expected soon.

It is easy to see why invitations to gay week-ends at this summer home are so highly coveted, for Mrs. Crossett has achieved a perfect combination of home-like charm in one of the most gorgeous settings on the Cape. The artistic use of Catalonian blue in the shutters and occasional vases about the rambling, weathered gray house with its quaint gables reflects the Crossett's trip to Spain in 1926, when they were impressed with the beauty of this lively color. Unusual Spanish posters on the flagstone veranda again suggest this trip.

One of the most charming things about this home is the fascinating flower arrangements with which Mrs. Crossett has filled every room. Between social activities and traveling Mrs. Crossett devotes herself to painting and decorating, and a few years ago took some lessons in Pasadena in flower arrangement. She reveals herself as a true artist in the beauty of the architectural effect she attains in her bouquets, using graceful iris leaves for line in the backgrounds.

One of her secrets seems to be the use of only a few blossoms arranged in very low bowls. She knows all the tricks of immersing the hollow stemmed flowers, such as poppies and dahlias, in hot water to retain their fluid and freshness, and she has learned the use of modeling clay to keep her blooms in perfect arrangement in their containers. Mrs Crossett is partial to low Japanese containers, frequently with unusual little dolls or birds tucked into the bouquet. Regal lilies and babies' breath formed several graceful pieces and the rich, deep shades of larkspur were handsome against the soft blues and grays of the drawing room. Mrs. Crossett admits that it takes at least two full mornings a week to arrange these vases, each a picture in itself.

The week's activities in Wianno wound up last night with a formal dinner-dance at the club. Tonight many "little theater" parties will call it a week-end after seeing the famous Jitney Players bring S. N. Behrman's sparkling comedy, "End of Summer", to the Wianno club stage.

One of Wianno's most enthusiastic summer residents, Mrs. Seymour Wheeler, recently returned to her new home here after a brief trip to Chicago. Just before going west, Mrs. Wheeler gave a large cocktail party for Mrs. Graham Lewis [Elizabeth Arden], who was her house guest. Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, Mrs. Francis P. Butler, and Mrs. Elizabeth Eddy Rowe were among the Chicagoans present.

Mrs. Goodspeed, in a stunning white accordion-plaited gown with a jewel embroidered jacket, was in a party dining and dancing at the Wianno club last week. Mrs. Wheeler, in smart canary yellow, was the hostess. Mr. Wheeler is expected to join the summer colony in August.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Post, former Chicagoans now living in New York, are visiting Mrs. Posts's aunt, Mrs. Rowe, here now with their small children, Deborah and Russell Jr. The Philip Reeds, who are in Dedham, Mass., this summer instead of Marion, Mass., were with a group of the city summer crowd entertaining on the Ritz roof in Boston last week.

The Henry A. Gardners of Winnetka and their children, Evelyn and Gifford, are expected back from Europe at their Hyannisport home about August 15. The Darrow Fultons of Chicago have taken the William France Andersons' house at Hyannisport for two weeks in August. The Fultons and Kimball Salisbury are now visiting Mr. Salisbury's family in Pittsfield, and Mr. Salisbury will go on with them later to Hyannisport.

While her house is occupied, Mrs. Anderson plans to stay with her brother, Robert A. Gardner, at Camden, Me., and to visit Mrs. Francis Sears at Hamilton, on the North Shore, and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick at Seal Harbor, Me.

Miss Elizabeth Lavinia Dimmick, daughter of Mrs. Allen du Pont Dimmick of Evanston, is engaged to be married to Gerald Griffin Morse, son of the late Col. Harry Leonard Morse and Mrs. Morse. The wedding will take place next fall. Mr. Morse is a graduate of Exeter and Princeton.

Long Island Is 'Like Home' to Correspondent

By India Moffett.

Long Island's a long way from Chicago, but today in Southampton, New York state's first English settlement, founded in 1640, and now one of its most fashionable summer resorts, I felt as if I were at home, perhaps in one of Lake Forest's lovely houses or, perhaps, in Edward I. Cudahy's State parkway mansion. The Chicago Woman's Exchange often holds sales in Lake Forest, and once each year Mr. Cudahy opens his house for such an affair, but today it was one of Chicago's few grandes dames, Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine, who was allowing the lovely wares of the exchange to be shown to her summer neighbors at the Hamptons in her spacious living room.

This is not the first time Mrs. Valentine has opened Valmay cottage, her Southampton home, for an exchange sale, but it was almost like having the display in a different place, for the surroundings of Valmay cottage have changed greatly since last summer's sale. The hurricane that wrought such havoc and devastation in this part of the wor'd last autumn, took down forty-two huge trees from Mrs. Valentine's grounds. Heretofore the house was so shaded that some might have considered it gloomy, but today it is full of sunlight and sea air. Even the chatelaine, who bemoaned the loss of so many fine old trees, admits now that she wouldn't replant them if she could.

She does regret a little the privacy that is lost, for now the cottage—a huge house to you and to me, but a cottage in Southampton or Newport—may be seen plainly from First Neck lane, whereas before the trees kept passersby from catching any but the most perfunctory glances of the house. It's a pleasant sort of structure, but not exactly beautiful from the street, for during the many years she has owned the house Mrs. Valentine has added bathrooms that jut out in unexpected places. They were hidden before by leafy trees, but now they are in full view, not contributing much architecturally to the building. The gardens, which are at the rear, are lovelier than ever, however.

Mrs. Valentine was not in the house during the storm, for she had gone to her Great Peconic bay retreat, Bluebird cottage, high on a bluff on the day that the hurricane struck. She had gone to close the cottage for the winter. The telephone had been disconnected and Mrs. Valentine was alone. But fortunately a final picnic had been planned for her grandchildren, so there were supplies enough to last until she could be rescued.

It was at Conscience Point on Great Peconic bay that Southampton's first settlers landed, and it is near there that Mrs. Valentine has a little place in which to "rough it." Needless to say, it is a favorite picnic place for the two little sons of the junior Patrick A. Valentines, who also have a summer home in Southampton.

Mrs. Valentine is a devoted grandmother, not only to the young Valentines, but also to the young Armours, the children of the Philip Danforth Armours and the Lester Armours. Several enlarged snapshots of the former Betty Armour and her June bridegroom, Gerald V. Hollins Jr., and of Young Phil Armour and his bride of last year, are in the reception room. In spite of her several homes . . . she also has a large house in Oconomowoc, Wis., and an apartment in Chicago . . . Mrs. Valentine is a woman of simple tastes, as evidenced by the container in which she keeps cigarets in a glass enclosed porch where she and her sister, Mrs. W. Vernon Booth of New York, were sitting yesterday just before luncheon. It is a pint Mason jar, just the same sort that you and I use for preserving. Not exactly a thing of beauty, but wonderful for keeping sea air away from tobacco, I am sure.

Mrs. Valentine does not limit her friendship for the Exchange to opening just one house during the summer for an Exchange sale, for on Aug. 3 and 4 she is turning Danforth lodge in Oconomowoc over to the organization for another display. From Oconomowoc Mrs. Norah Crane takes her trunks full of lingerie, novelties for house and porch, baby clothes, linens and similar luxuries to Lake Geneva, Wis., where Mrs. Robert Tarrant will be hostess at a sale on the 8th. Then on to Harbor Point in North Michigan where Mrs. William Renshaw will open her house for a similar sale on Aug. 15 and 16. And to Charlevoix on the 11 and 12 where Mrs. Edward D. Shumway will give the use of her house on the Chicago club grounds so that her neighbors may patronize the Exchange.

East of Southampton the ravages of the hurricane are more in evidence than around the Hamptons. Perhaps the storm was worse nearer Montauk Point, or it may be that summer colonists of the Hamptons have had the wherewithal to make repairs more quickly than some of their neighbors to the east. Anyway, it is a disheartening drive from East Hampton to Montauk. Few tall trees are left. There are great areas as black and dead as if fire had swept them. Some houses are in ruins, and virtually every one that still is standing has a new roof or a whole new section of wall. In Montauk several fishermen's shacks still are in pieces; what once was a busy restaurant is a shell now, windowless and roofless.

But all is not dreary desolation; far from it. Eastern Long Island still has the same charm it has had for several hundred years. Fishermen still flock to Montauk, which is a mixture of simplicity and sophistication, of east and west, and this I mean, for just before one comes to the point upon which Montauk light has stood since 1797, there is a cattle and guest ranch. The buildings and the surroundings look as if they might be in certain portions of Arizona. Today fog hid the sea that is to the south and to the north, so the resemblance of the countryside to the west was strong. Dudes in wide brimmed hats, cowboy boots, and brightly colored shirts were mounting horses in a corral. Probably tomorrow they will don oilskins to do some deep sea fishing.

AT HOME IN EVANSTON

Mrs. Gerard Wellington Brooks and her bridegroom of last June are at home in Evanston following a wedding trip to Canada. Mrs. Brooks is the former Miss Virginia June Smith, daughter of Mrs. Viola Smith of Wilmette. Mr. Brooks' parents are Mr. and Mrs. William G. Brooks of Northbrook.

New Leader of Altrusa States Aims of Club

By Betty Browning.

Women must be prepared to think together and work together to safeguard their common interests, Mrs. Dessalee Ryan Dudley, new president of Altrusa International, emphasized during a visit to Chicago last week. She was on her way home to Battle Creek, Mich., from Portland, Ore., where she had attended the eighteenth convention of this oldest service organization of executive and professional women. The Chicago Altrusa club gave a dinner for Mrs. Dudley Monday evening at the Wrigley Building restaurant.

Mrs. Dessalee Ryan Dudley.

Commenting on the recent upcropping of bills restricting married women workers in a score of states, Mrs. Dudley said: "Because of the scarcity of jobs for every one, the women of the country should be on their toes. The best way for them to meet the situation is to do the best job possible, to make a real contribution."

Mrs. Dudley cited Florence Nightingale, Mme. Curie, Clara Barton, and "any number of other women who, allowed to make their contribution, have helped to build the best in our civilization."

Women also must meet the emergency by helping each other, Mrs. Dudley believes. "It is important for women to see issues as they affect not only themselves but other women. Coöperative effort between women as individuals and between organizations is essential," she asserted.

At its recent convention Altrusa International adopted a resolution opposing efforts to prevent responsible adults from earning on account of "sex or marital status." The resolution stated that "this country has been built by women's work as well as by men's work, and . . . can prosper only as all adults contribute to its prosperity according to their abilities."

The thesis that women must work in each other's interest is no new one for Altrusans. Mrs. Dudley simply was restating it in terms of the present situation. Altrusa always has been dedicated to helping other women to success in business and the professions. Young women especially have been assisted through scholarships and vocational guidance to equip themselves for careers.

At the Portland meeting the older woman and her present plight in the overcrowded business world officially became a concern of Altrusa.

A booklet dealing with the psychological and technical aspects of the older woman's adjustment to the changing demands of the business world shortly will be issued by Altrusa International. A committee of vocational experts and psychologists will prepare the booklet, which will include suggestions for new occupations.

Present plans also call for the establishment of vocational counseling bureaus to advise the older woman, to help her make adjustments, and to find work. These bureaus will be conducted by experts in large centers, and by volunteers, including Altrusans, in small cities where professional vocational experts are not available.

Wherever possible, these projects will be carried out in coöperation with other interested organizations and agencies. For the last two years Altrusa has followed that policy in experimenting with vocational guidance of the older woman throughout its seventh district, comprising southwestern states. The success of these activities in the southwest led to their being taken over on a nationwide scale at the convention.

In discussing Altrusa's vocational guidance work, Mrs. Dudley praised especially the Chicago club's program, which has included vocational conferences for high school students with Altrusans as speakers. Altrusa International's work in this field ranges from awarding scholarships to working with vocational guidance teachers in high schools and to furnishing volunteer vocational guidance where none is supplied by the schools.

Mrs. Dudley brings to her new office a distinguished record of achievement in the field of education as well as in Altrusa International and other organizations. A tall, striking woman with an air of quiet authority, Mrs. Dudley is assistant superintendent of schools of Battle Creek, in her native Michigan, and is general supervisor of special work in the elementary schools.

The Michigan State Teachers' college, of which Mrs. Dudley is a graduate, has awarded her an honorary degree of master of education for a "conspicuously honorable contribution to the course of education in Michigan." She has an A. B. degree from Olivet college and a master's degree from Teachers' college, Columbia university.

Her broad experience in other organizations leads naturally to Mrs. Dudley's interest in coöperation between women as individuals and in organizations. She was a founder of the Michigan Congress of Parents and Teachers, has been president of the Michigan Association of Childhood Education, and is active in the League of Women Voters, the American Association of University Women, the American Legion auxiliary, the National Education association, and the Young Women's Christian association. Two honorary education societies have elected her to membership.

In Altrusa International Mrs. Dudley was first vice president and chairman of several committees before her election as successor to Mrs. Harriette Quisenberry of El Paso, Tex. Mrs. Dudley was a charter member of the Battle Creek Altrusa club, and twice served as president. She also was district governor.

Other officers elected at the convention were Mrs. Emily Burcham of Spokane, Wash., first vice president; Mrs. Katherine Neville of Oklahoma City, Okla., second vice president. Miss Mabel Meek was reëlected secretary and treasurer. Headquarters of Altrusa International are in Chicago.

ENGAGED TO MARRY

Miss Vivian Cermak Graham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richey V. Graham of River Forest and granddaughter of the late Mayor Cermak, is engaged to be married to Thomas Carleton Hope, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Oliver Hope of Chicago. The wedding will take place next fall.

Drama Brings Pasadena Out Early Mornings

By Ruth Billheimer.

"Coming to Pasadena is like going to heaven, because I find so many old Chicago friends here," said Mrs. Helen Jennings Masters of Chicago, when she was a guest recently at one of the Wednesday morning breakfasts attendant upon the annual midsummer drama festival at the Pasadena community playhouse. She was presented to the 300 or more guests assembled in the shaded patio of the playhouse by the woman for whom she was flower girl at a fashionable Chicago wedding many years ago, Mrs. Oliver Converse Bryant, who was formerly Carrie L. Parsons. Mrs. Masters' attractive daughter, Miss Marcia Masters, also was introduced. Mrs. Masters, her daughter, and granddaughter spent the late spring in Pasadena and were in southern California all winter.

PASADENA, CAL.

Mrs. Bryant is, as usual, mistress of ceremonies at the breakfasts which bring busy people out to a prompt 8 o'clock meal and to pay tribute to the muse.

Walter Hampden, great Shakespearean actor, was guest of honor this week. Hamlin Garland, an ex-Chicagoan, kept his annual tryst by attending the opening breakfast and giving the principal address. With him was his daughter, Constance Garland Harper. The ovation tendered him by the guests, who rose with one accord, was rivaled only by that given his fellow Chicagoan, Dr. Robert A. Millikan, last week. This great, world-acclaimed scientist, whom Pasadena so proudly claims, stirred his audience deeply.

Reëlected this week to the presidency of the Pasadena Music Festival association is Dr. Andrew Neff, son of the E. D. Neffs. His sister-in-law, Mrs. William Neff, is secretary. Mrs. Joseph M. Goss, whose son, Norman, was married this month to Jean Ericson of Lake Shore drive, and Miss Patricia Hellweg, who soon will revisit Chicago, are on the board.

E. Palmer Sabin now serves the Pasadena Art institute as first vice president, and the executive committee includes Scott Brown, Albert B. Ruddock, and Archibald Young. Mrs. Richard Y. Dakin, daughter-in-law of the Henry W. Dakins, is chairman of the exhibition committee. Directors include Dr. Millikan, Myron Hunt, Fred G. Adamson, Mrs. John Hardin, and William McCay.

Mrs. Otis Buckingham is president this year of the Visiting Nurse association, and on her board are Mrs. Edward S. Clark, daughter of Robert W. Campbell; Mrs. Russell M. Decker [Virginia Raff of Evanston], Mrs. George Ellery Hale, Mrs. William E. Hale, and Mrs. Ruddock. Mrs. William E. Hansen [Betty Dawson of Chicago] is new president of the George Junior Republic auxiliary.

FOREIGN TRAVEL

Albany District Keeps Nation's History Alive

By Alden Powell.

ALBANY, N. Y.

For an eastern trip combining historical interests, scenic highways, and recreation spots, this traveler would recommend the capital district of New York state.

In Albany the visitor sees, first of all, one of the finest state capitols in America. The imposing mass of granite is known for its architectural designs—especially on the "million dollar staircase."

The State Education building, opposite the capitol, has the longest colonnade in the country, with thirty-six Corinthian columns extending along its front. Within is housed the state library, containing the original drafts of Washington's Farewell Address and Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation; and the state museum, with a vast collection of invertebrate fossils.

Other places worth a visit include the State Office building, from whose observation tower a bird's-eye view of Albany and surrounding country may be had; the State Court of Appeals building and Albany county courthouse, and the New York State College for Teachers. The Schuyler mansion, built by Gen. Philip Schuyler in 1762, contains much of the family's furniture and mementos of Gen. John Burgoyne, left there after his defeat at Saratoga.

Within short drives of the capital modern highways lead to geological curiosities, scientific and natural wonders, industrial centers, and historic regions.

The Mohawk Drama festival, at Union college, Schenectady, in August, presents great plays performed by student-apprentices and screen and stage personalities.

Across the Hudson river is industrial Troy, home of Rensselaer Polytechnic institute. At Rensselaer is Fort Cralo, where "Yankee Doodle" was written. At Schoharie the Old Stone fort and Swart tavern keep history alive.

At Howe caverns, at Cobleskill, thirty-eight miles from Albany, subterranean streams have been cutting into rocks for more than a million years. Nearby is Knox cave, one of the largest caverns in the state.

Southwest of the capital are the Helderberg mountains, from whose plateau, now crowned by John Boyd Thacher State park, there is an unexcelled panorama of the countryside.

RECAPTURED THRILLS.

Chicago, July 19.—To the Travel Editor: Through John Thomas Hicks' "Magic Carpet," in the Voice of the Traveler last Sunday, we were able to recapture the many thrills we experienced on a trip through the heart of the Colorado Rockies a few years ago.

I hope Mr. Hicks did not overlook Mount Evans and the splendid highway leading up the 14,000 foot peak. On that mountain we felt as small as an ant might feel when standing on a hill.

Also, Bear Creek canyon, with the creek rumbling and tumbling over the rocks, and with the mountain trout flopping on the rocks in their efforts to fight their way up stream.

The Colorado wonderland is truly awe inspiring. GENEVA GILPIN.

OVERNIGHT TO BOULDER DAM.

Chicago, July 26.—To the Travel Editor: I note in the "Travel Queries Answered" column in today's TRIBUNE the following: "Question: How can I get to Boulder dam? Answer: By rail to Las Vegas, Nev., and from there by motor bus."

I simply want to point out that United Air Lines affords excellent overnight service between Chicago and Las Vegas, leaving Chicago at 10:55 p. m. and arriving Las Vegas at 7:12 a. m. In addition, there is daylight service, leaving Chicago at 4:05 a. m. and arriving Las Vegas at 12:20 p. m.

Very cordially yours,
R. F. AHRENS,
Regional Trafic Manager.

24 SQUARE MILES OF YESTERDAY.

Washington Island, Door County, Wis., July 24.—To the Travel Editor: If you never knew a press agent to run out of words, know one now!

This is the grandest place I have seen in my travels anywhere. Here I have gorged on wild strawberries, sunsets, magnificent seascapes, the loveliest of wildflowers, wild shores, and sleep from 9 p. m. to dawn.

The island is, in truth, twenty-four square miles of yesterday." And even the visitors remember the courtesies and manners of their fathers.

CHESTER P. HOLWAY.

MAIL FOR SHUT-INS.

Rockford, Ill., July 21.—To the Travel Editor: I should like to get the name of a shut-in who lives in some far off land. My time is so taken up that I feel correspondence with one such person is all I can handle. I shall do my best to write a cheerful and newsy letter. My address is 1540 Crosby street.

MRS. LEONARD HULTEN.

Middle West Is Sending Crowds to Golden Gate

San Francisco, July 29 [Special].—As a result of a heavy travel movement from Chicago and the middle west, attendance at the Golden Gate International exposition registered a sharp increase in the first four weeks of July, nearly doubling the previous daily average figures. This was announced today by Dr. Charles H. Strub, managing director.

Daily paid attendance for the four weeks averaged nearly 52,000, or approximately 1,500,000 for the period. This is exclusive of some 200,000 free admissions, covering men of the United States naval forces, participants in parades and special events, and others.

Total paid attendance since the opening on Feb. 18 is slightly under 6,000,000.

Reports from transportation companies, automobile tour agencies, travel bureaus, and other sources of information show all the way from 50 to 100 per cent increase in general westward and exposition travel over the comparable period last year.

Art Critic Is Surprised at Fair Awards

By Eleanor Jewett.

A considerable amount of surprise seems to have been aroused by the action of the jury of awards at the art exhibition current at the San Francisco World's Fair. This surprise seems to be rather well distributed over the country for echoes of it come from as widely separated places as California itself and New York. The most amazing award, apparently, was that of the first prize, $2,500, to "The Yellow Cloth," by George Braque, a modernist exercise which in 1937 received first prize at the Carnegie International and in so doing stirred up such animosity that feeling still runs high when it is mentioned.

Other Carnegie winners were rewarded at San Francisco, chief among them Franklin Watkins for his "Negro Spiritual." Mr. Watkins was a prize winner at the Chicago Art institute within the last season or so with a painting of a person of indeterminate sex playing a cello. Carl Hofer, who last fall won the first award at the Carnegie International, was given the second national prize at San Francisco. Another coincidence may be read into the information that Oskar Kokoschka of Austria was honored at both the San Francisco Fair and at the Carnegie. In 1937 the Carnegie's second honorable mention went to Kokoschka's "Karlsbruecke, Prague." At San Francisco he did a bit better—he received first honorable mention.

Chicago was not entirely left out in the awarding of prizes at San Francisco. One of our WPA artists and a man who has had a Guggenheim fellowship as well as many prizes at the Chicago Art institute, Aaron Bohrod, came into a third honorable mention and $150 at the hands of the San Francisco jury. Another Chicago Art institute man [the only one in our opinion who has merited the name of artist among those young people graduated in the last several years, a man with real feeling for color and an honest appreciation of the merit of intelligible composition and good drawing]—Robert Lifvendahl—was honored. Lifvendahl was graduated last year from the Art institute and went abroad on the Edward L. Ryerson traveling fellowship. A well done "Polo" by him may be remembered by those who saw the Chicago Artists and Vicinity show in 1938.

The awards again, as usual, are more remarkable for the artists who were ignored than for those who were honored. One wonders how the southwest, the west [with Millard Sheets], the middle west [with Grant Wood], Chicago [to choose the largest art center of the middle west] with Tellander and Nichols, Killgore, Ingerle, and Krawiec, the south and east with their painters of distinction, like the way the prizes went. It may be that none of the men I have mentioned were represented in the exhibition.

The jury of awards consisted of Daniel Catton Rich, director Chicago Art institute, chairman; Homer Saint-Gaudens, director Carnegie institute; Henri Marceau, assistant director Philadelphia Museum of Art; Henry Varnum Poor, New York painter, and William Gaw, San Francisco painter. The jury was a modern jury. One thing the jury apparently failed to do was to give a prize to a conservative painter as a sop for the nonmodern public. Matisse, Rouault, Beckmann, Kuniyoshi—this list of names is familiar and to them went the prizes. Queer how rarely a new name crops up in a list of awards. It seems almost as though the modern juror does not trust himself to break new ground; odd, how conservative the modern is in his way.

Nearer to home and more interesting is the news about Dale Nichols. The board of trustees of the University of Illinois has appointed him to the position of "visiting professor of art" for the coming year. It is not a teaching position but a post similar to that filled by John Steuart Curry at the University of Wisconsin. Grant Wood was the first painter to become connected with a university [Iowa] in this capacity. Students will be privileged to watch Mr. Nichols work and ask questions concerning art—its philosophy and place in relation to the people.

Dale Nichols has strong convictions in regard to art. He once wrote a book, "A Philosophy of Esthetics," which embodies many of his ideas on the subject. A recent letter from him contains the following thought which is worth consideration: "Art has been corrupted by mercenary persons who feel safe in the popular belief that art is much too personal to be evaluated," he writes. "It has long been their argument that what one person thinks is beautiful another looks upon as ugly. With this 'front' they paint sensational works and ridicule honest artists for painting 'trite' pictures. With this argument any showman can and has daubed a canvas with meaningless and horrible forms, thrusting them upon the public as great art. I have even had modern artists tell me that these 'creations' are above the level of humanity."

The Masterpiece of the Month at the Art institute is "St. George and the Dragon," a painting dating back to about the year 1430. It is installed with special lighting near the front entrance of the institute and is proving popular. The painting is attributed to Bernardo Martorell, a Spaniard.

The picture shows St. George mounted on a white horse battling with an imposing dragon, a fabulous beast which, in this case [according to legend] had a miserable character and an insatiable appetite for children, which he satisfied by devouring greedily the infants in the neighborhood of his cave.

"THREE HUNTERS," BY DALE NICHOLS

A characteristic Dale Nichols painting. Mr. Nichols has just been appointed to the post of visiting professor of art at the University of Illinois for the coming year.

The Bar Harbor Season Hitting a Swift Tempo

BAR HARBOR, MAINE. The month of August is the peak period of activity of a combined social and sports tempo at Mount Desert Island and its various resort retreats, including Northeast Harbor, Seal Harbor, Southwest Harbor, and Somesville. There will be a constant round of parties, topped off by a classic concert series at the Building of Arts.

The social highlight of the season, the annual fancy dress ball of the Bar Harbor club, is scheduled for Wednesday, Aug. 16, to benefit the Mount Desert Island hospital. Just about every one who is any one on the island turns out for this very social function. The motif of the event this season will take in a wide range of selection—a favorite character of fiction, history, or a current event. Of course, there's an active committee making plans for the forthcoming affair. Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago and Hare Forest, Bar Harbor, is vice chairman of the committee. Mrs. Timothee Adamowski of Boston is the chairman, and Dr. Augustus Thorndike of Boston is treasurer. Other committee members include Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick, Mrs. Harold A. Howard, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, all of the Chicago colony, and also Mrs. Charles B. Bradley of Convent, N. J.; Mrs. Eugene du Pont of Wilmington, Del.; Mrs. William Rodman Fay, Mrs. William Pierson Hamilton, Mrs. Louis C. Lehr, and Mrs. F. Victor Loew, all of New York; Mrs. Peter Augustus Jay of Washington, and Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth of Boston.

Another important charity event in which Chicago members of the summer colony are taking an active part is the opening of flower gardens of private estates, to take place this afternoon for the benefit of the Bar Harbor chapter of the American Red Cross. A number of Bar Harbor's most beautiful estates will be open to the public with the admission money going to the Red Cross. Miss Mildred McCormick of Chicago and New York will open the Old Farm, her estate on Highbrook road, and Mrs. Marshall Langhorne of Washington and Chicago will open Saltair on the shore.

Mr. and Mrs. Vance McCormick of Harrisburg, Pa., were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick at East Point, their summer estate in Seal Harbor, this week. Mrs. Charles Deering, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick's mother, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. McCormick at East Point. Their two sons, Roger and Brooks McCormick, have arrived and are quite occupied with their international class sailing vessel these days.

Mrs. Clive Runnels of Chicago is a newcomer to the Chicago colony of the island this season. She has arrived to occupy her newly leased residence on Reef point in Northeast Harbor. The residence is owned by the Harper Sibley estate. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Inches of Boston departed this week after being Mrs. Runnells' guests for a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Barnes of Chicago recently launched their newly constructed sloop, Three Brothers, in Southwest Harbor and are quite occupied with their sons in sailing it in these coastal waters. Duncan Longcope of New York and Baltimore was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Barnes at their summer residence in Somesville last week-end.

Mrs. Robert McCormick, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Harold Howard, and Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen were among those displaying beautiful exhibits at the recent annual flower show of the Mount Desert garden club.

Mr. Frederick J. Deveau was a dinner host at the Pot and Kettle club this week for Mrs. F. Hamilton McCormick-Goodhart, Mr. and Mrs. Sargent Collier of Boston and Chicago; Mrs. Montgomery Blair, John De Witt Peltz, and Clarence Stetson.

Miss Mary Ryerson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson of Chicago, with Peter De H. Biddle of Philadelphia, were recent dinner guests at the Cellar in Northeast Harbor.

Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer at Hare Forest. Mr. and Mrs. Palmer entertained at tea in her honor this week. Mrs. Palmer's mother, Mrs. Herman H. Kohlsaat, is expected to arrive next week for an indefinite stay at Hare Forest.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Seward Webb were dinner hosts at Brook End this week in honor of Miss Pauline Palmer.

Mrs. Elisha Dyer Hubbard of Middletown, Conn., and Chicago is expected shortly at Villa Mary, her estate on the shore.

Dr. Rufus N. Jones was a guest of Clifford W. Barnes at Cairn-Wood, his estate on Peabody drive, last week-end. Mr. Barnes gave a dinner in Dr. Jones' honor during his stay. Dr. Oscar Maurer and Mrs. Maurer, pastor of the United church of New Haven, Conn., and head of the Congregational church conference, will arrive Aug. 9 to be Mr. Barnes' guest. Miss Lilace Reid Barnes and her guest, Miss Margaret V. N. Duryee of New York, departed on a motoring trip to New Brunswick, Canada, this week, planning to return the first of August to join Mr. Barnes.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Briggs of Chicago have arrived at Nearwoods, their summer residence on Manchester road.

Louvre Friends Visit Famous Vaux Chateau

By May Birkhead.

PARIS. Although the élite of Paris, no less than the multitude, continue to speculate on the probable course of events, neither stratum proposes to cross the bridges until they reach them. This does not mean that there is any lack of vigilance. Yet the bulk of Parisians made or are making their plans for the summer, and many left the capital before the national holiday, July 14.

Recently the Friends of the Louvre gave their last summer excursion, some of the party going in big touring cars, others in their own motors. The objective was the celebrated château, Vaux le Vicomte, not many miles from Fontainebleau. Those familiar with the history of Louis XIV.'s time will recall that this monarch, when very young, proceeded to Vaux le Vicomte to attend the magnificent fête given there in 1661 by the chatelain, Fouquet, who had become immensely rich through army contracts. On that occasion, the flower of Parisian society saw the first performance of Molière's comedy, "Le Fâcheux."

Vaux le Vicomte then was the most imposing château in France to be the residence of a private citizen, and the château itself, designed by Le Vau, and its superb grounds, laid out by Le Nôtre, surpassed anything that the king himself could boast of in splendor. In the midst of the fête, the king showed signs of displeasure, and the next day he ordered Fouquet to be arrested. Some say Louis XIV. was jealous of Fouquet's attentions to the royal mistress, Mme. de Montespan, others that he considered no subject should be as powerful and as rich as Fouquet was. Whatever the reason, Fouquet's arrest was a great sensation. It often is said that Louis XIV.'s visit to Vaux le Vicomte gave him the idea of making Versailles, then but a hunting lodge, the most sumptuous of all châteaux.

The present owner of Vaux le Vicomte, M. Edme Sommier, the sugar magnate, welcomed the Friends of the Louvre, and told of how his father bought the property in 1875. The previous owner had been the sixth Duc de Choiseul-Praslin, whose father, the fifth duke, also chatelain of this estate, was the assassin in Paris of his wife, Fanny Sebastiani, because of the scenes she made him over the governess of their children, later Mrs. Henry Field, who moved to New York, and whose life is traced in the recent best-seller, "All This, and Heaven, Too."

The sixth duke married Marie Forbes of New York, one of the belles, along with Jennie Jerome [later Lady Randolph Churchill, mother of Winston Churchill], of Parisian society under the second empire. One of the men of the Forbes family married Dora Delano, who spends much of her time in Paris, and soon will receive, as usual each summer, the visit of Mrs. James Roosevelt, her sister, and mother of President Roosevelt.

We saw Vaux le Vicomte some years ago, in a small group who were guests of the chatelain, and it was interesting to see it again, although the number admitted was over 600, which made any lingering in the beautiful interiors impossible. The chatelain, M. Sommier, recently was with a French delegation of business men in the United States.

When Chicago Was Young:

The Author Writes Her Friends from Northern Minnesota.

By Herma Clark

Dear "When Chicago Was Young" Friends:

Leaving the '90s behind for the moment, come with me to northern Minnesota, where Grace Hall Hemingway of River Forest and I are spending a fortnight. Mrs. Hemingway is the mother of the famous Ernest Hemingway, novelist and short story writer, but she doesn't depend on her brilliant son for recognition. Musician, composer, painter, she lectures on these arts in many cities besides Chicago. This summer she is writing a chronicle of her family and has come to Estelle Holbrook, adviser of many successful writers, for suggestions as to its form. The chronicle is intended only for the eyes of Mrs. Hemingway's children [of whom there are six], but it is interesting reading to any one. Miss Holbrook's home is in Minneapolis, but she spends her summers at Beaver Bay and writers seek her out here.

This air conditioned region is always cool. At least, we have found it so. With reports of intense heat in the midwest, we sit by a blazing fire and heap blankets on beds at night. We live in cabins near the lodge . . . this seems to be the approved method for summer tourists in the north country. Everywhere you find these cabins, clustering around a larger central house like chickens around a mother hen.

Cool and quiet, these peaceful little lodges are ideal places in which to write. Many Minneapolis people come here for the summer, living in picturesque log houses along the shore of Lake Superior. Among these are James and Helen Sanderson [Prof. James C. Sanderson and his blonde wife], who are at home everywhere, and the Misses Katharine and Maizie Young, Minneapolis school teachers, who are their nearest neighbors. Prof. Sanderson's talk, as we sit by the roaring fire, is full of merry quips. We speak of the deplorable errors in historical movies and he quotes Mark Twain on mendacity: . . . "Lies, damned lies and statistics." Prof. Sanderson thinks Hollywood may be placed after statistics.

At the Beaver Bay club citizens of Minneapolis have handsome cottages . . . the Pillsburys, the Crosbys, the Douglases, the De Laittres.

French Point has pretty cabins, with beautiful curtains and spreads designed by Mrs. French. "A Bit of Norway" is a much patronized roadside tearoom, kept by Mr. and Mrs. Shraa, a foreign atmosphere being lent it by waitresses in Norwegian costume.

Frank W. Skinner, one of whose north woods pictures was seen in Mrs. Logan's "Sanity in Art" exhibit last spring, is painting Lake Superior in its various moods. The Skinners own Studio Inn and here people go to eat and to see Mr. Skinner's paintings. Another artist, John Slater, a native of Beaver Bay, has some excellent canvases, which he paints in leisure moments, though he is a builder of log cabins and ship models, as well as a notable woodsman and story teller. He gave us a recipe for swamp biscuit, which we intend to try.

Beaver Bay is small, existing only for the tourist, and we are excited when we see a trailer stop near the filling station and find an artist beginning his work. He turns out to be A. Merrill Brown, featured in many syndicated newspaper columns. Mr. Brown is ambidextrous and thus is able to paint two pictures at once, sometimes doing an "upside-down" painting. He paints blindfolded, too. Known as the world's speediest artist, Mr. Brown admits that these quickly painted pictures are more valuable as souvenirs than as art.

At the northern Minnesota mink ranch a thousand of these bright-eyed little creatures are kept in kennels, under the management of E. L. West. The mink is not nervous and excitable, as is the silver fox, and being small, is more easily cared for. The animals in these kennels are descended from Alaskan forebears and are exceptionally handsome.

Trout abound in the Lake Superior region and its fame as a paradise for the fisherman has gone abroad. Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Sargent of Park Ridge stopped here last week on their way to Rice Lake, farther north.

We had always supposed that "Paul Bunyan" originated in Minnesota lumber camps, but we are told that northern Michigan claims this mythical giant. Paul Bunyan created the Great Lakes, however, according to local authorities, so he is a northern Minnesota hero, too.

Next week we shall be again in Chicago and you will hear from "Martha Esmond" on affairs of the '90s. Your friend, HERMA CLARK.

Tut's Coffin Larger than 1-Car Garage

By Frederic Babcock.

CAIRO, EGYPT. Karnak has the most stupendous of all temples, and Luxor has King Tut's mummy, but Cairo has the Museum of Egyptian Antiquities.

Of all the museums we've ever seen—and that means enough of them to reach from here to breakfast—this one impresses us as the final word. Here nothing less than a thousand years old has a chance. Here are some of the world's earliest treasures, preserved in sands that kept a 5,000 year old fresco as fresh as the day it was painted. Here is a collection that has no rivals in the field of archaeological discoveries.

Within the museum's walls are the keys to a full appreciation of all the monumental wonders in the valley of the Nile. Whatever has been learned about ancient Egypt has been gathered from its tombs, and the contents of the best of them have been gathered here. The exhibit is so vast that it would take a year's study to comprehend the meaning of all the monuments, mummies, jewels, statues, and intimate objects.

One huge hall is devoted entirely to the loot taken from Tut-ankh-Amen's tomb. The tourist doesn't have to visit the sarcophagus at Luxor to get an idea as to what it was like. Everything worth while found in it is on display here. And on a scale that is almost unbelievable.

Tut's outer coffin, gold incrusted, is larger than our garage in a Chicago suburb. His inner coffin is of solid gold. So is his death mask. The adage about all that glitters not being gold does not hold here. King Midas had nothing on King Tut. The monarch of Thebes could have had an Alaska gold rush all his own. Just about everything he possessed, both ornamental and useful, apparently was made of the precious metal. He never got off the gold standard. His furniture, chariots, coaches, and thrones await the present day discoverer.

This is only one room of many In other rooms are articles dating back to at least 4400 B. C.—some say 6500 B. C.—and relics covering everything from the first dynasty to the last. Their long interment in the dry tombs left them virtually intact. It is evident that the valuables were buried with the mummy for two reasons: to comfort the departed one, and to assure that his place in world affairs would be properly recognized.

The mummies of Rameses II. and Seti I. are shown, along with acres of papyri, enamel, paintings, and decorations. Wooden and sandstone statues prove once more that there's nothing new under the sun. In their original colors they depict ladies with mascara on their faces, and suntanned gents with cute Hollywood mustaches.

Many of the pieces are lavishly beautiful. They reveal an amazing sense of artistry and workmanship. One cannot view them without wondering how much progress humans have really made in the centuries since the Pharaohs.

All are impressive, but the King Tut relics easily carry off first honors. They are so highly regarded—and well guarded—that only twenty-five visitors are permitted in the room at one time. Egypt is taking no chances on some tourist walking off with a 3,000 year old souvenir.

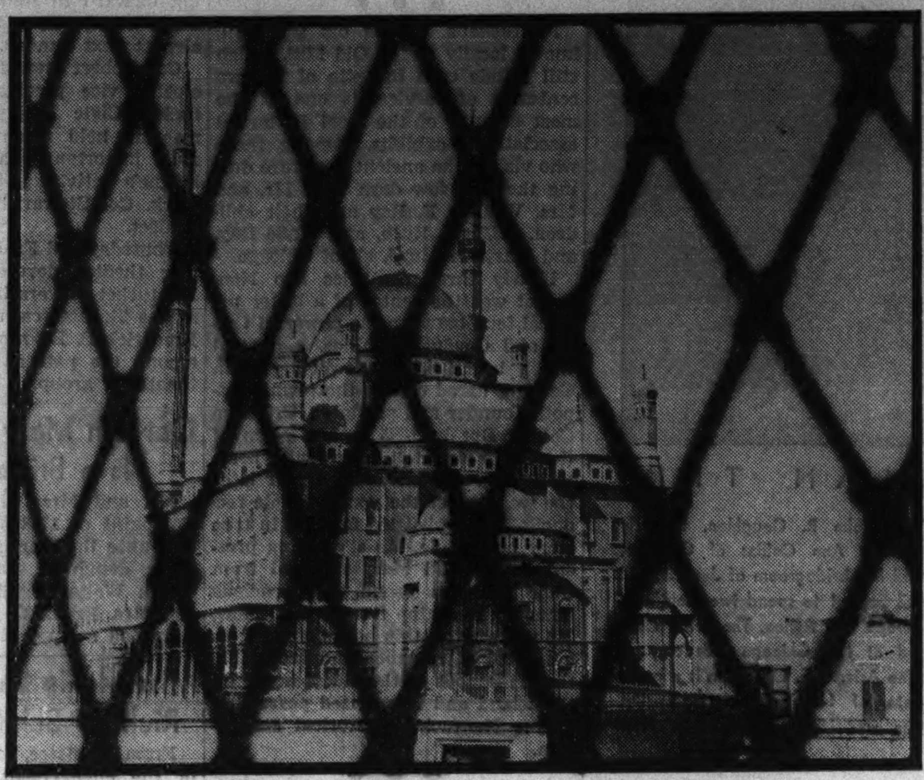
After the traveler has spent hours in the museum, and is so full of sightseeing that he feels he can't stand any more, he goes on to Sultan Saladin's Citadel, and the thousand year old Ashar university, and the fantastic Khan-el-Khalili bazaar, and the mosque of Sultan Hassan, with its 270 foot minaret, and the Mohammed Ali, or Alabaster, mosque, and perhaps—if he doesn't drop in his tracks—four or five more of Cairo's 500 mosques.

Of the 500, the Mohammed Ali is perhaps the most unusual. Done in alabaster, it is said to have cost $25,000,000. It was designed after the Turkish Byzantine St. Sophia's mosque in Istanbul, and—to this observer—is much more beautiful. After having stood for a hundred years, it was closed two years ago, to have its face lifted, but now is keeping open house again Original colors have been restored, costly marbles have gone into the repairs, and mosaics duplicating the originals have been placed. Today the building, as good as new, can only be described with the overworked adjective, exquisite.



ONE OF CAIRO'S FINEST LANDMARKS

The Mohammed Ali mosque, done in alabaster and costing $25,000,000. It has recently been reopened to the tourists.

Ship for Sinbad.

COPENHAGEN.—The wreck of a ship old enough to have served Sinbad the Sailor has recently been found near Narva, Estonia. The vessel is believed to be more than 2,000 years old. Archæologists base their estimates of its age on its position, since it is lying in a bog nearly four miles from the present shoreline of the ocean. If the bog was the former bay, the ship must date back to prehistoric times.

Vest Pocket Country.

Belgium is smaller than Maryland, and two Belgiums could be accommodated in Illinois.

2,000 in Cast for Cascades Festival

Jackson, Mich., July 29.—The task of preparing a cast of more than 2,000 persons for the presentation of "The Goddess of the Rainbow" has begun. The spectacle will be the principal feature of the second annual Cascades festival here Aug. 12 to 19.

Seven stages of the waterfalls will provide the setting for the production. Tons of scenery, brilliant costumes, and Hollywood lighting effects will blend into the Cascades' colors.

Ruling the festival as "goddess of the rainbow" will be blonde Barbara Boardman, 20 year old Jackson society bud. She will be attended by a court of five brunettes. The "goddess" and her court were selected from among more than 100 Michigan young women.

House in Woods in Top Flight of Country Homes

By Rose Cour.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.

The House in the Woods at Lake Geneva, the summer home of Col. and Mrs. William M. Spencer, has had the distinction of being named one of the "best twelve country homes in America," in a national survey of country estates conducted in 1916. Except for Grosse Point Farm, the home of Truman H. Newberry of Michigan, the House in the Woods was the only home selected in the middle west, the other ten being located in the east and in California. It, too, was the only house of the twelve that departed radically from most established architectural precedents. Eleven of them, and one was the George Washington mansion at Mount Vernon, were of old, established, conservative architectural types.

The house was designed and built in 1905 and 1906 by Howard Shaw for A. C. Bartlett. Undoubtedly the owner's son, Frederick Clay Bartlett, mural and landscape painter, had considerable influence in its planning, as the house was to be used not only as a summer home for the family, but for a studio in which the artist could work the year around if he so desired. Consequently the studio, at the extreme north end of the patio, is a complete and separate unit from the main house with its own living quarters, heating plant, etc.

The studio building is now designated by the Spencers as "the guest house" in summer and as "the week-end house," in winter. All members of the family, including the boys, Edson and Billy, and Susanne, the small daughter, are skating enthusiasts and spend most of their out of season week-ends at Lake Geneva as well as their summers.

The main house, the whole 110 feet width of it, fronts south, on the lake. Its white brick walls, except for the many windows and French doors, are almost completely covered with wistaria and English ivy. A stretch of velvety lawn slopes from the stone terrace in front of the house to the lake. On either side of this strip of close cut grass, just the width of the house, great trees of the unbroken forest close in on all sides, making it truly, a house in the woods.

It might also be called, "house-around-a-garden." Most houses have gardens around them but this house, with a charming disregard for custom, built itself "U" shaped, around the garden, the studio forming the north end. A long gallery runs along one side of the garden or courtyard, with the dining room wing opening from one end and the library-living room at the other end.

All inner windows in the main house and studio, upstairs and down, look out upon the patio and its limpid pool, blue as a Maxfield Parish sky. The whole enclosed garden is, in fact, reminiscent of the Italian gardens and villas painted by Parish, even to the clipped hedges, potted trees and plants, and the pairs of formal pyramidal arbor vitæ that stand on guard at each doorway. White flowers predominate in the garden, and with their abundance of deep green foliage against the gray of flagstone walks and mellow white of brick walls, the patio is always a place of restful coolness even on the hottest day.

Because of the many windows and glass doors opening upon the patio on one side, and the lawn and loggia on the other side, the whole effect throughout the downstairs rooms is of living outdoors. With considerable artistry Mrs. Spencer has carried out this scheme of bringing the garden into the house, not only in the white furniture and green and white chintz cushions and hangings, but in the flowers and growing things that are everywhere, in jars, bowls and vases or trailing from pots in wrought iron wall brackets.

The architecture of the house is a strange, but wholly delightful mixture of European and American design. Touches of old Spain and Italy are combined with bits of Germany and England. Many examples of the work of Frederick Bartlett are still to be found in the murals on the walls of the long gallery and especially around the deeply recessed windows. These are adorned with garlands and festoons of conventional flowers, horns of plenty, small pictures of knights on horseback, and prim little flower and fruit baskets.

This same stiff little flower basket in the form of plaques adorns the panels between the windows of the big English bay in the living room. The motif is carried out occasionally on the outside of the house, in keystones over doorways and windows, on cornices, etc. It appears even in the glazed brick underfoot in the inglenook of the billiard room fireplace and again in the brick of the floor of the dog trot that separates the billiard room and the morning room. Incidentally, this entry way houses Col. Spencer's interesting collection of early models of bicycles.

The hooded main entrance at the east side of the house looks out upon a circular driveway that surrounds a second pool. While this pool and the one in the enclosed garden are undoubtedly lovely, there is still another pool at the House in the Woods that is even lovelier because it is nature's own. Down in a wilderness of forget-me-nots is a deep grotto of old moss grown stones that echo and reëcho the gurgle of an ancient glacial spring, known to the natives of the region as Mallory's spring. It was famous even in Indian days, a hundred years ago, for its pure cold mineral waters which were reputed to have certain curative powers. Even today many of the older residents around the lake come by boat to the Spencer dock to have their carafes filled at Mallory's spring as they did forty and [illegible] years ago.

Association of U. Women Will Honor Founder

Miss Marion Talbot, founder of the American Association of University Women and dean emeritus of women at the University of Chicago, will be a guest of the association's Chicago branch tomorrow evening at a dinner celebrating her 81st birthday. The dinner will be held at 6:30 o'clock at Ida Noyes hall, 1212 East 59th street.

Miss Talbot's life and work, particularly her part in winning equality for women students at universities, will be discussed by Miss Josephine Allin, former president of the Chicago branch.

Miss Mary Barnett Gilson, assistant professor of economics at the University of Chicago, will summarize her speech on "Community Programs and National Welfare," made at the association's recent national convention at Denver, Colo.

It was at this convention that the Chicago and Illinois branches announced the completion of a $30,000 fellowship fund named for Miss Talbot. Through this fund fellowships will be awarded to women scholars for research work.

Mrs. Mayme I. Logsdon, associate professor of mathematics at the University of Chicago and only woman member of that department, is president of the Chicago branch. Under her leadership the branch is about to embark on a new type of program.

A canvass of the membership's interest is being made preparatory to deciding just what the nature of the program will be. Themes suggested are the study of democratic principles and methods; the appreciation and interpretation of the fine arts; the study of consumers' problems; and the changing situation of women in the modern world. Members also are invited to submit suggestions. Ethel Kawin heads the committee making the survey, with Mrs. Logsdon and Alice M. Mitchell, other members.

An endowment fund for the general needs of the Daughters of the American Revolution is to be established in connection with their golden jubilee celebration in 1940. Mrs. Henry M. Robert Jr., president general, made this announcement last week.

Mrs. Jacob Fredrich Zimmerman.

A 50th anniversary meeting will be held Oct. 11, 1940, in Constitution hall at national headquarters in Washington, D. C.

Other projects planned in connection with the jubilee celebration will be the construction of an archives room to house the society's collection of historical material; the presentation of a portrait of Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, the society's first president general, to the President Harrison mansion at Indianapolis, Ind., and further planting of pine trees in accordance with the society's conservation program.

Mrs. Jacob F. Zimmerman of Harvey, former Illinois state regent, will be chairman of press relations for the national society this year. Mrs. Samuel James Campbell of Mount Carroll, Ill., chairman of approved schools; Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne of Brookville, Ind., chairman of the good citizenship pilgrimage; Mrs. Imogen B. Emery of Cedar Rapids, Ia., chairman of national defense through patriotic education; Miss Ruth Bradley Sheldon of Milwaukee, Wis., chairman of the Caroline E. Holt scholarship fund; Mrs. Henry Bourne Joy of Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich., chairman of Real Daughters; and Mrs. George D. Schermerhorn of Reading, Mich., chairman of junior membership, are other national leaders from this part of the country.

Already the Daughters of the British Empire in Illinois have scheduled their annual bazaar at the Congress hotel for Nov. 17, 18, and 19. This event is an important source of revenue for the British Old People's home at Hollywood, Ill.

Plans for the benefit will be discussed by the bazaar executive committee at a meeting at 11:30 o'clock Thursday at the home of Mrs. Percy Mather, general chairman, 7607 Sheridan road. Mrs. Helen S. Cole, treasurer of the state society, also will be treasurer of the bazaar. Mrs. Harry Hughes of Chicago heads the Illinois organization.

Skippers Busy in Nantucket Over Regatta

NANTUCKET, MASS.

The annual Nantucket regatta, high point of the local yachting season, will be the outstanding feature of the busy week which faces members of the vacation colony. During the next few days skippers from yacht clubs all along the southern Massachusetts coast will gather their crews and head their boats toward this sandy island, 30 miles out in the Atlantic. By Friday Nantucket harbor will be a forest of masts, as scores of water craft, ranging from tiny racing boats to majestic yachts, swing at anchor between Brant Point and Monomoy.

Friday afternoon will see the start of the extensive week-end racing schedule, which will include the newly inaugurated Nantucket Sound race on Sunday. This event will take the contestants around the four lightships in Nantucket Sound and will be restricted to ocean-going boats having full cruising equipment.

The regatta ball, premier social event of the season, will attract members of the island's dancing set to the Yacht club on Friday evening. Many dinner parties in honor of the visiting skippers and their crews will precede the ball.

PLAN TRIP

Mrs. John R. Coughlan, formerly Patricia Ann Collins of Chicago, and her bridegroom of June 30 will sail Sept. 1 to spend two months in Europe and Africa. The bride studied at the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts. Mr. Coughlan is a graduate of Northwestern University. The wedding took place in New York.

Mrs. Sanford R. Gifford and Carter S. Gifford of Lake Shore drive have been vacationing at the White Elephant.

Nantucket's famous old windmill, known locally as the Old Mill, which still grinds corn in spite of its two centuries of service, is one of the most popular of the local Historical association's exhibits. Among those who visited the ancient structure during the past few days were Mr. and Mrs. William F. Ray and their children, William, Ruth, and Wade Ray, and Marjorie Lloyd, all of Chicago.

Nearly three centuries ago Nantucket was the center of a bitter political feud between the powerful Coffin and Gardner families, a quarrel which began when Newcomer John Gardner dared oppose the town's despotic founder and patriarch, Tristram Coffin. But in 1685 Jethro, scion of the Coffin clan, fell in love with beautiful Mary Gardner, and a year later the wedding of the young couple reconciled the embattled families in true story book style. As a wedding present Jethro and Mary received from their father a brand new spacious home located atop Sunset hill. Now, 244 years later, this house, erected as a symbol of romance and reconciliation, is famous as the oldest house on the island and is a prized possession of the Nantucket Historical association.

The feature of the Nantucket Neighbors' meeting next Tuesday evening will be an address on civil war prisons by Gen. Malvern-Hill Barnum, prominent member of the island summer colony.

Island aviation enthusiasts are looking forward to Nantucket's first air meet, which will be held at Nobadeer airport next Sunday.

Col. Robert Stewart of Chicago was elected vice president of the Nantucket Civic league at its annual meeting held recently. One of the most important phases of the Civic league's activity is mosquito control work. Col. Stewart has charge of this project.

Thursday and Friday evenings summer theater devotees will see the Nantucket players in "Shore Acres" at the 'Sconset casino. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick P. Boynton of Chicago are among the patrons of this talented theatrical group.

"The period for a new election of a citizen, to administer the executive government of the United States, being not far distant, and the time actually arrived when your thoughts must be employed in designating a person who is to be clothed with that important trust, it appears to me proper, especially as it may conduce to a more distinct expression of the public voice, that I should now apprise you of the resolution I have formed, to decline being considered among the number of those out of whom a choice is to be made.

"I beg you, at the same time, to do me the justice to be assured that this resolution has not been taken without a strict regard to all the considerations appertaining to the relation which binds a dutiful citizen to his country; and that in withdrawing the tender of service which silence, in my situation, might imply, I am influenced by no diminution of zeal for your future interest, but am supported by a full conviction that the step is no deficiency of grateful respect for your past kindness, compatible with both."

"If some termination be not fixed by the Constitution or supplied by practice, the term, nominally four years, will in fact become for life, and history shows how easily that degenerates into an inheritance."

—THOMAS JEFFERSON.

1825

"The example of four Presidents voluntarily retiring at the end of their eighth year, and the progress of public opinion that the principle is salutary, have given it in practice the form of precedent and usage; insomuch that should a President consent to be a candidate for a third election I trust he would be rejected at this demonstration of ambitious views."

—THOMAS JEFFERSON.

"Resolved, That in the opinion of this house the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States in retiring from the presidential office after their second term, has become by universal concurrence a part of our republican system of government; and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril to our free institutions."

Our Anti-Third Term Tradition!

By WILLIAM HOSTER

LOOMING ominously upon the political horizon is the age-old issue of a third term for the President of the United States. There is already widespread discussion of Franklin D. Roosevelt's attitude toward the controversial precedent which limits a chief executive to two terms, with every indication that the issue will have important repercussions in the presidential campaign of 1940. Briefly put, the question is posed:

● Will Mr. Roosevelt, to insure perpetuation of a completed New Deal program, ignore the precedent and offer himself for reëlection, in disregard of the unbroken rule against three successive terms in the presidency? If so, will the people in his behalf wave aside a tradition which is as old as government under the constitution?

● What are the origin, the history, and the validity of the third term precedent?

● George Washington, first President of the republic, established it. Approaching the end of his second term as chief executive, in the historic farewell address, he made this declaration:

● "The period for a new election of a citizen, to administer the executive government of the United States, being not far distant, and the time actually arrived when your thoughts must be employed in designating a person who is to be clothed with that important trust, it appears to me proper, especially as it may conduce to a more distinct expression of the public voice, that I should now apprise you of the resolution I have formed, to decline being considered among the number of those out of whom a choice is to be made.

● "I beg you, at the same time, to do me the justice to be assured that this resolution has not been taken without a strict regard to all the considerations appertaining to the relation which binds a dutiful citizen to his country; and that in withdrawing the tender of service which silence, in my situation, might imply, I am influenced by no diminution of zeal for your future interest, no deficiency of grateful respect for your past kindness, but am supported by a full conviction that the step is compatible with both."

● Washington did not deliberately by this declaration establish a precedent against more than two presidential terms. Here is no assumption of right or authority to write an adamant law. His wisdom had been a dominating force in the building of the nation. It was to him that the people had turned—the constitution ratified—to take the helm and chart the course (Continued on page four.)

Looking at Hollywood

with Ed Sullivan

Teamwork Is Hard Work, Screen Couples Find

By ED SULLIVAN

Hollywood.

IN THE general and widespread felicitations upon the reunion of William Powell and Myrna Loy, romantic duo of the "Thin Man" series, it might be well to observe the paradox that while these teams of the screen have won great favor with the studios, the theaters, and the fans, and while great gobs of sentimental literature have been written about them, the teammates invariably conclude the association at loggerheads. At the moment Miss Loy and Powell are the merriest of accomplices, but if it had not been for Bill's protracted illness, which halted the "Thin Man" series, it's dollars to doughnuts that by this time Myrna and Bill would be chafing at cinema's double harness.

This lugubrious view is not inspired, however, by Miss Loy and Mr. Powell, who are quite sane, decent persons. It is inspired by the Hollywood record, which shouts that teammates of the screen get on each other's nerves. Most recent instance of this was provided by W. C. Fields and Edgar Bergen, teamed in "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man." The stories which some gullible reporters sent out of here were to the effect that all was gayety on the set, that Fields spent most of his spare time playing jokes on Bergen, and that Bergen, in the same hail-fellow-well-met spirit, kept the studio convulsed with the pranks he practiced on Fields.

As a matter of cold reportorial record, these "teammates" of the radio and the screen gave the entire Universal lot a set of acute nervous stomachs.

Despite all of the polite denials which accompanied the dissolution of the Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers professional comradeship, the split-up of the dancing team could be traced directly to their own desires in the matter. Fred and Ginger, outside of the usual run-of-the-mill irritations, really liked each other, but both felt that the continued teaming was a species of "typing" that was retarding both of them.

Exit of Maurice Chevalier from Hollywood was because he guessed wrong in a similar situation. Chevalier, confident that he and not Jeanette MacDonald represented the box office strength of the Paramount team, told them that he would not make any more pictures with her. The decision put Chevalier on his own, and he flopped at the box office. Miss MacDonald continued merrily on her way and in Nelson Eddy found a teammate even more suited to her than Chevalier.

Both Eddy and Miss MacDonald have been anxious to break up this combination. Recently they put it to a test. Eddy made "Let Freedom Ring" as a solo starring vehicle. It laid a terrific egg. Miss MacDonald made "Broadway Serenade" as a solo starring venture. The egg which it laid matched the egg which Eddy had deposited. So they'll be back together again, not because they crave each other's professional company, but because it is good business.

Recently Warners have teamed John Garfield and Priscilla Lane in three consecutive hits, "Four Daughters," "Daughters Courageous," and "Dust Be My Destiny." But you can bet that ere long Garfield and Miss Lane will be telling the front office that they'd like to do a picture with somebody else. Just as Joan Blondell and Jimmy Cagney split apart after making a few pictures together. Actors and actresses, and their agents, always are fearful of too long an association with another player, because each performer wants to carve out his own career and doesn't want his or her fate to be tied up to somebody else.

Norma Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien, in the silent days, were one of the most profitable of romantic teams. So, too, was the combination of Janet Gaynor and Charlie Farrell, unearthed by Director Frank Borzage in the making of "Seventh Heaven." John Bunny had Flora Finch. William S. Hart and Jane Novak were screen inseparables. Marie Dressler and Wally Beery teamed briefly. Mary Boland and Charlie Ruggles were well on their way to a prosperous teaming, but the studio let the scripts go haywire and ruined them.

Today, however, the tendency is for your star, male or female, to skip from one partner to another. Irene Dunne in quick succession has played opposite Cary Grant, Fred MacMurray, and Charles Boyer. Carole Lombard has played opposite Fredric March, Fred MacMurray, Jimmy Stewart, and Cary Grant. Norma Shearer has had Tyrone Power in one picture, Clark Gable in her next. Joan Crawford has been cast with Spencer Tracy in one, Jimmy Stewart the next. Greta Garbo has refused to be paired off permanently with any one male star since her partnership with the late John Gilbert.

It's a far cry from the old days when Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle made fourteen pictures in a row. A distant echo of the good old days when Francis X. Bushman pursued Beverly Bayne in picture after picture, and Rudolph Valentino chased Agnes Ayres out of one sandstorm into the next. Alice Terry and Ramon Novarro, Mildred Davis and Harold Lloyd, Marie Prevost and Kenneth Harlan, and Vilma Banky and Ronald Colman were other famous partnerships.

Beneath the surface of each of these charming duets was a background of bitterness and friction. Times have changed, but human nature and human jealousies remain fairly constant.

Sailing Is Popularized

THE PRESENCE of 1,500,000 craft in American inland and coastal waters indicates that sailing is no longer a rich man's luxury. John Waring of the Tribune staff has prepared the accompanying table to illustrate the wide variety of craft available to would-be sailors.

The "glorified rowboat" called the Frostbite dinghy is not decked over and is strictly a harbor craft. From the slightly larger Snipe to the seaworthy Tumlaren and 8-10 meter types the craft have varying ranges, depending upon size. However, the four last types in the racing division are not being built much any more, as the cruising class has several craft equally fast and much more comfortable for pleasure cruising. These larger yachts have all the necessary accommodations for living, including a galley, berths, bathroom, lighting system, library, and so on. But it is the Star sloop and its smaller companions that give most beginners their first taste of ownership.

Diary of Sea Flight

THIS IS the second installment of a diary of a trip to Europe in the Atlantic Clipper. Last week we told about the takeoff and the early hours. Now we pick up the story late at night.

Paris, Two Days from America

By WAYNE THOMIS

11:30 p. m.—Our speed has diminished. We've already passed the northernmost point in our circular course and are beginning to head back southward again. The winds that have helped are now becoming quartering winds. As we turn still farther south they will become head winds. Capt. Wallace Culbertson, skipper of the flying boat, has revised his early estimate of 12 hours 52 minutes for the flight and says we'll probably make it in about 14:30. Mars has risen, and star sights have been taken on the planet and also on Saturn, which has been visible for hours. These sights have indicated we are now making about 135 miles an hour ground speed.

11:50 p. m.—Most of the party has gone to bed. In the smoking room half a dozen of us are sitting in a blackjack game, sipping fresh glasses of champagne.

12:10 a. m.—Capt. W. A. Winston, second officer of the flight, arising from a nap of more than an hour, and with a half hour still to kill before going on watch, tells us stories of Mexico, Guatemala, and of Wake Island gooney birds and the strange dances they do in unison. He tells us also of how the young birds learn to fly. They have the same difficulties experienced by humans in learning how to operate an airplane.

Captain Winston also warns us to expect to see a beacon light on the horizon visible out the left windows of the ship. He says the light will appear about 1:30 a. m. and will flash red, then white, much like the airways beacons found on our own domestic airways. We don't understand how it could be possible out here over the empty ocean. And he swears the light we'll see will not come from a ship.

12:30 a. m.—Waiting for Captain Winston's beacon. Meanwhile we're playing blackjack, and some of the crew, just coming off watch, are standing behind us munching cheese and crackers and drinking glasses of milk before going off for naps themselves.

1:15 a. m.—Captain Culbertson has come into our cabin to watch for the beacon. "Wait and see it," he says in refusing to explain what it can be. Already there's definitly a lighter streak along the eastern horizon.

1:25 a. m.—I just saw the beacon. There was a red flash, then a white one. They are continuing at intervals of about twenty-five seconds. They're clear, bright, just like an airways beacon seen on a clear night from an airplane. "It is a beacon," exclaims one of the watchers. "It's the most wonderful thing I've ever seen."

"No," chuckles the skipper. "It's Venus, the planet. When she rises on clear nights you always get that flashing effect. She's fooled me many times. I've been sure the light was from a ship. Actually it's that the star's beams are broken up when we see them through thin clouds of water vapor. The red light gets past, but the other colors do not. Then momentarily we see the star in a clear spot and the white light comes through."

Capt. Culbertson

Capt. Winston

We watched for ten minutes while the star swiftly rose into the sky. When it was well above the cloud wisps near the water its light was white and steady.

The bright streak along the horizon, however, is the sun. It's getting lighter momentarily. I glance at my watch and can't believe the time—1:45 a. m. Sunrise at midnight—almost. It's not midnight according to world time, however. We're in a zone that is about three hours ahead of Chicago time.

2 a. m.—Radio Operator R. A. Humanson has just spoiled the night for us by admitting that none of the copy filed with him after 5 p. m. has been cleared. In disgust I am turning in for a little sleep.

5:05 a. m.—I've just awakened. In spite of only three hours' sleep I'm refreshed and hungry. But I've missed breakfast. The stewards give me crackers, cream cheese and jelly, with one glass of milk. Only one, because our supply is almost gone.

5:40—We've just sighted the island of Fayal, the principal one of the Azores group. We're down to 1,000 feet now, and the square fields, yellow and green and brown against the green mass of the mountainous islands, are cheerful. Apparently all the houses in the Azores are pink or white, with red tiled roofs.

6:03—We're on the water of Horta harbor. We came lower and lower as we approached, made one pass across the harbor to let the skipper see the wind sock here. Then inland, passing just above a high ridge, out over the town of Horta, and down just off the beach—for the light wind is directly onshore. Our flight here consumed exactly 15 hours 8 minutes. We've burned away a lot of gasoline, and we land very slowly, floating along just above the water for half a mile before our speed is lost and the keel touches.

6:15—We've taxied back to the harbor and are moored to a buoy. Captain Culbertson orders refueling immediately and permits none of us to go ashore. He must get away in an hour if he expects to make Lisbon, 1,050 miles still ahead of us, before dark. That's essential, because there are no facilities there for night landing.

All we can see from the ship is a crumbling fort, a grubby water front street with several shops, obviously drinking places. All of us crowd around the doors that open onto the water wings. They are opened, and we try to talk to the natives who row out to us in small boats.

7 a. m.—We are taxiing out of Horta harbor, having taken aboard 2,800 gallons of fuel.

7:15—We have just become air-borne. The takeoff here was very gradual. None of the jerk as in Long Island sound. The big boat came up on the step increased its speed, and then ten seconds after Captain Culbertson lowered the flaps ten degrees she lifted off. We are climbing to the northeast again off on a new arc to the northward. We pass the entire length of Pico and break through the clouds at 7,000 feet just before reaching the end. I'm going back to sleep.

12 noon—I've just been awakened for lunch. I'm ravenous and rested. And I have just time to dine and write my story before we are scheduled to arrive. Our speed is about 14[illegible] miles an hour. There are many fleecy clouds, but the sea is in sight most of the time. It is smooth, azure blue, and monotonous. The tables are set and the stewards are calling me.

1:30—My story is ready for filing, all except the elapsed time and speeds, that we'll get upon our arrival. The ocean crossing will have been completed, and if all goes as well as it has up to this time it will certainly demonstrate the fitness of Pan American Airways to commence re[illegible] service. I've just learned that we were blown off our course a little to the north last night, so our actual distance flown from New York to Horta was closer to 2,550 miles than the direct 2,397 miles. That little deviation was inconsequential, because we still had fuel for about 700 more miles of flying when we descended at Horta.

2:20—We've just sighted the shore. It's a faint line beneath clouds. And we've seen half a dozen small freighters in the last half hour. We're droning on, gradually slipping downhill. The water is faintly browner as we approach shore.

2:40—We've reached the point where the water from the Tagus river blends with the sea. It's a mile or more from shore, a great yellow blotch on the darker sea water. Now we've reached the shore line and are running up the river, that here is three miles wide. Lisbon is spreading out beneath us.

2:45 p. m.—We're on the water. We passed along the water front, saw several submarines and a destroyer anchored offshore, swung to the south, and landed in a long, slow glide to the northeast. We're docking now, having picked up a buoy. Another Pan American launch—Pana[illegible] II.—is holding a line while we drift with the river current to a floating platform at the end of a long floating walkway. Portuguese and American flags are flying. And, although it is now about 3 p. m. Chicago time, it's dusk here. Our elapsed time to date is 23 hours 50 minutes.

At this point in our journey there was an interlude of

Netherlands Stiffens Its Military Backbone

Invader Will Find Army Prepared

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

The Hague.

STIRRED by Europe's alarums, the Netherlands is making fast headway on an extensive program of military and naval preparedness. Measures being taken will repair neglect of many years by a people never so militaristic as, for example, the Germans.

Most vital in this program is the complete reorganization of frontier fortifications, with special emphasis upon those facing Germany. Army strategy remains based on the classic principle of the Dutch water line, which requires that German invasion be retarded while the midcountry along the Guelders valley is being flooded.

To give this plan greater chance of success under new conditions the army is being increased by stronger annual levies. As against 19,500 formerly called to the colors yearly, 32,000 now are called up. This measure will raise the strength of the army from 300,000 to 450,000, and in time of war it will enable the nation to muster a total force, including reserves and volunteers, of 850,000.

To meet the initial shock of invasion the Netherlands will have available hundreds of thousands of soldiers who will be fighting literally for their own farms and villages. These men have been organized into new frontier battalions and designated for active duty in garrisons near their homes.

All points at which an enemy might cross the larger rivers, such as the Maas, the Rhine, the Waal, and the Ysel, are covered by strong cement blockhouses which are always manned by the military, even in peace time. Special troops constantly guard the bridges and are under orders to blow them up immediately upon the outbreak of war. Frontier roads are commanded by heavy artillery which would destroy them when the enemy crosses the border.

As a result of these well planned measures military experts estimate that even a great German army would be well occupied for three days in forcing its way to the water line, which in the meantime would have been established by expert engineers. The water line itself, miles wide, would cut off the heart of the country, the provinces of North and South Holland, from the eastern provinces, making it impossible for an invader to reach the former by land. The cities of Amsterdam, The Hague, and Rotterdam would thus be well defended.

Although the Dutch government expects no violation of its neutrality by any power which might invade by sea, it nevertheless has put in effect several measures for defense of the coast. Near the waterways along the North sea coast, forts have been built and armed with heavy artillery. Near The Hague the dunes bristle with pillboxes and machine guns which it is believed would prevent hostile troops from making a landing. Extensive mine fields protect naval centers.

In aviation undeniably the Netherlands is backward and will find it a major undertaking to attain strength comparable with that of powers better equipped. This situation is being relieved to some extent by daily deliveries of planes from the Fokker plant at Amsterdam and the Koolhoven factory at Rotterdam, which are specializing in the manufacture of military and naval aircraft. Simultaneously a large number of military airdromes have been established in recent months, especially near the coast and the frontiers.

The vast fleets of planes being built up by the great powers, nevertheless, have given the Dutch government grave concern over the problem of air defense. Because of this potential menace the Netherlands for the first time in history feels insecure despite the water line, for now an enemy, even though held at bay by land, can strike at the heart of the country from the air.

To prepare for this contingency the new device of private defense is being developed. In the more vital parts of the Netherlands, heavy industries as well as municipalities are organizing their own anti-aircraft units, arming them with guns for which they pay themselves. The government, highly pleased with this procedure, is coöperating. In addition the government during the last year has organized several specialized anti-aircraft regiments. These are distributed throughout the country to afford widespread protection, though naturally they are strongest at vital points.

To supplement the production of Dutch factories, large orders for naval aircraft recently were placed in the United States. These planes are for use chiefly in the Netherlands East Indies.

For naval defense an unusually large program is being shaped. Most important elements in this are three battle cruisers of 30,000 tons each, construction of which may be expected to begin in the near future. The present Dutch fleet includes several new and rebuilt cruisers, in addition to older vessels, and numerous submarines, of which most are intended for the defense of the Netherlands East Indies.

In case of war the Dutch fleet in Europe will be employed only to defend the sea estuaries and lay a great number of mine fields by which the entire Dutch coast would be cut off from the North sea. The latter part of this mission would be omitted, however, should Great Britain be an ally of the Netherlands.

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: Until today I have been content to stand aside and read others' praise of my favorite stars. But now I take up my pen (hoping to start the ball rolling) to extend the highest praise to Greer Garson on her performance in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." Unfortunately I missed your review of this picture, but I am sure that you felt the same way. Robert Donat gave the swellest performance of his career, but without Miss Garson's naturally winning way I feel sure the movie wouldn't have been half so well liked. I hope other fans will write their opinion on this promising star, too. Could you give a short biography of her life, etc.? Please!

GREER GARSON
Called real star of "Mr. Chips."

All the luck in the world to you and to the column. T. N. T.

Editor's note: A superb performance in a truly great picture. Thanks for your interest and kindly wishes. Miss Garson was born in County Down, in the north of Ireland. Educated London university and Grenoble university in the south of France. Well known on the English stage. She's 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 112 pounds, and has red hair and green eyes.

Dear Miss Tinée: "Captain Fury" struck me as being a pretty awful combination of the worst attributes of "Adventures of Robin Hood," "Captain Blood," and "The Lone Ranger"—latter predominant.

When they take a swell actor like Brian Aherne (what is there about that bird that reminds one of a girl?), a better one like Victor McLaglen or John Carradine, and a sweet kid like June Lang, and the result is no better than "Captain Fury" was, there's nothing for the average fan to do but sit there and shudder.

Your reaction to that clambake shouldn't have been "Good," but "God, what a mess!"

Yours, surprised and disappointed,
WILLEMINA PHILLIPS.

Editor's note: Why, Willemina!

Dear Mae Tinée: I want to put in my two cents' worth for Dick Powell. I agree that "Shipmates Forever" was one swell picture. I never miss a Dick Powell picture, as he is my favorite, and I have seen him in a good many pictures. If they don't like his pictures let them stay away. There are still plenty of Powell fans who do enjoy his pictures. There are five in this family, and none of us misses one of them. I do think they could give him better stories—more of the "Thanks a Million" and "Shipmates Forever" type. More power to Dick Powell. Please print this.
MRS. E. S.

Editor's note: It's in print! Mebbe Dick will see it. Youhopeyouhopeyouhope?

Dear Miss Tinée: I have just seen "Wings of the Navy," as this has been the second appearance it has made here. In this picture there were two Harrington brothers—wasn't the eldest George Brent and the youngest John Payne? I would appreciate it very much if you would tell me something about John Payne, and please print a picture of him as he appeared in "Wings of the Navy."

JOHN PAYNE
in "Wings of the Navy."

Lots of luck, and hoping to hear from you, I am, sincerely,
CATHERINE BURNS.

Editor's note: George Brent and John Payne were cast as brothers in "Wings of the Navy." Mr. Payne was born in Roanoke, Va. Educated Mercersburg academy in Pennsylvania, Roanoke college, University of Virginia, and Columbia university. He has brown hair and green eyes. Married Anne Shirley, screen actress. And here's your picture. Like it? Thanks and—you're welcome!

Anti-Third Term Tradition!

The Story of a Popular Precedent

of the newly launched ship of state. Serving two terms, and with the government successfully under way, Washington decided for himself, with that modesty which is the token of greatness, that two terms encompassed the period for which he believed his services were needed, and stepped serenely into retirement. Whatever binding force lies in his renunciation is supplied in the fact that it was the Father of His Country who uttered it, and acted upon it. If a rule was set, a precedent established, it was the people of the United States who set it, on the basis of his example. Through 143 years of the nation's history it has remained unbroken.

Incidentally, a second precedent accompanied the first. To afford ample time for the people to go about the task of selecting a new President, Washington, six months in advance of the time for the election of his successor, gave notice of his intention to retire.

John Adams succeeded Washington; but, serving only one term, no question of a third term arose. Then came Thomas Jefferson—"Father of Democracy"—and it was the author of the Declaration of Independence who, by emulating Washington's example, gave the precedent the the binding force which has carried it forward to today. Great pressure was brought to bear upon Jefferson to accept a third term, but, reaffirming his belief in the "democratic principle of rotation in office," he refused.

"If some termination be not fixed by the constitution or supplied by practice," he declared, "the term, nominally four years, will in fact become for life, and history shows how easily that degenerates into an inheritance. Believing that a representative government, responsible at short intervals of election, is that which produces the greatest sum of happiness to mankind, I feel it a duty to do nothing which shall impair that principle; and I should unwillingly be the person who, disregarding the sound precedent set by an illustrious predecessor, should furnish the first example of prolongation beyond the second term of office."

Replying to a letter from Governor Sullivan of Massachusetts urging acceptance of nomination for a third term, he wrote:

"I derive great personal consolation from the assurances of your friendly letter that the electors of Massachusetts have viewed me with favor as a candidate for a third presidential term. But the duty of retirement is so strongly impressed on my mind that it is impossible for me to think of that."

And finally, as President Monroe neared the end of his second term, the Sage of Monticello wrote:

"The example of four Presidents voluntarily retiring at the end of their eighth year, and the progress of public opinion that the principle is salutary, have given it in practice the form of precedent and usage; inasmuch that should a President consent to be a candidate for a third election I trust he would be rejected at this demonstration of ambitious views."

Madison and Monroe, who had successively followed Jefferson, each served two terms, and John Quincy Adams one. Jackson, who advocated a single presidential term, accepted a second, but resolutely repelled a third nomination. He was the last two-term President until Abraham Lincoln; and it was not until the final year of the second term of Ulysses S. Grant that, for the first time since Washington's renunciation, the validity of the precedent was challenged.

As Washington's genius had brought the colonies through the revolution and guided the newly created nation through the critical first years of its history, so it was the military prowess of Grant in the Civil war which had upheld Lincoln's hands in the supreme test of the nation's stability under the constitution. It might have been thought, therefore, that if the Washington precedent could be broken by any one it would be by the hero of Appomattox, especially in a period when the Civil war was still a poignant memory. But resolute opposition to a third term even for U. S. Grant promptly developed when a movement in his behalf was started. Under the shibboleth of "no third term," leagues were formed throughout the country to uphold the Washington tradition. There were denunciations of "the man on horseback" and cries of "Cæsarism" and "dictator." In several sections of the country rioting occurred when the conflicting elements clashed.

The National Progressive party convention of 1912.

It was not a fight against Grant so much as it was a defense of the formula which, buttressed now by the acquiescence of fourteen Presidents over a stretch of eighty years, had become fixed in the national mind as an unwritten principle of democracy. Amid the tumult on Dec. 15, 1875, the federal house of representatives took official recognition of the situation in a resolution which was the first formal expression of approval of the Washington precedent. It read, the vote on passage standing 234 to 18:

"Resolved, That in the opinion of this house the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States in retiring from the presidential office after their second term has become by universal concurrence a part of our republican system of government; and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril to our free institutions."

Before this reassertion of the Washington precedent Grant bowed in a statement disavowing any ambition for a third term.

Nevertheless General Grant was once more to become the center of a national controversy over the force and validity of the doctrine. Departing from the White House in March, 1877, he embarked upon his notable world tour. Upon hir return he was accorded a tumultuous popular welcome, out of which, he now having been out of office nearly four years, grew another movement to return him to the presidency, and a new element was thrust into the third term formula.

While there was a general acceptance of the validity of the precedent, the point was now made in Grant's behalf that the doctrine ran only against three successive terms; and since four years had elapsed since he had relinquished office, the bar did not stand against him. Brushing aside this technical point, popular opposition rallied against a third term under any conditions. The cry of autocracy and dictatorship was again raised. An anti-third term convention, meeting in St. Louis, with fourteen states represented, unanimously adopted resolutions against Grant's renomination. Other meetings voiced the popular protest. Pitched battles were fought in the streets.

Feeling ran high in the Republican national convention which assembled June 2, 1880, to name a presidential ticket. Notwithstanding the protests against a third term for Grant, his popularity enabled him to muster 304 delegates on the first ballot. But through the several hundred succeeding polls the opposition held firm. Grant was never able to gather more than 306 of the 379 votes necessary for a choice. Ultimately James A. Garfield was named.

A lapse of thirty-two years followed before the precedent again engaged national attention. Theodore Roosevelt, twenty-sixth President of the United States, through his dynamic force and picturesqueness was a popular idol and protagonist, under the Square Deal, of many of the essential doctrines of the New Deal today. Like Grant, Teddy Roosevelt would have been regarded as one likely to smash the age-old tradition. Instead he gave it modern interpretation and new vigor in terms and under conditions which constitute a vital chapter in the history of the first President's formula.

Succeeding to the presidency in 1901 following the death of William McKinley, Roosevelt served three and one-half years of the unexpired second term for which Mr. McKinley had been elected, and became President by popular choice in the general election of 1904. The result assured on the night of that election, Roosevelt issued this self-effacing statement:

The Republican convention of 1880 in the Exposition building, Chicago, where Grant was defeated for a third term.

"The wise custom which limits the President to two terms regards the substance and not the form; and under no circumstances will I be a candidate for or accept another nomination."

Within the compass of this statement Roosevelt accepted as his own first term the unexpired three and one-half years of McKinley's second term, while at the same time he subscribed to the validity of the Washington formula by foreswearing in advance any further preferment in the presidential office.

Nearing in 1908 the end of the presidential term to which he had been elected four years previously, Roosevelt's popularity was at its peak. Though in the preceding December he had reasserted his 1904 disclaimer, a specious temptation assailed him. Varying the artifice which had been adopted by Grant's following, the third term ban, it was urged, stood only athwart three elective terms; and since his first term of three and one-half years as President constituted the remainder of the term for which McKinley had been elected, the way was open for him to accept a second elective term without violation of the historic precedent.

But it was against this specific theory of a second elective term that Roosevelt had directed his renunciatory statement of 1904. He would probably have been nominated by the Republican convention which was then assembling in Chicago. But, regarding "the substance and not the form," he forced the nomination of William H. Taft.

Here one of those interesting parallels which abound in history emerges. Grant, denied a third nomination, embarked on a world tour, and upon his return was made the center of a popular demonstration out of which grew the abortive effort to return him to the White House. Now Roosevelt, departing on his retirement on an African game hunt, which was supplemented upon his return by a triumphal tour of Europe, was accorded a similar demonstration when he arrived back in the United States. A movement for his return to the presidency followed. Entering the contest as a candidate in support of those Square Deal policies which he declared had been betrayed by his successor, Mr. Taft, Roosevelt was denied a renomination by the Republican convention of 1912. He launched a third party—the National Progressive—and was beaten at the polls in the ensuing election.

This defeat of the effort to return Roosevelt to the presidency, incidentally, is the only instance in the history of the nation in which the people have had an opportunity to pass judgment at the polls on one who had already served two terms in the presidency. It was inconclusive, because, though he had served seven and one-half years in the office, only four of them had comprised an elective term. Moreover, it was a three-party contest in which Roosevelt ran second against Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic candidate. It is interesting also in the fact that there are already hints of a third party in the 1940 presidential campaign.

Although in 1920, near the end of his second term, Wilson was a stricken man, yet he still possessed great powers as a vote-getter. Nevertheless the Democratic convention of that year did not nominate him. The anti-third term tradition prevailed.

Once more, in 1927, the Washington precedent was to become a live issue, and under conditions and accompanying circumstances which bring it down to the present day. Here the historic parallel again emerges.

Calvin Coolidge, as Vice President, succeeded to the presidency in 1922 on the death of Warren G. Harding. Serving out the unexpired two years of the term for which Mr. Harding had been elected, Mr. Coolidge became President by popular choice in 1924, thus duplicating the case of Theodore Roosevelt twenty years previously. As the end of the term for which he had been elected drew near, speculation in increasing measure spread over the land as to the President's intentions regarding renomination for a second elective term, which Theodore Roosevelt in the same situation had rejected.

Through Washington's initiative, Jefferson's emulation, the acquiescence of their successors, and its definite affirmation in the cases of Grant and Theodore Roosevelt, the precedent against a third term had now become generally accepted as an established national policy. So there was an absence, while the nation awaited the breaking of Mr. Coolidge's silence, of the agitation which had arisen in Grant's time over the issue. There were scattered references to the third term precedent and hints of a rising storm, and then Mr. Coolidge, considerably ahead of the six months' notice in advance that Washington had given of his determination to retire, made his famous statement:

"I do not choose to run."

This statement was issued Aug. 2, 1927. There was no general questioning of the sincerity of the President's declaration; but to many observers it seemed to be lacking in definiteness and finality, since it contained nothing that would bar his acceptance of a renomination if the Republican convention should draft him for another term. Nevertheless the third term specter having again stalked across the political stage, a widespread desire developed for a definite, modern definition of the Washington formula, and in this situation the senate of the United States turned to the house of representatives' resolution of Dec. 15, 1875, in which, at the height of the Grant third term movement, the precedent had received its first formal, written interpretation since the renunciatory act of George Washington.

On Feb. 10, 1928, four months in advance of the Republican national convention, the senate adopted in identical form and made its own the house resolution of 1875, by that action not only bridging a gap of fifty-three years but going farther—clarifying and strengthening the doctrine in a manner which gives it what present-day force and pertinency the people of the United States may attach to it. Slight opposition was offered in the senate to the terms of the resolution. It is the debate on the scope and import of the precedent, and the action taken on amendments proposed to the resolution, which make it of especial interest as the issue of a third presidential term again forces itself upon the notice of the American electorate.

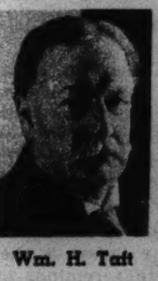
Thus an amendment offered by Senator Fess sought to have a President declared ineligible only after a second elective term. Under this interpretation Theodore Roosevelt, having served out the unexpired term of William McKinley, and Calvin Coolidge, having served out the unexpired term of Warren G. Harding, still would have been eligible for a second elective term. The senate rejected the amendment. Another amendment sought to eliminate from the original house resolution the phrase that "any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril to our free institutions." This also was voted down.

Then, as the debate neared its close, Senator Bingham offered an amendment which, adopted, would have had vital influence in shaping the interpretation of the third term formula in the present disturbed condition of world affairs. In full agreement with the general purpose of the Washington precedent, the Bingham resolution was introduced by the senator to cover a specific point. It made a President ineligible for a third term "except in a case of grave national emergency."

No such emergency existed at the time. The World war had passed into history, and the outlook for lasting peace was assuring under the commitments which had been made six years before by the powers participating in the Washington disarmament conference of 1922. It was clear that the author of the amendment had some future contingency in view in offering the amendment. The senate rejected it.

Summing up, in this latest available interpretation of the precedent, the senate gave formal expression to its conviction that the precedent handed down by Washington is a vital, living principle having behind it years of unbroken observance, which has become a part of our republican system of government, any departure from which would be unwise, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril to our free institutions; and, finally, that not even "in a case of grave national emergency" would there be warant for disregarding its terms.

Where the constitution is silent on the point no limit can be put on the number of terms a President may serve save through amendment of the charter or through action by the people at the polls as specific instances arise. Historic precedent alone fixes the limit at two terms. There was no binding force in Washington's example or in Jefferson's emulation of it, nor in the acquiescence of their successors down to the present day. No more was there any binding force in the house resolution in Grant's day or the senate action in the Coolidge period, aside from their registered indorsement of the doctrine. There is, however, a significant emphasis on the nonpartisan character of the precedent in the action of the two houses of congress which has been noted, for it was a Democratic house of representatives which adopted the anti-third term resolution in the case of General Grant in 1875, while it was a Republican senate which fifty-three years later applied the resolution in identical form to a President of its own party persuasion, and, in rejecting proposed amendments which would have weakened it, inferentially added strength and force to the original doctrine.



Wm. H. Taft

It was Washington's own act and Jefferson's emulation of that example which established the precedent. In support of it, in addition to unbroken observance, there has accumulated through the years a formidable array of upholding doctrine based upon experience in our practice of democracy. It has been arrestingly observed, for instance, that almost exactly eight years intervened between the battle of Lexington and Concord—where the shot was fired that was "heard 'round the world"—and the surrender of the British at Yorktown; and that the period in which American independence was achieved on the battlefield is therefore sufficient for any two-term President to work out a program to which he has committed himself.

More than two terms, it is urged, would offer irresistible opportunities for an ambitious incumbent—with control of vast patronage and distribution of public funds, his influence over congress despite constitutional limitations, and by appeals to political ambition, selfish interest, and class prejudice—to build up a personal organization which would make his continuance in office self-perpetuating.

Having in mind the Bingham amendment to set aside the precedent in a case of "grave national emergency," it is pointed out that any overriding of the Washington precedent would provide an opportunity for an ambitious President, controling foreign relations, to precipitate at will a situation under which reëlection to still another term might reasonably be achieved.

The plight into which Europe has been plunged is cited as illustrating the peril which lurks in indeterminate tenure. And, recalling the Jefferson doctrine of the democratic process of rotation in office, there is the lively possibility always that at the end of a third term a President, again through his appointive power, with a Supreme court molded to his will, would have arrived at dictatorial estate.

There is in addition the general postulation that any departure from the third term precedent, which is as old as government under the constitution, would be a repudiation of a cardinal principle of popular self-government.

Finally there is added to the burden of the conscientious citizen facing the issue the solemn reflection whether it is possible, amid disturbed political and economic conditions, widespread unemployment and great human suffering, sharp cleavage between the classes, and the democratic form of government under attack the world over, to give that thoughtful consideration to a break with the historic past which is implicit in an attempt to overthrow the third term precedent.

The weight of the objections to a third presidential term is to be balanced by the people themselves against the compelling availability of any candidate who may offer himself for a third term, in comparison with a Washington, a Jefferson, a Jackson, and others in the long line of Presidents who have put temptation behind them; and with due consideration being given to the fact that through the entire history of the American government the precedent has remained unbroken.

In the final analysis the decision is in the hands of the people. But before the people pass upon it it is the President who must first make a decision.

OPPOSED BY TRIBUNE

The Chicago Tribune's pronounced opposition to Gen. U. S. Grant as a third term candidate before the Republican national convention of 1880 was evidenced in its editorials of that year. Excerpts from a few of these editorials follow:

● The opposition to General Grant's nomination is not personal, but is based upon the violation of a national precedent involved in such an event, and upon the fear that such violation may alienate popular support in a degree that will defeat the Republicans in the approaching presidential election.—May 19, 1880.

● In the event of General Grant's nomination the opposition to his election will not be directed merely against a third term per se, though that objection will be urged with telling force, but will be based upon the record of his two previous terms. "Is there any promise that a third term under Grant will be an improvement over the two previous terms?" is the question which will confront the people. "Do two bad terms deserve another?" the voters will ask.—May 29, 1880.

● The Republican convention will assume a terrible responsibility by inviting and provoking and defying a deep-rooted and widespread hostility to the election of any third term candidate.—May 30, 1880.

● . . . the Republican convention will deliberately commit hara-kiri if it shall nominate the only candidate against whom there is widespread and pronounced antagonism in the Republican party. General Grant as a third term candidate . . . is the only man who answers this description.—June 1, 1880.

● The greatest objection to the nomination of General Grant has been the overruling hostility of the American people to the violation of the national tradition that no man should hold the office of President beyond two terms, or longer than George Washington held it.—June 3, 1880.

Cantigny—A Corner of the War

Iron Bars, a Party, and a Shell

THE P. C. in the iron trench was located in the second bay west from the Bois de Cantigny. It was a sap in the front of the trench about four and a half feet long at the top and about six feet at the bottom by three and a half feet wide at the top and four and a half at the bottom. The top was flush with the top of the trench. Across the top were laid fifteen to twenty iron posts such as we used for putting up barbed wire. On top nearest the trench was an ordinary board and over the posts and board about a foot and a half of earth. Bigelow, my runner, conceived the idea of digging out the bottom of the P. C. He dug until it was about four feet below the floor of the trench. There was a step on the side about half way down. After he finished one could sit on the ground with no danger of a back blast and nothing to fear but a direct hit either in the well or on the iron bars. It was cramped, but after Bigelow finished it was possible to get three people in it.

One night toward the end of our first eighteen days in that trench James [Sergeant James of the 4th platoon, a close friend of the author] came down to the P. C. We had been figuring on changing the location of some of the wire and I was filling it in on the map of the sector. The night's bombardment was about to start, as we both knew.

The Germans were so damned methodical. I never could make up my mind whether it was worse for us or not. If the Germans didn't act according to the schedule which we had figured out, it was usually a real cause for worry. If they did, we knew almost how many batteries would shell our particular spot and how long the bombardment would last. Time was always of the essence there and I never looked at a clock before or since as often as I did in that sector.

This night the bombardment was according to schedule. It would last for at least an hour. We finished the map and talked about it a few minutes and then started to figure the bombardment.

There were lots of whizzbangs to which we paid no attention. We guessed there were three or four batteries of 77s and one or one and a half batteries of 155s. The guns would move back and forth along the trench into the woods on the left and right and then back again. The number of 77s and 155s falling along that particular seventy-five yards of trench varied from one or two to maybe a dozen or fifteen each minute for two minutes. The whizzbangs would shoot along the top of the parapet wherever they thought there was a machine gun. About one-quarter of the 77s were usually duds and that night was no exception. The 155s were rarely ever duds and their range that night was very accurate. The battery had done its range finding that afternoon on the first bay by the Bois de Cantigny, the next one to us. It had been largely flattened out and a detail had repaired it that evening. It was very exasperating that it would have to be repaired again before morning. A 155 landed in our bay near the further traverse. Well, maybe neither James nor I would have to worry about repairs. We waited for the next one, but it landed across the traverse near the next bay and a couple more further up the trench. We called each other's attention to the obvious fact that the range was pretty accurate and told the sentry to move around to the other side of the traverse.

I was glad that James was there. We had a blanket over the entrance and a candle lit inside. We could look at each other and go on thinking up some story or subject of conversation. In a heavy bombardment when there was no respite one became gradually taut and then practically speechless after a time. But tonight it was not heavy and each time the 155s would pass by us on their way to and from the woods there was a breathing space at least. However, we got down to our final and favorite topic of conversation—the party we would have together in New York. We always seemed to keep it in reserve for such occasions. I suppose that the longer we stayed in the sector, or the severer the bombardment the sooner the topic came up. Very often, of course, we were not together—but by then we had discussed it a good many times.

The 155s were coming back toward us from the Bois de Cantigny. On previous occasions we had gone over the dinner that I was to give James at Delmonico's. The wine and liquor had even been selected. We went on to talk about what we would do after dinner. It was rather interesting and we each had ideas.

A couple of 155s landed in the first bay. It would be our turn next.

James produced a good idea as to how we should spend part of the evening. A dud 77 lands within a couple of feet of us in the traverse and we look at each other and wait for it to explode. It doesn't. We just grin. There is a fierce shriek and a crack over our heads. Dirt falls on us and then we are practically deafened by the roar of the explosion and suffocated with high explosive.

Half the base of a 155 came through the blanket and buried itself above James' head. Later we dug it out. We looked up and saw the sky through the iron bars. The board had been hit and broken. One iron bar was bent where the shell had creased it. The shell had then dived into the corner of the traverse and bay just opposite the P. C. entrance. Fortunately the sentry was still on the other side of the traverse.

Probably there will be fifteen minutes more. We agree they can never do that again—but still the range is very accurate tonight. So we kept glancing at the stars between the iron posts and went on planning the party in New York.

II. THE END

The 14th platoon was an organization that James could well be proud of on the morning of the 18th of July when the division attached at Soissons with the Iron corps of the French army. It was all grand company, with the Foreign Legion on our right.

On the third day of the attack James was in command of the platoon. The battalion was acting as division reserve. I was commanding the company which lay in a partly sunken road northeast of Chaudun farm. On our right, possibly 300 yards and a little in advance, was a hill. About 100 yards in front of us was the line of the 26th infantry. My company was ordered to occupy and hold the hill and allow the 26th to retreat through the position. The 26th was being partly enfiladed. The Germans had control of the air.

It was a glorius summer day. The wheat had ripened and was waving in the wind. Opposite us lay Berzy-Le-Sec on top of a long hill. Far away beyond Berzy-Le-Sec one could see the flashes of rows of German guns on the commanding heights along the Aisne. It was a grand country.

The 4th platoon was on the left and furthest from the hill. There was a large disabled tank in the middle of the company's line, broadside to the front. The platoon commanders assembled. They were two lieutenants and two sergeants. I told them that the 4th platoon would form in artillery formation at ten paces between men and columns. Having formed, each man would turn and thereby keeping the formation, the platoon would march across the front of the company. As each platoon was passed the platoon would execute the same maneuver and follow. Thus there would be a smaller target. It was simple enough. It was simple enough for the German guns to cover the operation. (The company had about sixty casualties in the maneuver, a little less than one-half its strength.)

I walked away a few steps with James. He knew as well as I what it was going to be like, walking in, not through, a barrage. "James, you and the 4th platoon will show the others the way." He smiled, I told him to raise his hand when he was ready and I walked back to the tank.

James signaled. I wondered vaguely as I walked out whether it was a 210 that passed my head and took off the side of the tank. I was to walk out forty paces. It had wounded some men. I wondered how many. As I counted the paces I noticed the shells moving toward me into our line of march. I finished counting, turned and whistled. James walked out and the platoon came into formation. The spacing and alignment were perfect. James whistled again. The men turned and the platoon came toward me.

They were walking in the barrage now. They will be for at least 250 yards, but it can't be helped. The shells all have instantaneous fuses and the air is full of iron. The formation is perfect. I walk across their front to their right to see how the next platoon will make out. I pass James and we smile at each other. The 4th platoon is on parade—and it is a grand platoon! Geroux passes by me and as he looks at me the direct hit of a dud catches him on the shoulder.

The next platoon goes all right and so do the others.

I run back to the 4th platoon. There are many blank places, but the formation is still perfect.

I come around in front, Foley is leading the platoon. James is nowhere to be seen!

So the party in New York would never come off! It had kept each of us alive too many time at Cantigny. I began to feel very tired.

III. MUSIC

We had been relieved from Grivesnes, the next sector north of Cantigny, and were billeted in a little village in the unoccupied area behind the lines. We had just finished the noon mess and there was nothing more to do that afternoon. The day was sunny and warm and still. It was a good day to go for a walk and take off one's clothes and lie in the sun.

The month was June and the smell of the country was very nice. After walking a mile or so across the fields I undressed and fell asleep. I awoke while the sun was still high. I imagined that I was listening to music. Gradually it dawned upon me that it was not a dream and that music was coming from an organ somewhere. About three-quarters of a mile distant, in another little village, I could see the steeple of a church. I decided to dress and investigate.

The church was sandbagged for protection. Its doors were wide open, and I walked in. A French officer was playing the organ with his back to the audience. The audience consisted of soldiers from the 1st Moroccan division and the Foreign Legion, with a sprinkling of French officers and noncoms. About three-quarters of the pews were then occupied. I sat down in a rear pew beside some Moroccans.

The officer played and played and played without once looking around. Obviously he did not know that anybody was listening to the music except himself. I don't pretend to know anything about music, but I do know that he played all kinds of music on that organ and that it seemed to me to be very beautiful. The church began to fill with soldiers. Soon the pews were entirely occupied and men were standing, sitting, or kneeling in the aisle and along the wall at the back. A good many of the soldiers were praying, others were crying, others were staring straight ahead at nothing at all. Every one was perfectly quiet and each newcomer tiptoed in without a sound.

At last the officer stopped and wheeled around. No one moved. It was obvious from the expression on his face that he was astonished. He must also have been astonished at the expressions on the faces of these most hard-bitten men who fought in the greatest regiments of the French army. He took it all in without a word. He turned around and continued to play for at least half an hour more. By then the church was almost without standing room. He stopped playing and said very nicely that he was too tired to play any more that afternoon, but that if we liked he would play again at 2 o'clock the next afternoon. We all rose to thank him as he walked out. He also had been deeply moved. I arrived at the church before 2 o'clock the next afternoon. It was impossible to get inside the door.

NEXT SUNDAY—Beginning of the end of war!

● VIRGINIA BRUCE, whose real name is Briggs, had a long struggle in Hollywood before getting a break. She wanted to help her family financially, but finally had to go to New York, where she appeared in several stage productions—one of which was Ziegfeld's "Smiles." Called back to Hollywood for a screen test, she made it with John Gilbert, fell in love with him, was married, and retired to private life. After her divorce from Gilbert she returned to the screen, and her first important rôle was that of Jenny Lind in "The Mighty Barnum." She is now married to J. Walter Ruben, film director. She's 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighs 130 pounds. Born in Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 29, 1910.

Diary of a Trans-Atlantic Flight

hours 29 minutes. We went ashore, filed our news copy, and registered at the hotel. The early evening was spent in trying to assure ourselves that the dispatches were sent. The rest was spent in seeing Lisbon's historic edifices. I was diverted by the hospitality of Francisco Dos Santos Cordiero, Fernando Luiz de Oliveira Pessa, and Henrique T. Leotte Tavares, three gentlemen of Lisbon, until time for the Clipper's departure.

2:14 a. m.—Let me remind you this is Chicago time. It's 8:14 a. m. here, and we have just risen from the river. We're in a slow turn, heading back for the coastline. Our route from here takes us twenty miles out to sea and then northward along the coasts of Portugal and Spain to Cape Finisterre. At that northwestern "elbow" we turn due east along the Spanish shores on the Bay of Biscay. When we reach the French border we turn southeast and cross France, paralleling the Franco-Spanish border until we reach the Mediterranean. It will take about seven hours. Now I'm going to get the sleep I missed in Lisbon.

5 a. m.—It's a beautiful bright day. Broken clouds occasionally hide the shore we are now skirting closely. We've turned east and are passing along a coast with fine yellow beaches, many white villas with green and red tiled roofs, and pleasant harbors. I watch Bilbao, familiar from dispatches of the Spanish war, slide past us. It has a good harbor, and many freighters are bound both in and out.

6:20 a. m.—We've just reached Biarritz and turned inland. The Pyrenees are to our right. We see the beginning of the range at the coast, but thick clouds now shut them out completely. It should take us about three hours to get to Marseilles from here. All of it will be over land except the last few miles. None of us worries, however, for our four engines are purring softly, obviously taking things easily. There are four, remember, and besides it's quite safe for passengers to make a forced landing in a boat even on land. The boat might be scratched, but that would be about all.

9 a. m.—We're twenty minutes out from Marseilles. We've had heavy clouds beneath us for the last two hours and have seen no more of France or Spain than we did of the Atlantic ocean. As it happens, the clouds are broken here and we are letting down from 8,000 feet—again our cruising height—through one of the holes.

9:22 a. m.—We have just alighted in Marseilles harbor at Marignane air base, that is both civil and military. Now the engines are stopped and we are drifting to the landing stage. Captain Culbertson is sailing the big flying boat as though it had sails instead of wings. Properly handled, it is slipping inside a breakwater and being blown to a mooring. French navy boats are ready to take us ashore. Our elapsed time from Port Washington to our European terminal has been 42 hours 28 minutes. Our arrival at Marseilles is almost an anticlimax after the ocean crossing.

10:40 a. m.—It wasn't an anticlimax after all. Here we are in the air once more. We're in a trimotored Dewoitine airliner belonging to Air France. Fifteen of us have been virtually kidnaped to the popping of champagne corks, and we're being flown up to Paris. It is unexpected, but the French are very positive that we must go.

12:12—More champagne. We're in the Lyons airport bar while mechanics are filling the tanks. It almost floored the lot of us when our pilot, a weathered, chunky little man, cheerfully followed us in and stands here drinking with us. Apart at one end of the bar the mechanic and radio operator are sipping brandies. None of that for our domestic air line crews at home. They're not supposed to have a drink for twenty-four hours before a trip is taken into the air.

12:36—We're in the air. Almost without a takeoff run. The tail never came off the ground until the whole plane lifted off. I made the mistake of telling the pilot I was astonished at the performance of his airplane, and I think he was trying to astonish me still more. He did.

2:00—We've been skating through thin clouds almost constantly since leaving Lyons. From what I can see France is beautifully rolling below us, with almost the entire countryside in cultivated fields. There are little clumps of timber scattered widely. There is only one difference. There are no section lines, as in the United States.

I'm just beginning to realize what distance we have covered, and our speed. If we land in Paris in the next fifty minutes we will have flown from New York in just under forty-eight hours. It's miraculous. Only the stunt flights of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Howard Hughes have bettered that time. And we're riding scheduled airliners. We've really seen how the long-range plane shrinks the world. This is becoming an exciting finish, when I'd thought the only thrill had been at Lisbon.

2:13 p. m.—The city of Paris is below us. Off to the east are the Eiffel tower, the twin towers of Notre Dame, the Seine. Paris, we are here. Le Bourget airport is just ahead. I have an idea of the way Lindbergh felt—but no real sense of achievement, for, along with the rest of our party, I have been only a passenger riding in real comfort.

2:24 p. m.—We are on the ground. I can't believe it, but the huge airport building looks suspiciously like the photographs of Le Bourget that are in our reference room. There's an Imperial Airways airplane loading passengers for London, and the array of military planes—fighters and bombers away off across the airport from us—have French insignia on their wings. It must be Paris. We've done it in 47 hours 30 minutes exactly since leaving the water of Long Island sound.

The Amazing Chemistry of Common Sugar

● This is the second of two articles on the amazing chemistry of sugar. Last week was told the rôle sugar has played in history.

By GREER WILLIAMS

MAN EATS his sugar in many forms. There are more than 100 chemical compounds known as sugar. All belong to that great family of foods known as carbohydrates.

Carbohydrates are the foremost of the three major groups of foods. The others are proteins and fats. Carbohydrate means a chemical compound of carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen. The latter two elements are always in the proportion found in water, of which the chemical formula is H_2O, meaning two parts of hydrogen to every one of oxygen.

Carbohydrates are a major fuel of the living body, in the long run producing most of its energy. They are commonly divided into sugars and starches. The sugars alone account for 13 per cent of the human body's energy. Much of the remainder comes from starch, the most abundant of the carbohydrates.

Proteins are the tissue builders, and thus are found abundantly in meat. In an elementary way they differ from carbohydrates only in containing nitrogen as well as carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen.

Fats are more closely related to the carbohydrates, differing only in their proportionate molecular structure and in general containing less oxygen. They form a reserve energy supply in the body and also insulation. Fats and carbohydrates may be converted from one to the other physiologically, depending on whether reserve is being stored or used.

Carbohydrates are formed in green plants by the action of the sun's rays on certain substances in the leaves. Exactly how this takes place is not known, but chemists theorize that the process starts with carbon dioxide and water.

There are two general types of sugar, the chemical proportions of which are $C_6H_{12}O_6$ and $C_{12}H_{22}O_{11}$. The first is called a simple sugar, while the second might be called a double sugar. It may be added that saccharin, which is estimated to be from 300 to 500 times sweeter than sugar, is not a sugar and not a food. It is a product of coal tar and is sometimes used when sugar is scarce or the body will not tolerate sugar, as in diabetes.

Glucose and fructose are simple sugars. They contain the same number of atoms of carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen, but are not the same, because their atoms are linked together in different patterns.

Glucose means grape sugar, the name arising from the fact that grapes contain up to 20 per cent of this type of sugar. It is also called corn sugar, its principal source being corn starch. The corn grain contains from 9 to 12 per cent glucose. Another name is dextrose.

Fructose means fruit sugar. It is found in many fruits, but its biggest source is honey, forming more than half of the solid matter. It is also called levulose.

Glucose and fructose combine to form a double sugar, sucrose. Sucrose means cane sugar and is the same kind that is found in sugar beets. Many vegetables and fruits contain sucrose, however — for example, pineapples and carrots.

Sugar cane contains an average of 13 per cent sucrose; sugar beets, 16 per cent. Sucrose also forms the bulk of maple sugar, the sap of the sugar maple tree containing about 3.5 per cent.

There are two other double sugars. Each has the same composition as sucrose, $C_{12}H_{22}O_{11}$, but in a different pattern. One is lactose, or milk sugar, found in the whey of milk. Human milk contains 6 or 7 per cent lactose; cows' milk, 4 or 5 per cent. The other is maltose, or malt sugar, found in cereal grains and malt products.

Glucose is the key member of the sugars and starches. It is not as sweet as sucrose, but more serviceable. It is the form to which natural digestion changes sugars and starches for immediate circulation in the blood. Oxidation of glucose produces more than half of the body energy used. Surpluses are converted into glycogen, or animal starch. If the excess becomes too great, glucose becomes fat.

Because of the constant turnover, however, only one-tenth of 1 per cent of glucose may be found in the blood at any one time.

The vital rôle of carbohydrates in the diet may be seen by a study of the proportions of the twenty or so elements found in the human body. The first six run this way:

Oxygen	65%
Carbon	18%
Hydrogen	10%
Nitrogen	3%
Calcium	1.5%
Phosphorus	1%

(Acme photos.)

We see that carbohydrates contain the elements comprising 93 per cent of the body. The fuel values of various types of sugar range as follows:

	Calories per lb.
Sorgo sirup	1,186
Maple sugar	1,295
Cane molasses	1,300
Honey	1,480
Brown sugar	1,723
Granulated sugar	1,814
Corn sugar	1,814

These may be compared with the following representative types of food:

	Calories per lb.
Butter	3,300
Walnuts	3,012
Peanuts	2,490
Navy beans	1,564
White bread	1,182
Roast beef	1,070
Roast pork	874
Eggs	672
Chicken	492
Peas	460
Potatoes	385
Cherries	310
Apples	290
Oranges	230
Spinach	110

Since the refining process eliminates the minerals and vitamins found in varying amounts in these foods, dietitians do not consider sugar a well balanced food. In addition, too much sugar upsets the digestive function of the stomach.

Authorities on food chemistry have expressed alarm at the steady increase of sugar consumption in the United States. They say that individuals are naturally inclined to eat too much sugar because it is a "bait" food.

The average daily calory requirement of Americans is 2,000. Sugar supplies about 500, or 25 per cent of this.

Sugar plays an important rôle in the preservation of foods. All methods of food preserving and canning aim at the destruction or inhibition of the bacteria which otherwise would grow rapidly in the food and decompose it. The principal modern preservative methods employ cold and heat.

Cold usually means refrigeration, the food temperature being reduced to the freezing point or below, where most bacteria cannot grow, although many continue to live. In the last few years quick freezing has been developed and widely used. It has the distinct advantage of preserving much of the food's fresh flavor.

Heat is used in the ordinary canning process. The food, usually vegetable or fruit, is packed in tin cans virtually raw and then sealed after the air has been exhausted. The cans are next heated for varying periods, depending on the contents, to sterilize the food. The fact that air cannot get to the food prevents further bacterial development from spoiling it.

Many sugar solutions are susceptible to fermentation. Nevertheless, three parts sugar to one of water forms a medium in which fermentation or other bacterial growth will not take place if it is protected from air. Its preservative quality is aided by the natural acids of fruits.

Sugar is mainly used in preserving fruits and fruit juices for this reason, and because it blends with their natural sweetness. The sugar in the fruit itself is not enough to serve as a preservative. Most fruits can be dried, however, and preserved indefinitly without addition of sugar. All their own sugars are retained, water being the only loss. Food bacteria for the most part cannot grow in the absence of water.

Sugar is not needed in the modern methods of food preservation already mentioned, sterilization, and quick freezing. Some highly acid fruits, such as rhubarb and cranberries, can be packed in cold water without use of heat before or after sealing.

Salting is one of the most ancient methods of preserving foods, but, like sugar, its use is limited, since it must be used in such quantities that it changes the flavor of the food. Salted foods, moreover, are less digestible. The food, usually meat or fish, is immersed in brine or rubbed with salt, which draws the moisture from the tissues into a solution.

Chemists have been unable to determine why sugar or salt has the effect of preventing bacteria from multiplying and decomposing food, but the principle of action is presumed to be the same. Some believe their action to be akin to drying.

Sugar cane is a giant grass which grows in warm, moist climates. The sugar is extracted from the juice of the stems, which resemble those of corn. In the modern refinery the juice is separated from the fibers by diluting shredded cane with water as it passes through successive rollers under great pressure.

The watered juice is heated with quicklime and other chemicals to neutralize the natural acidity, which would decompose the sucrose into glucose and fructose if not prevented. The solution is then filtered and evaporated, leaving a mixture of sugar crystals and mother liquor, or molasses. The mother liquor is removed by centrifugal force, a raw or brown sugar remaining. Further refining produces white sugar, which contains nearly 100 per cent sucrose.

The sugar beet belongs to the same family as the red garden beet. Its white root reaches a much larger size, however. Sucrose is removed by a diffusion process in which the shredded roots are placed in a series of tanks through which warm water is passed. A saturated solution of impure sucrose is thus obtained. The juice is heated with chemicals, filtered, evaporated, and the sucrose crystalized from the mother liquor.

Since both are practically pure sucrose, there is no difference in the quality of refined cane and beet sugar. Whereas raw cane sugar has an attractive flavor, however, raw beet sugar has a disagreeable odor and taste, which before the refining process was fully developed contributed to the widespread prejudice in favor of cane sugar. Now, however, there is no distinction in the refined products.

The cane and beet, with some competition in recent years from corn, are the great commercial sources of sugar. It may be extracted experimentally, however, from any fruit, vegetable, or grain that contains it. The refining cost is decisive in commerce, and for this reason sugar from sorghum cane has not proved profitable.

Sugar from the sap of trees, such as the American sugar maple or the sugar palm of India, is easily obtained by boiling down the sap, but is not overly abundant. Since 1926 Germany has developed a process of producing sugar from the wood itself, it being claimed that an acre of forest will yield as much as an acre of beets. The product is glucose.

Mostly About Dogs

By BOB BECKER

Obedience Is New Show Factor

These two black cockers of the same litter are named McTague's Gallant Lady and McTague's Black Bitsey.

MORE THAN 265 dogs, representing forty-four different breeds, have won the title of C. D. (companion dog) in American dog shows. These dogs have been taught to sit down on command, lie down, stay where they are told, walk at heel either on or off the leash, and come when called. In other words, they have been taught obedience and good manners—two things that make these pets more of a pleasure in the home.

The ownership of good dogs is increasing, dog shows and field trials are attracting larger entries each year, and now interest in obedience work is increasing so rapidly that obedience tests soon may be one of the biggest features of American dog shows.

In other years many dog fanciers were content just to own good dogs, but now they want these pets also to be properly trained. We were interested in the remark of one dog owner during an obedience test sponsored by this department: "I have owned good dogs for years and have won my share of ribbons in shows. But I believe I am through with dogs that can win only in breed competition. I get more of a kick out of this obedience work than showing a dog in the ring. From now on I am going to train dogs of my favorite breed and compete in the obedience classes."

Obedience tests are offering a rebuttal to the person who says that a show dog can't be trained and win in obedience classes! At the last show we attended a champion Doberman won the utility obedience class. A number of breed champions already have won their companion dog titles. Eventually a dog owner will achieve a goal which has not yet been reached—the ownership of a dog that has won bench show, obedience, and field trial titles. A number of dogs have achieved two of these awards.

Data on obedience tests released by the American Kennel club proves that any type of dog may be properly trained. Working dogs, such as German shepherds and Doberman pinschers, are the type most often trained, 152 individual dogs in this group having won the companion dog title. Nonsporting dogs, such as standard poodles, Dalmatians, and Boston terriers, rank second in this respect with 47 C. D. titles. Thirty dogs in the sporting group (which includes setters and spaniels) have won the first "diploma" in obedience; terriers rank fourth with 21 C. D.s, hounds fifth with 13, and toys sixth with 2.

The schipperke is a European breed of handy size and easy to keep in a home. This show specimen from the Jet-O kennels is Ch. Jet-O Doleen of Kelso.

A question often asked about obedience training is this: How can I go about training my dog? There are several ways. The easiest is to turn your dog over to a qualified trainer and have him do the job. It won't take a great deal of time to teach a dog the routine required for competition in the first obedience class (novice A). Moreover, this training (walk at heel, sit on command, lie down, come when called, etc.) is just what every dog needs to be a well behaved animal on the street and in the home.

The second way is to join a training class. Such a class really is a club composed of dog owners who are interested in training their dogs. Usually there is a membership fee and yearly dues. The members meet at least once a week, bringing their dogs to the meeting. A competent trainer acts as the instructor and shows the owners how to handle their dogs during the training session. Then it is up to the owner to give his dog a daily lesson at home. Every large city has one or more of these clubs.

The third way of training your dog is through the use of books on this subject.

DOG NOTES

An intelligent sheep-herding dog owned by an Oregon rancher recently proved that it knew what to do in an emergency. The dog's master died when his clothes caught fire from a tree stump he had ignited. The dog drove the sheep to the ranch yard, then led a party of searchers to find the man's body.

A Michigan dog warden has invented a new kind of trap which captures dogs alive without injuring them. The traps are used in farm areas where marauding dogs bother live stock. The trap is a large wire cage with an entrance which closes when the dog tugs at a piece of meat suspended in the rear.

These members of a training club have told their German shepherds to lie down and stay until called.

KNOW YOUR CAMERA

By ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph. D.

The light of the fire was supplemented by flash in this campfire picture by John Temple, Bloomington, Ill.

Any Camera Can Produce Good Night Pictures

ANY KIND of camera can make good night pictures, even the simplest box. And practically any kind of illumination is good enough for night pictures, provided there is any light at all present. Of course, if the light is extremely weak you will have to give very long exposures which may tax your patience, but there are hundreds of interesting night pictures which you can take with exposures ranging from one second to ten minutes.

The range of subjects for night shots is practically unlimited, and all have the makings of fascinating pictures. From the bright lights of the White Way and floodlighted buildings to the reflections of a solitary street lantern on wet pavement or the outlines of a great industrial plant silhouetted against a dark sky, night pictures are full of charm and interest.

Contrary to general belief, few pictures are easier to take than dramatic night shots. Use a fast panchromatic film—fast enough to cut down on exposure time, and panchromatic because these films are sensitive to red light, which forms a large part of artificial illumination.

Only on very rare occasions and in brightest light will you be able to make snapshots at night, even if you own a camera with an f:2 or f:1.5 lens. In the majority of cases you will have to give time exposures. Place your camera on a solid support to avoid movement and consequent blurring of your pictures.

After you have got your subject in sharp focus, open the shutter and make your "guess" exposure. A few trials—and probably errors—will teach you how much to expose. Beyond that there are a few other general rules to follow. If you take night pictures on the street, people and cars may pass before your lens. You need not worry about the people, for their images will not register on the film. Cars with headlights are a graver problem. Moving headlights will show up as streaks of light on your film. To avoid this effect, cover your lens with your hand while cars are passing, or close the shutter. Some very interesting pictures of street trafic at night can be had by allowing the lights of passing cars to register as hundreds of fine light streaks.

Dimly lighted streets, whether in residential sections, in the slums, or near the water front, give very effective night pictures, especially if the pavement is wet after a rain. Try to include one direct, unshielded light in your picture for increased contrast, but be careful not to have this light in the foreground. You can create interesting silhouettes by placing a person directly in line between your lens and a strong light source. The light will form a halo around the dark contours of your subject and will show just enough of the general setting if you expose correctly for detail in the darker portions of your picture. And this you should always do when making night pictures, allowing the highlights to take care of themselves.

Among the most charming and easiest night pictures are fireworks. For these you don't even need a tripod. Just open your shutter and point your camera toward the section of the sky where you expect the rockets to burst. And if a single burst does not seem to fill your picture, wait for the next one. Similarly, you can create interesting montage effects of lighted electric signs by making several exposures on one piece of film. If you own a more expensive camera with built-in device to prevent double exposure you will have to forego this latter effect.

Campfires and beach picnics are fascinating subjects for night pictures, but you will have to resort to some trickery to create the effect of fire, as the fire itself gives too weak a light for exposures of reasonable length. You can place a flash bulb near the fire—behind some object to shield the lens from direct light—open the shutter, and set off the bulb; or you can have somebody throw a small package of flash powder into the campfire, taking good care to avoid accidents.

All of which goes to show that taking night pictures is full of photographic thrills and adventures which no amateur should forego.

LENS NOTES

Movie cameramen frequently spurn range finders and use ordinary tape measures for focusing. You, too, will get sharper pictures when using portrait attachments on your lens if you carry a tape measure with you to determine the exact distance of your subject from the camera.

Keep your negatives in transparent envelopes for protection against dust, scratches, and finger prints. Number the envelopes and index your subjects for ready reference. This system will help you find the negative you are looking for and eliminate the need of running through many negatives, which suffer with every handling.

You can make an efficient print dryer for matte prints from a roll of corrugated cardboard. Place a piece of cheesecloth on the cardboard, put the prints face down on the cloth, cover them with a strip of blotting paper, and roll up. Circulating warm air will speed up the drying process.

Lunch—the Meal of the Day in Summer

By MARY MEADE

BECAUSE you like salads, because fresh fruits and vegetables are everywhere, because fluffy desserts are in order, lunch is the meal of the day in summer.

There is no main dish more appropriate for hot weather consumption than a salad, and no salad simpler than a stuffed tomato. Shredded cabbage and cottage cheese combinations are favorite stuffings. Cottage cheese combined with chopped cucumber and radishes is delicious. Or try diced cucumber and minced chives mixed with the cottage cheese you put in that tomato.

Dainty fingers of toast, sprinkled with grated cheese and popped under the broiler just long enough to melt the cheese a bit, make a perfect salad accompaniment. And here's a cake with a secret heart of gold—golden orange Bavarian cream.

ORANGE BAVARIAN SURPRISE CAKE
(Ten-inch.)

- 3 cups all-purpose flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 12 egg yolks (1 cup)
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons lemon extract
- 2 cups sugar
- 1 cup hot water

Sift flour and baking powder together four times. Add salt and flavoring to yolks and beat with rotary beater until lemon colored. Add sugar and hot water alternately, beating after each addition. Add flour mixture, about one-quarter at a time. Beat well after each addition. Turn into ten-inch ungreased paper-lined tube pan and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for about one hour, or until done. Let cake hang in inverted pan until cool. Then remove center, four to five inches across, with a sharp knife. Fill with chilled Bavarian cream and store in refrigerator.

ORANGE BAVARIAN CREAM FILLING

- 2 tablespoons granulated gelatin
- ½ cup cold water
- ½ cup boiling water
- 1 cup sugar
- ½ cup ice water
- 1½ cups orange juice
- Grated rind of one orange
- ¼ cup lemon juice
- 2 or 3 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Soften gelatin in cold water. Add along with sugar to boiling water and stir until dissolved. Add ice water, fruit juices, and grated rind. Pour into bowl to chill in refrigerator. When jelly begins to congeal, whip until light and fluffy and fold in stiffly beaten egg whites.

This fat little tomato is stuffed with cottage cheese, cucumber, and chives. Finger sandwiches and milk complete the meal.

Soak Yourself—Not the Rich

(Shigeta-Wright photo.)

By ELEANOR NANGLE

IT'S A GRAND American habit, the one of hopping in and out of tub or shower every day or a couple of times a day. You can't possibly bathe too often. But you can lose a lot of the cleansing, relaxing, and beautifying effects if you bathe too quickly!

Stick to your daily bracer by all means. But at least once or twice a week indulge in a bath that's what the younger fry refer to as a "super-dooper."

Fill the tub with warm water almost to the brim. Use the "latheriest" soap you can find—and the coarsest washcloth. Before you pop into the tub take time to get at all the little tasks you've been postponing. Do your toenails. If there's much down on arms and legs this is the time to use your razor or depilatory. Cream your face and your neck. Look at the elbows. Are they scrubby? Give them a good creaming and the scrubbing that is to come will take care of the rest. If you use a face mask this is the ideal time to apply it, leaving it on while you're in the tub.

Use a bath perfume. Its effect is mostly psychological, but it's extremely swell. It can be oil, salts, or essence, and the scent is a matter of choice.

Scrub every square inch. When you've finished, relax. Lie back and reflect on what you'd do if you inherited a million, sniff the lovely perfume, and draw a mental veil on all your troubles.

Just before you feel that you're in danger of drifting off to sleep, run cold water into the tub. Not too much, if it's a hot day. Too cold water in your bath will set up a reaction that will make you hotter than ever later on. Pop out when it's tepid, rub down with cologne, dust with powder—and you'll feel like a cool queen, remote from a grubby world!

Gems of American Eloquence

● American eloquence has played an important part in the history of our country. From a long list of famous speeches The Tribune is selecting gems of American eloquence which are being presented in this, the Graphic Section, every Sunday. The content of these speeches is important both historically and politically. Men and boys learning to speak in public will find in them helpful lessons. Speakers and writers can learn a great deal from studying their style. This is the eighth of the series.

WHEN Henry Woodfin Grady, a Georgia newspaper man, spoke before the New England society on the occasion of its eighty-first anniversary celebration in New York, Dec. 22, 1886, he delivered what has since been accepted as one of the finest verbal pictures of the Confederate side of the Civil war. This excerpt is taken from that speech, titled "The New South":

"Let me picture to you the footsore Confederate soldier as, buttoning up in his faded gray jacket the parole which was to bear testimony to his children of his fidelity and faith, he turned his face southward from Appomattox in April, 1865. Think of him as ragged, half-starved, heavy-hearted, enfeebled by want and wounds; having fought to exhaustion, he surrenders his gun, wrings the hands of his comrades in silence, and, lifting his tear-stained and pallid face for the last time to the graves that dot the old Virginia hills, pulls his gray cap over his brow and begins the slow and painful journey. What does he find—let me ask you, who went to your homes eager to find in the welcome you had justly earned full payment for four years' sacrifice—what does he find when, having followed the battle-stained cross against overwhelming odds, dreading death not half so much as surrender, he reaches the home he left so prosperous and beautiful? He finds his house in ruins, his farm devastated, his slaves free, his stock killed, his barns empty, his trade destroyed, his money worthless; his social system, feudal in its magnificence, swept away; his people without law or legal status, his comrades slain, and the burdens of others heavy on his shoulders. Crushed by defeat, his very traditions are gone; without money, credit, employment, material, or training; and, besides all this, confronted with the gravest problem that ever met human intelligence—the establishing of a status for the vast body of his liberated slaves.

"What does he do—this hero in gray with a heart of gold? Does he sit down in sullenness and despair? Not for a day. Surely God, who had stripped him of his prosperity, inspired him in his adversity. As ruin was never before so overwhelming, never was restoration swifter. The soldier stepped from the trenches into the furrow; horses that had charged Federal guns marched before the plow, and fields that ran red with human blood in April were green with the harvest in June; women reared in luxury cut up their dresses and made breeches for their husbands, and, with a patience and heroism that fit women always as a garment, gave their hands to work. There was little bitterness in all this. Cheerfulness and frankness prevailed. Bill Arp struck the keynote when he said, 'Well, I killed as many of them as they did of me, and now I am going to work.' [Laughter and applause.] Or the soldier returning home after defeat, and roasting some corn by the roadside, who made the remark to his comrades: 'You may leave the south if you want to, but I am going to Sandersville, kiss my wife, and raise a crop, and if the Yankees fool with me any more I will whip 'em again.' [Renewed applause.] I want to say to General Sherman—who is considered an able man in our parts, though some people think he is a kind of care less man about fire—that from the ashes he left us in 1864 w have raised a brave and beauti ful city; that somehow or other we have caught the sunshine i the bricks and mortar of ou homes and have builded therei not one ignoble prejudice o memory. [Applause.]

"The new south is enamore of her new work. Her soul i stirred with the breath of a new life. The light of a grander da is falling fair on her face. Sh is thrilling with the conscious ness of growing power and pros perity. As she stands upright full-statured, and equal amon the people of the earth, breath ing the keen air and looking ou upon the expanding horizon, sh understands that her emancipa tion came because in the inscru table wisdom of God her hones purpose was crossed and he brave armies were beaten."

"The New South" could hard ly help being a remarkabl speech. It was delivered afte the Civil war by a southerner t northerners. Its subject was th beaten Confederacy. It wa written by a man who, whateve he wrote or said, thought i terms of audiences and speeche

This speech may seem to u nowadays to be overwritten. Bu it has, in spite of changin speech styles, humor, human i terest, and the emotional driv of a powerful conviction. Whe Grady delivered "The Ne South" it was an extremely e fective speech. Today, after th speech has done its work, mo people read it as part of the li erature—one might almost sa poetry—of America.—Commen by Martin Maloney of Nort western university school o speech.

HEADACHE strains your NERVES

● When you have a headache, you want two things: fast relief from pain—a let-up of the nervous strain associated with headache. Bromo-Seltzer gives you both. Tests by a group of doctors proved this.

Seversky—like millions—prefers Bromo-Seltzer for headache.* He says: "It helps me promptly—eases headache, nervous strain." Prove this yourself—take Bromo-Seltzer! Keep it at home! At drugstores—soda fountains.

3 THINGS YOU DESIRE NOW IN NEW SHAMPOO

Sparkle for even dry hair, manageability, with no scalp irritation, are all 3 now possible with an amazing new shampoo discovery!

HAVE you ever gazed in envy at some other woman and said to yourself, "Why wasn't I born with hair like that?" But don't blame your Fate. Just read on carefully and discover how old-style shampoos may be cheating your hair of its natural beauty. What's more important, your hair has such an electric effect on the rest of your make-up.

Picture yourself entering a roomful of people. Because of a new discovery in Halo Shampoo your hair now dances with dazzling highlights. It casts subtle overtones on to your skin, giving your complexion softer, more transparent color. You read in the eyes of every man around that the total effect is perfect!

Now why couldn't old-style shampoos do this? Because old-style shampoos so often leave an unrinsable film of soap or oil to actually dull the hair and cover up its natural brilliance. That's why women used to need a lemon or vinegar rinse. Why your hair so often looked dull and dead, stringy and unmanageable.

How lucky for all women that a scientist made this discovery now in Halo Shampoo—a way to make rich, creamy shampoo lather without the use of either soap or oil.

Here at last is the perfect shampoo for dry, oily or normal hair. One shampoo with Halo demonstrates perfectly how it removes all trace of dull film left by old-style shampoos. How radiant and full of luster it leaves your hair, eliminating any need for lemon or vinegar rinse. How silky-soft and manageable it leaves even "wild" hair. How clean and fragrant your scalp, without irritation. In fact, even loose, flaky dandruff is safely removed.

Buy Halo from any drug, department or 10¢ store in the 10¢, 50¢ or $1.00 size. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau.

CRISP to the last spoonful!

Copr. 1939 by Kellogg Company

Delicious . . . totally different! They stay crunchy in milk or cream!

● Here's a cereal that can put an edge on the laziest breakfast appetite. Youngsters—grown-ups—and in-betweens are all applauding Kellogg's Rice Krispies!

It's because of the rich, persuasive flavor that is packed into every golden-brown atom of them. It's because of the way Rice Krispies can ride a sea of milk or cream . . . and still stay crunchy-crisp to the last spoonful.

Different? Yes, Rice Krispies are really different. So mouth-watering, tempting. For they're made in an entirely different way. Not flaked . . . not shredded. They're created by "oven-popping" (a Kellogg patented process!) and toasting premium quality, American-grown "Blue Rose" rice.

The lasting crispness of this famous cereal is protected by Kellogg's new KEL-LINER, the only inner-wrap completely "Waxtite" heat-sealed at both top and bottom. For a breakfast that "rings the bell" with all the family, order Kellogg's Rice Krispies from your grocer today!

NOT FLAKED! NOT SHREDDED! They're "oven-popped" by Kellogg's Patented Process. Rice Krispies are absolutely unique in form . . . utterly distinct from every other breakfast cereal. Product and process are protected by United States Letters PATENT NOS. 1,925,267; 1,832,813.

TOP-FLIGHT TOBACCO MAN
"The finest tobacco of all time—that's what we've had in recent crops! And Luckies always buy the cream of the crop," says Jack Rogers, tobacco auctioneer and a Lucky Strike smoker for seven years
HAVE YOU TRIED A LUCKY LATELY? Luckies are better than ever because new methods developed by the United States Government have helped farmers grow finer, lighter tobacco in the past several years. As independent tobacco experts like Jack Rogers point out, Luckies have always bought the Cream of the Crop. Aged from 2 to 4 years, these finer tobaccos are in Luckies today. Try them for a week. Then you'll know why sworn records show that among independent tobacco experts—auctioneers, warehousemen and buyers—Luckies have twice as many exclusive smokers as have all other cigarettes combined!
